In addition to offering original creatures, this document contains entries converted from GURPS 3E publications and lists the locations of most GURPS 4E creatures and templates.

The conversions are the work of the present author; the source materials are the property of Steve Jackson Games and are not reproduced in this document.

An Overview of the Encyclopedia

The majority of the creatures in this Natural Encyclopedia have been adapted from the GURPS Bestiary Fantasy Bestiary and Space Bestiary for Third Edition, as well as other GURPS sourcebooks. Each such entry contains source information, so that readers may backtrack to the original. Although I have attempted to keep a fairly consistent process of conversion, there are many cases in which a by-the-book conversion would produce undesirable results. I have also taken some inspiration from the bestiaries of other RPG systems, but none of the entries here are direct conversions from those books.

REQUIRED READING

The majority of the entries in the Encyclopedia only require the two books of the Basic Set. Some, however, rely on elements from GURPS Fantasy (4e), GURPS Magic or GURPS Powers. A very few require spells taken from HFP Spell Binder, which is currently being developed and is also freely available.

MOVE INFORMATION

Move information is usually simple to indicate, but in some cases an entry will have multiple movement types. In such cases, a letter will appear in front of each number to simplify the reference.

G = Ground Move

A = Air Move

W = Water Move

Enhanced Move variants will appear in parentheses. So, for example, a creature with Ground Move 6, Enhanced Ground Move 12 and Air Move 12 would be represented as:

G6(12)-A12

Entries that have only a Ground Move will not have a letter, and most aquatic entries will not have W before the Move number if that is the only movement type available to it. Entries with Enhanced Moves will generally not have this trait indicated under Physical Traits.

REACH AND PARRY

The size of a creature can affect its Reach, but not all of its innate weapons will benefit from this. Bite attacks, for example, regularly do not have extended Reach based on the creature's size, since the creature's head usually cannot be extended.

Frequently, an entry's parry score will be listed with two numbers, one of them in parentheses. The first number refers to an unarmed parry against an unarmed opponent. The second number refers to an unarmed parry against an armed opponent. Bite attacks do not parry.

COMBAT SKILLS, TECHNIQUES AND STYLES

In most cases, to save space, the Brawling skill will not be indicated explicitly; it appears in the entry's attack information. Any combat skill that can be deduced from other sections of the entry (i.e., attacks and abilities) will not be separately identified.

Combat techniques and combat styles are optional elements that appear in some of the entries. These techniques and styles are taken from GURPS Martial Arts 4e.

META-TRAIT TEMPLATES

The following trait templates appear throughout the Encyclopedia. Some are from other Fourth Edition books; these will simply be listed (B = Basic Set; F = Fantasy; M = Magic). Others are new with the Encyclopedia and are fully described.

Apparition - F134

Arachnoid - Extra Legs (total 6 [front 2 count as arms]); Injury Tolerance (No Neck); No Fine Manipulators; Semi-Upright

Astral Entity - B263 (equal to Unmanifested Spirit + Not Mute; see F134)

Automaton - B263

Bird - Flight (winged, cannot hover; basic flight speed will be indicated after Ground Move); No Fine Manipulators

Bodies of Air, Earth, Fire, Ice, Metal, Stone, Water - B262

Bodies of Slime, Wood - M165

Domestic Animal - B263

Fish - Ichthyoid + Doesn't Breathe (Gills)

Flying Insect - Insect + Flight (Winged)

Ichthyoid - B263

Insect - Doesn't Breathe (Oxygen Absorption); Extra Legs (total 6; Cannot Kick); High Pain Threshold; Horizontal; Injury Tolerance (No Vitals); No Fine Manipulators

Intact Undead - F133

Machine - B263

Materialization - F134

Marine Mammal - Ichthyoid + Doesn't Breathe (Oxygen Storage, x100)

Magical Spirit - F134

Mummified Undead - F134

Phantasm - F134

Plant - Blindness; Deafness; Detect Light; Doesn't Breathe; Injury Tolerance (Homogeneous; No Blood); No Legs (Sessile); No Manipulators; Vulnerability (Fire, x2)

