THE SCORE

ALL THE WORLD'S A FRICKIN' STAGE

The director slept with half the cast, your lighting designer is homicidal and that bastard from the Daily News just panned the show in his column. You'll be lucky on opening night if the cast remembers their lines, nobody mentions the Scottish Play and the scenery doesn't fall down mid-performance. But hey, the art is all that's important, right?

Break A Leg! is a tribute to the grand traditions and superstitions of the Theatre – from the casting couch to the Great White Way.

MOVIE NIGHT

Waiting for Guffman, Slings & Arrows, Extras, Noises Off, An Awfully Big Adventure

A SPECIAL NOTE

Special thanks to all the theatres we have worked at over the years that have given us inspiration for this Playset. Almost everything in here may have actually happened to one or both of us during our time working onstage and backstage, including the big box of swords with no lock on it and the severed finger.

Also thanks to one particular production of Uncle Vanya and to the theater departments at Columbia College and Northwestern University for twisting us into the thespians we are today.
