INSTRUCTIONS

Cutting: Cut the figures along the dotted yellow lines. DO NOT cut on the solid lines – these are the fold lines.

Folding: The best way to fold the figures is to start by scoring along each fold line. Use a letter opener, coin or similar object; "mark" along a straight-edge to indent the fold lines on each figure. Then place the fold line over a table edge and bend. This will give a clean and accurate fold.

If you use a table edge without scoring first, the fold may not go exactly where you want it. It may be easiest to score each card before cutting it apart.

Assembly: A finished figure has a front, back and base. You may assemble figures either temporarily or permanently.

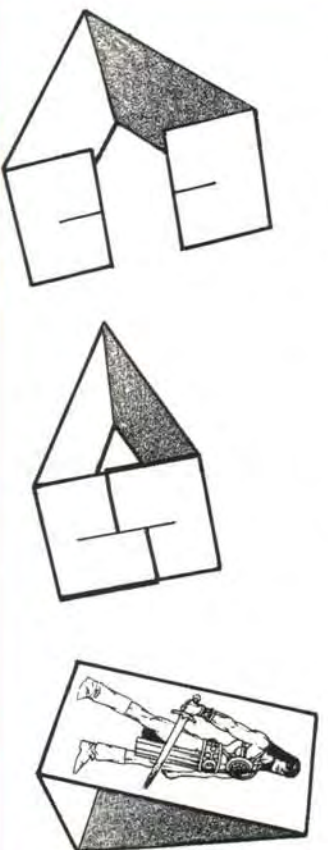

For temporary assembly, cut along the dotted lines that extend halfway into the base of each figure. You can then lock the two halves of the base together (see illustration). The figure will stand up during play, but can be taken apart and stored flat when you are through with it.

For permanent assembly, overlap the two sides of the base and glue or tape them together.

Weighting: If you assemble your figures permanently, you can weight each base with a BB, fishing sinker or similar object glued inside. They are surprisingly stable without weights, but you may want a little "insurance." A ball of clay makes a good temporary weight.

Identification: Each figure has a unique ID number on its base, along with a very brief description. However, no identification has been placed where it will show during play. If you wish, you can write names, letters or numbers on the front or back of each figure; we've left this to the purchaser's individual preference.

As a bonus, there are extra copies of the foul creatures who favor horde tactics, from orcs to undead.

Fill your tabletop with dank liches, noble elves and skittering vermin – and enjoy instant, epic fantasy gaming!