Poltergeist - F134

Quadruped - B263

Raptor - Flight (winged, cannot hover; basic flight speed will be indicated after Ground Move); Foot Manipulators (Short; Temporary disadvantage (Legless); see p. B53); Ham-Fisted (-6)

Reptile - Quadruped + Cold-Blooded (50°)

Rotting Undead - F133

Spirit - B263

Spider - Arachnoid + Clinging; Night Vision 9; Peripheral Vision; Vibration Sense

Skeletal Undead - F133

Unmanifested Spirit - F134

Vermiform - B263

Vermiform Reptile - Vermiform + Cold-Blooded (50°)

Wild Animal - B263

See also the template entries for the fae species (Faerie, Nymph, Gremlin, Shunned, Imp) and the amorphs (Ooze, Jelly, Slime). In all cases, do not adjust the entry's attributes and secondary characteristics based on its template, as that has already been done.

In most cases, the Vermiform meta-trait as applied to a given creature will include Horizontal, and frequently Invertebrate, but these minor distinctions are not noted in the entries. Some vermiform creatures have legs like centipedes or millipedes: they are listed as Effectively Vermiform, having very small legs that are incapable of doing anything other than propelling the creature.

Traits that can be deduced from other parts of an entry (for example, Enhanced Ground Move) will generally not be included in the traits section. However, if an advantage is enhanced or limited in some way that cannot be determined from the rest of the entry, the advantage will appear in the trait list.

REPRESENTING INNATE ABILITIES

Many of the creatures in this Encyclopedia have innate abilities that are not covered by standard attacks or skills, but are also not in the strictest sense "powers" (i.e., magical, psionic, etc.). In some cases, however, I model them as if they were true power-based abilities. I make this clear by putting the power source in parentheses after the ability name. I do this mainly to indicate that the ability can be counteracted by another ability or spell that "jams" the power source.

Every power ability and innate ability appears individually below the list of traits, set off from the rest of the entry by a bullet (•) before the name of the ability. Abilities that require a roll to activate will have the skill roll in parentheses. (Innate Attacks are represented only by their type: breath, gaze, etc.) Follow-Up abilities will be identified with (F) instead of a skill roll number. Aura- and Emanation-based abilities will have (A) or (E). Maledictions, which use Will rolls instead of skill rolls, are indicated by (M). Defensive abilities that do not require rolls (such as Spines) are indicated by (D); note that such abilities may often be used offensively in the manner of an Aura. Skills that are fully covered by bulleted abilities (such as most Innate Attacks) will not appear in the Skills section.

POISONS WITH MULTIPLE EFFECTS

The poison types from Third Edition have been simplified and modified to fit the Affliction and Innate Attack advantages from 4e. Because of the complexity of these attacks, they are treated like templates. GURPS Third Edition classified poisons by types. In this Encyclopedia, they will be identified by the same type classifications but will be described as power abilities. Note that for Cyclic attacks, the victim may attempt to resist once per cycle. Successful resistance ends all further cycles.

POISON TEMPLATES

All attacks have Follow-up unless otherwise specified in the creature entry. (Not all of these types are found in the current version of this document.)

Many of the original poisons have what amounts to Secondary effect: Heart Attack. Since most poisons do toxic damage, they must be Innate Attacks, which cannot take Secondary. Side Effect and Symptoms do not allow Heart Attack as an option. Since Innate Attack is significantly cheaper than Affliction, allowing a Secondary like Heart Attack in an Innate Attack effectively cheats the system. (Why would anyone bother taking Affliction if the intended goal is Heart Attack and it can be added to an Innate Attack?) As a result, these poisons require two separate attacks, both tied to the original delivery as Follow-Ups. The first attack is the expected Toxic Attack. The second is an Affliction with a usually nominal primary effect and a much nastier Secondary that kicks in on a critical failure. Because the Affliction requires a standard HT roll to resist, it is actually harder to suffer the Heart Attack effect than it would be if the roll were lower: if the victim's effective HT were 6 or below, the critical failure window would be larger.

