

RETAKING VIERVILLE

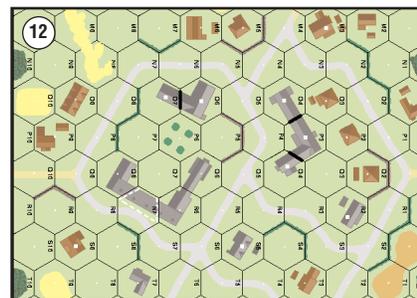

JDJ 1.1 DESIGNED BY JOHN D. JOHNSON

VICTORY CONDITIONS: The Americans win at game end if there are no good order German MMC in buildings P3 and R6.

VIERVILLE, FRANCE, 7 JUNE 1944:

The day after D-Day, the 101st Airborne found itself embroiled in a two fold effort: consolidating its units which were scattered over Normandy, and establishing a firm eastern perimeter to protect the American landing at Utah beach. Vierville which lay a few miles inland from Utah beach had been liberated by American units on D-Day. Vierville was a major traffic thoroughfare since the southwesterly road which passed through Vierville led from Utah Beach to the German strongpoint of St. Come du Mont. On the morning of June 7, elements of 2nd Battalion, 506th PIR moved out from Vierville towards St. Come du Mont, leaving Vierville virtually unoccupied. The Germans took this opportunity to launch a piecemeal counterattack on Vierville in hopes of cutting the road from Utah Beach to St. Come du Mont.

Only hexrows M-T on board 12 are in play

SSR:

- EC are moderate with no wind at start. Kindling is NA.
- Germans do not have PF capability.
- Gullies do not exist. All gully hexes are grain hexes instead.
- German forces may not enter hexrows M or N during the first turn of play.
- As a reminder to new players, reinforcements may enter the board via advance during the Advance Phase (as opposed to movement in the Movement Phase) during their respective turn of entry.

AFTERMATH:

Small units from the 1st Battalion, 506th PIR rushed to Vierville and threw themselves into a pitched battle with the Germans. The tide of battle changed several times as each side received reinforcements. Ultimately, airborne firepower and determination proved too much for the Germans, who gave up their brief hold on Vierville after a tough fight.

PLAYTEST REQUEST:

If you playtest this scenario, please let me know the experience level of the players. I'd be interested in finding out if the scenario is balanced when two relatively inexperienced players play it, but unbalanced when two experienced players play it (or vice versa). Any and all suggestions are welcome.

DESIGNER'S NOTES:

In designing this scenario, I had one major goal: to create a fun, fast, all infantry "beginner" scenario. For years, I have searched for a great "beginner" scenario, but have never really been satisfied with those that are out there. I wanted a scenario where both sides got good troops and had an opportunity to move and attack. I think that the reinforcements that each player receives in the each of the first three turns gives each players a feel for the harried, fluid nature of the engagements in Normandy both during and immediately after D-Day.

The inspiration for this scenario comes from Donald Burgett's book, "Currahee". Mr. Burgett was a member of the 506th PIR, and participated in the fight for Vierville on June 7. In his account, he describes a pitched battle in which both sides received continual reinforcements, and in which Waffen SS troops reinforced the initial wave of German attackers. It is possible that Mr. Burgett confused Von Heydte's paratroopers from the 6th Parachute Regiment with Waffen SS soldiers. Von Heydte's paratroopers were definitely counterattacking in the Vierville area, while the closest SS unit (12th SS Panzer) was several miles east on June 7 and was attempting to counterattack the British beachheads. I consulted a variety of other sources, but was unable to verify Mr. Burgett's account that SS troops participated in the battle. In the interest of fun, I've used both SS and German paratroopers in my scenario. In the interest of simplicity (and consistent with Mr. Burgett's account), I have not given the Germans PF capability. Also in the interest of simplicity, I have omitted the OBA and German cavalry reinforcements described in Mr. Burgett's account.