At the GM's option, the two resistance rolls can be consolidated: the victim rolls once and the result applies to both the Toxic Attack and the Affliction.

Type A

Toxic Attack (Cyclic, 1 day for 4 cycles; Follow-Up; Onset, 15 minutes; Resist HT-4)

Affliction 1 (HT; Follow-Up; Moderate Pain; Secondary on critical failure, Heart Attack)

The Cyclic enhancement adds three cycles to the attack, but since each one is Resistible, the cost is halved. The Follow-Up cost assumes that the poison is being delivered in a natural attack, such as a snake's fangs. The conditional modifiers to the HT roll that appear in the original version (physical activity, venom sucked out, antivenin, etc.) can be applied as the GM sees fit.

Type B

Toxic Attack (Cyclic, 1 day for 4 cycles; Follow-Up; Resist HT-5; Symptoms: 1/3 HP, Attribute Penalty, -2 DX)

Affliction 1 (HT; Attribute Penalty, -2 DX; Extended Duration, x1000; Follow-Up; Secondary on critical failure, Heart Attack)

This Toxic Attack has Symptoms: if the victim takes damage equal to or greater than 1/3 of his basic HP, he takes a -2 DX attribute penalty until the injury is healed. The Affliction has an Extended Duration that effectively turns each minute of affliction into nearly 17 hours. The Affliction is dispelled if the victim succeeds on any subsequent HT-5 resistance roll for the Cyclic Toxic Attack.

The same conditional modifiers that appeared in the original Type A apply here as well.

Type C

Toxic Attack (Follow-Up)

Toxic Attack (Follow-Up; Resist HT-5; Symptoms after 1/3 HP, Attribute Penalty, -4 DX)

Affliction 1 (HT; Moderate Pain; Secondary on critical failure, Heart Attack)

The original version of this poison does half damage if the victim wins the HT roll. In Fourth Edition terms, that means two Toxic Attacks: the first is not Resistible, the second is. The two attacks divide the listed damage between them. So, a 1d Type C attack would automatically do 1d-3, and another 1d-3 on a failed HT roll. For simplicity, the GM may wish to ignore the first Toxic Attack and resolve this as a standard Resistible attack. In that case, the damage listed in the entry applies entirely to the Resistible Toxic Attack.

Type D

Affliction 3 (HT-2; Extended Duration, x100; Follow-Up; Paralysis; Secondary on critical failure, Coma)

This one is easy, a textbook Affliction. The Extended Duration has the result that for every point by which the victim failed the HT roll, he is paralyzed for just over an hour and a half. The original poison set the duration at 6 hours; this new Type D is more flexible, possibly more forgiving and occasionally nastier. However, in the original version, a success results in paralysis for 3d minutes. The only way to guarantee at least this result is to use a Resistible Innate Attack with Symptoms, but the cost is too high for the intended effect.

Type E

Toxic Attack (Cyclic, 1 day for 2 cycles total; Follow-Up; Resist HT-5; Symptoms at 1/2 HP, Disadvantage: One Arm)

This poison is significantly different from its Third Edition counterpart. The exact symptoms of Type E poison are complex and quite difficult to model using advantages. The result would be overly complex. The One Arm disadvantage listed here is the most expensive result. If the victim was struck on the hand or leg, apply the appropriate disadvantage instead of One Arm. This represents the onset of gangrene, which disables the limb and can only be healed medically. What started out as a toxic poison attack effectively becomes a toxic disease attack once the Symptom sets in.

Type F

Toxic Attack (Follow-Up; Resist HT-5)

Affliction 1 (HT; Attribute Penalty, -3 all attributes; Extended Duration, x100; Follow-Up; Nauseated; Secondary on critical failure, Heart Attack)

Similar to the Type D poison, the original has a nausea effect even on a success, but the cost is too high for the intended effect.

Type G

Fatigue Attack (Follow-Up; Resist HT-2)

Toxic Attack 1 point (Follow-Up; Resist HT-2)

Affliction 1 (HT; Follow-Up; Moderate Pain; Secondary on critical failure, Coma)

The damage listed in the entry should be applied to the Fatigue Attack, not the Toxic Attack.

Type H

Toxic Attack (Follow-Up; Onset, 1 hour; Resist HT-2)

This poison cannot be modeled exactly with Fourth Edition advantages. In the case of a critical failure on the HT roll, the GM should apply maximum damage to mimic the original Type H critical failure effects.

Type J

Toxic Attack (Follow-Up)

Toxic Attack (Follow-Up; Resist HT-3; Symptoms at 1/3 HP, Low Pain Threshold)

The original version of this poison does half damage if the victim fails the HT roll. Resolve this in the same fashion as with Type C. In the original Type J, the victim can make the HT roll once per day to stop the effects. To do that here would require an expensive Affliction, however. My solution keeps the Low Pain Threshold on the victim until the wound is healed.

Type K

Toxic Attack (Follow-Up; Onset, 1 hour; Resist HT-2; Symptoms at 1/3 HP, Unconsciousness)

Affliction 3 (HT-2; Disadvantages: Berserk or Phobia (any) or Delusions or Phantom Voices; Extended Duration, x10; Follow-Up)

The original version of the Type K poison induced the effects of the Madness spell. For this version, the GM should insert one of the disadvantages listed above and calculate the cost accordingly. The original also had a minor stun effect, not modeled here. The Unconsciousness effect is slightly different in the original. To mimic that effect more precisely, apply the Onset of the Toxic Attack to the Symptoms only; the damage takes effect immediately.

Type S

Affliction 1 (HT; Blindness; Severe Pain)

Because Type S only applies to spitting attacks, it does not have a Follow-Up enhancement. In addition, it cannot be a Toxic Attack, since it does not do enough damage to warrant the Symptoms a Toxic Attack would require. To model the original, this poison would be an Affliction 5, but according to point costs it would be too powerful. The GM should scale the Affliction to suit her needs.

Description: The giant trapper is the largest species of ant, larger than the giant ant-lion by at least a third. They are also excellent tunnelers, and use this to their advantage when hunting for prey. A trapper's den can be extensive and always has multiple entrances. Female dens tend to be larger and multi-leveled in order to accommodate their eggs and hatchlings. Because they prefer to dig their tunnels with at least a six foot ceiling (nearly twice their own height, allowing them to turn around), abandoned and captured dens are often populated by sapient wishing to avoid contact with the outside world. Some abandoned dens become the property of an assortment of underground creatures, many of which are often unaware that they have neighbors in other parts of the den.

The entrances to a trapper's den descend underground at a shallow decline. A trapper will plug the last few feet of the entrance corridor with dirt and plants, to discourage intruders when it is away from the entrance and to encourage them when it is not. When a trapper ant is hungry, it tunnels out the bulk of the entrance plug with its front legs and sets its broad mandibles in a closed position just underneath the top few inches of dirt. As soon as it senses its prey walking across the top of its mandibles, it opens them wide, causing its victim to plunge into the hole. It uses its acid spray as a digestion aid and begins devouring its still-living meal. Because the trapper ant's acid gland only produces enough fluid to kill a single animal before draining out, trappers only use the spray as a last resort defensive measure. If they were to use it more frequently in that capacity, they would soon starve.

Giant trapper ants are very wary of others of their own species, except when mating. Females are far more aggressive than males, since they require more space and must compete for it with others of their kind. The mating practices are distinctive, since trapper ants do not actively seek to reproduce. When one trapper ant tunnels into the den of another trapper of the opposite sex, the two will meet at the intersection, mate and then fill in the tunnel that connected them. If two males connect their dens, they will usually ignore one another and fill in the connecting tunnel at their convenience. If two females connect, however, they will attack one another and try to destroy any eggs or hatchlings they encounter. The most powerful femal trapper ants have exceedingly large dens on account of having taken over the dens of dead competitors as spoils of war.

Description: Close to a hundred species of antelope exist. The statistics given here are an amalgamation of the most common species; the smallest antelope weigh just over three pounds, while the largest weigh more than a ton.

Both males and females of many antelope species have horns, although those of the males are generally larger. Some species do not have horns at all, and in any case they are not used for defense against predators. For protection antelope rely on their speed (against lions, for example), endurance (as against cheetahs) and maneuverability. When fleeing danger an antelope will always run at its full Enhanced Move, but the point at which it breaks into a run varies by what is hunting it. Antelope have been known to run from cheetahs spotted up to half a mile away.

Included among the various types of antelope are the eland (two species), gazelle (over a dozen species), impala, oryx (four species), springbok and wildebeest (two species). Organization: Antelope gather in massive herds, which greatly increases each individual's chances of survival. Springbok antelope herds may grow to over ten million individuals covering an area of 1,500 square miles.

Habitat: Varies: forest, plains and savannah are their major habitats.

•Lifebane (Psionic): Lifebane (Switchable)

Mental Traits: Bad Temper (9)

Description: Despite the name, there is little to connect this creature with Pliny's basilisk, which is significantly smaller and has the body of a snake. Because they are particularly dangerous opponents, greater basilisks are unafraid to nest in the open, but they prefer small caves when they are available.

Combat: The greater basilisk does not have a toxic attack, psionic or otherwise. Instead, it uses its psionic ability to paralyze its prey, then closes to kill with its bite. This psionic ability requires that the basilisk meet the eyes of its prey, but once it has done so, there is very little its opponent can do. Most animals that the greater basilisk hunts do not have sufficient HT to resist the gaze.

Although Lifebane is typically a disadvantage, in the greater basilisk's case it is a psionic ability that it can turn on and off. Usually, however, it doesn't bother to turn it off. These reptiles are most active during the day when it is hottest, but if provoked at night they are quite capable of defending themselves.

Organization: Greater basilisks are found in groups of three or four when they are nesting. They prefer to hunt solo, however.

Habitat: Desert.

•Fishing Line (14): Binding 10 (Only damaged by corrosion or cutting; Permanent, until cut; Sticky)

Physical Traits: Dark Vision

Skills: Climbing-16

Description: The angler beetle is a massive insect with six legs and two large front-facing pincers. However, it does not typically use its pincers to attack its prey. Instead, it shoots a transparent “fishing line” with high tensile and adhesive strength at its target. It then reels the line in: treat the Binding as usual, except that the victim is dragged toward the beetle at Move 3. If the victim’s ST is enough to break free, the beetle will throw a second line (layering the Binding to a ST of 20) before attempting to reel in its prey. Under normal conditions an angler beetle will not attack anything with a ST greater than 5 (roughly 15 lbs.).

Habitat: Angler beetles live in small caves around small bodies of water. Angler beetles prefer underground ponds and lakes, but will settle for other environments as long as they are able to sequester themselves in natural dens.

•Acid Spray (Breath-14): Corrosive Attack 1d (Cone, 1 yd; Reduced Range, x10)

•Grappling Tentacles (Projectile-14): Binding 10 (Engulfing; Reduced Range 1/10)

Description: The most disturbing aspect of the grappling beetle is its collection of long tentacles protruding from its mandible, which it uses to grab and immobilize its prey. Once it has immobilized its prey, the grappling beetle then uses its acid spray to externally digest the victim. Against larger foes—ones that the beetle cannot eat—it does not risk damaging its tentacles and instead simply “dive-bombs” and sprays its acid repeatedly until the intruder leaves.

Organization: Grappling beetles are usually solitary creatures, but during the winter they retreat to their “dens” and hunt in a greatly reduced area. In such conditions, they will always be encountered in swarms of up to fifty beetles. Swarms are likely to go after larger prey, using a concerted effort. (Even so, they will tend not to use their tentacles when attacking human-sized targets.)

Grave beetles eat infrequently, preferring to take down large prey and living off the meat for a week or more.

Description: This creature is an ancient relative of the cockatrice, with a bite considerably more dangerous than that of its cousin. The Petrification ability causes the victim to turn to stone and be paralyzed on a failed HT roll. This is a permanent effect, reversible only by magical means (typically, the Stone to Flesh spell).

Organization: Solitary, occasionally in small groups (3-12).

Habitat: Plains

Description: Cheetahs grow to an average of a little over four feet long (plus an average tail length of 2-1/4'), with a maximum length of five feet. It has an average height of 2-1/2' at the shoulder. Their fur is a light tan color with black spots, except for the belly and the tip of the tail, which are white and have no spots. (Some cheetahs have black splotches or streaks instead of spots: these are called "king cheetahs," but are not a separate species.) At a distance cheetahs are virtually indistinguishable from leopards.

The cheetah is the only big cat whose claws do not fully retract. This, and the fact that it can use its tail as a rudder, means that cheetahs have better than average control at high speeds.

Cheetahs cannot roar, but they do have a variety of vocal sounds. One of the most common is a sound like a bird chirping, loud enough to be heard up to a mile away, which mothers use to alert their cubs to the presence of food. Cheetahs are also able to purr: males use this purring sound to court females, and mothers use it when grooming their cubs. Cheetahs will also hiss when threatened.

Hunting: Cheetahs prefer to hunt their prey in late morning or early evening, while it is still light but before and after the hottest period of the day. They often seek higher ground (tree trunks, mounds, and so on) from which to observe and search for food. Their primary prey animals are small or young antelope, but they will go after other animals of similar or smaller size.

The cheetah's hunting style is an exercise in fatigue control. The cheetah is well-known as the fastest land animal, reaching speeds of 65 mph over short distances, but this incredible speed comes at a cost. A cheetah's body temperature rises to dangerous levels after even a short sprint. As a result, in addition to the standard fatigue cost from sprinting (p. B354), a cheetah must pay 6 FP every time it sprints. Most chases last fewer than thirty seconds and a cheetah will never give chase for more than a minute, but even that length of time demands between 6 and 10 FP.

Its high Running skill will tend to keep this cost toward the lower end, but it will never be less than 6 FP.

After long chases, whether or not the cheetah has caught its prey, it will rest for at least half an hour (recovering 3 FP or more). Because of the incredible demand on their bodies, cheetahs will rarely attempt to catch the same prey more than twice. Since they are successful only half the time, however, two chases per meal is common.

A cheetah will close to within 30 yards of its prey before sprinting. It will shorten this distance before the chase if its prey is particularly fast, but it will rarely come nearer than 10 yards. During the chase, a cheetah will attempt to trip its prey using its Sweeping Kick technique. The chase is the hardest part of the hunt: if a cheetah can accomplish this, it will usually have its meal.

Unlike larger cats, cheetahs cannot snap the necks of their prey. Instead, they go for the throat (-5 to hit). Cheetahs will hold fast once they have bitten, in order to suffocate their prey. Treat this situation as a grapple with an attempt to choke (without the one-handed penalty; see pp. B370-371). Cheetahs use their blunt claws (1d crushing) primarily for defending their territories, not for hunting.

Variations: Although rare, there do exist cheetahs with white, black, or gray coats, in most cases retaining their spots in some form. Such cheetahs are less capable hunters, however, due to their lack of natural camouflage. Treat such variants as having Stealth-10 only. The “king cheetah” mentioned earlier does not have this disadvantage.

Organization: Cheetahs are born blind in litters of 3-6; their eyes open after about a week. Most cubs are killed by other predators shortly after birth. They begin mating at around three years old and live for eight to twelve years (more in captivity). A litter forms a sibling group once the mother leaves (around 18 months); the females in the sibling group leave six months later.

Male cheetahs are social and form coalitions of two or three males. In such coalitions they control large territories an average of 14 square miles in size. They defend their territories against incursions by other males, sometimes to the death. Females, on the other hand, are solitary after the age of two, except when they are rearing cubs. Females do not establish territories but hunt in overlapping home ranges of up to 300 square miles.

Although they do not generally attack humans without provocation, cheetahs cannot be fully domesticated. They can be tamed and trained sufficiently to be used by hunters. They are unable to distinguish friend from foe except within their own species, however, so if they are trained to hunt humans, they will be indiscriminate. They do not breed well in captivity: male cheetahs are nearly impotent, and the females prefer to have multiple partners.

Habitat: Plains (Savannah, Semi-Arid).

•Fire Breath (12): Burning Attack 1d (Costs 1 FP; Jet; Takes Recharge, 15 seconds)

Physical Traits: Extra Head (total 2)

Mental Traits: Compartmentalized Mind 2

Description: Early reports of this creature gave the impression that it had three heads (one of which was that of a lion), a goat’s body and a serpent’s tail.

The chimera is a white, long-haired creature (hence the goat body description). It does have three heads, the middle of which resembles a lion’s insofar as it bears a thick mane. The other two heads are like the middle one, lacking only the mane. At the chimera’s hindquarters, the coat is harder and denser, resembling long white scales. Along the length of its considerable tail, these “scales” become shorter and darker until they are nearly black at the tip.

Despite not being a sapient creature, the chimera does have three brains, any two of which can be destroyed without killing the chimera.

Each head is capable of a breath attack: the side heads breathe acid while the middle head breathes acid or fire. The same liquid jets from each head, but the middle head is capable of igniting it. If the middle head breathes fire, it cannot do so again for fifteen seconds (while the “spark” gland recovers), but it can breathe acid twice during that time.

A chimera will usually stagger its breath attacks over three seconds (with the fire breath first), then bite for two seconds before using the breath attacks again. A chimera is capable of attacking with its claws, but it rarely does so because it must rear up to do so, which exposes its necks to its adversary.

Description: Dingos are wild dogs that live in family groups, hunting small animals, scavenging from sapient species and generally eating anything they can kill or find easily. They grow to a height of two feet at the shoulder and a length of four feet (not including the tail). Dingos can and do mate with other dog species.

Organization: Although usually solitary or found in family groups, dingoes occasionally gather into packs of a dozen or more for hunting purposes. A litter averages five pups, but in the larger packs many of these will be killed by rival females.

Constriction Attack (Wrestling-10)

Physical Traits: Bad Sight (Farsighted); Extra Legs (total 12; Cannot Kick); Flight (Lighter Than Air, Low Ceiling 20'); No Sense of Smell

Description: The lungstrider is a slow-moving, peaceful herbivore shaped like a gigantic egg with delicate tentacles (though unrelated to the sea blimp). The interior of the "egg" consists of expanding sacs filled with hydrogen that has been processed from food. This makes the lungstrider lighter than air, allowing it to float up to twenty feet off the ground.

The lungstrider uses six of its twelve flexible "legs" to push against the ground for movement; it uses its sense of touch to locate thick patches of grass, small bushes and other plants. When it finds something it wants to eat, it descends a few feet and wraps its other six legs around the food. This is the source of its constriction attack, which by nature is relatively weak. Its mouth is located on the underside of the front third of the body. It lacks teeth; instead, it pushes food into its mouth and holds it there while it is digested directly behind the mouth.

The lungstrider has poorly functioning eyes that it uses only to gauge the direction to its next distant meal. It has no olfactory sense to speak of. Although it is filled with hydrogen, it is surprisingly hardy: its hide is particularly resistant to fire and does not puncture easily. If a lungstrider does happen to be threatened by fire, a rapid chemical process combines the hydrogen with oxygen and fills its lung sacs with water. The lungstrider will sink to the ground as a result, but once the danger has passed it can take to the air again after 12 hours of "refilling," assuming it has a sufficient food source within reach of its 10' legs.

Although lungstriders cannot be domesticated or trained in any real sense, they are sometimes used as pack animals. Lungstriders tend to keep to patterns of movement that change very slowly, and so they have predictable routes. They do not seem to mind (or even notice), and they can carry up to two hundred pounds without difficulty. Although they move too slowly to be used as mounts, they can carry cargo from the outskirts of one city to another as quickly as any caravan, without supervision.

Organization: Family groups of 2-6, with never more than 2 adults.

Habitat: Plains.

Bite (swarm): 1 hp cut

Physical Traits: Night Vision 2; Restricted Diet (Very common: rotting corpses); Tunneling 1

Description: Corpse rats make their home in tunnel networks underneath large graveyards, or deep within crypts. They will only eat the flesh of the dead—they are entirely carrion eaters—but have been known on occasion to attack and overwhelm smaller humanoids. Once the victim is dead, the rats flee and wait until the body begins to decompose before returning for their meals.

Organization: Corpse rats are always found in large numbers (packs of twelve or more), and they attack as a swarm.

Habitat: Subterranean.

•Feeler Glue (14): Affliction 1 (HT; Contact Agent; Melee Attack; Paralysis)

Physical Traits: Acute Taste and Smell 4

Social Traits: Bad Smell; Loner (6)

Description: The scavenger worm is a large, centipede-like creature with a maw surrounded by fleshy feelers, which it uses to taste the ripeness of its potential meals. Its diet is dominated by carrion, but it can eat live prey if it is desperate or the opportunity presents itself. If it is after live prey or is forced to defend itself, it will use a glue-like substance that drips from its feelers to paralyze its victims. Although the scavenger worm has what appears to be an exoskeleton, the “armor plates” are fairly weak and do not provide much more protection than leather armor.

Organization: Scavenger worms are almost always encountered alone. At the underground site of a large battle one may run across two or three of these creatures, but more often than not the scavenger worms will be fighting among themselves for the right to eat the corpses.

Habitat: Scavenger worms inhabit underground caverns and ruins. They stay close to their food sources, which means that wherever there are scavenger worms, there are usually other carnivorous creatures with less than tidy domestic habits.

Description: Sword snakes grow to a length of almost twenty feet. By the time they reach adulthood, their hoods (which resemble those of the cobra) are rimmed with a dozen or more long, sharp spines.

Combat: A sword snake's spines can be used offensively and defensively. They function like normal spines when being used for defense (impaling damage to anyone who gets too close), but their sharp edges allow the snake to use them almost like short swords (cutting damage). Especially when attacking larger creatures, a sword snake will attempt to constrict and impale its prey.

Description: Ice worms are massive white worms with rudimentary eyes and a leech-like mouth full of teeth. They prey on large mammals, but have been known to attack and eat other ice worms. There have even been reports of ice worms taking down young dragons.

Combat: Ice worms are fairly well protected by their aura of cold. An ice worm has two primary tactics when fighting. First, it closes on its victim, surrounding it with its body (but not constricting) so that the cold aura surrounds it as well. If its victim fights back, however, it will then retreat and use its cold breath. Ice worms prefer to avoid this second tactic, however, as it is an unpleasant experience for them: their bodies become warmer as a result of expelling so much cold mass.

Physical Traits: Doesn't Breathe; Doesn't Eat or Drink; Doesn't Sleep; Night Vision +4

Magical Traits: Detect Youth; Lifebane (Switchable); Magery 2

Possessions: Jewelry enchanted with Illusion Disguise-18

Description: Although the banshee is associated with death and dying, it is not, strictly speaking, an undead creature. It should be catalogued as one of the fae species, despite its corporeal form. They frequently appear in the guise of an old woman wearing a cowl (usually white) that covers long, silver hair. This appearance is an illusion, however, produced by a piece of enchanted jewelry that the banshee wears. The most common jewelry are combs and hairpins, but survivors of banshee encounters have reported a wide range of pieces.

When a banshee wishes to terrorize a victim, it removes the jewelry and seems to transform instantly to its true form. This true form is hideous and has the unnatural ability to terrorize anyone who looks at it. The lidless eyes are the size of billiard balls and the toothless mouth is stretched tight across a jaw that opens six inches. In this form the banshee emits its characteristic keening. Some claim it sounds like a wolf's howl. Others believe it to be more like the shriek of a woman. Most, however, insist that it sounds like the screams of a thousand dying infants.

It is unclear what banshees' motive are. Witnesses report only that they invariably attack the youngest member of any group they encounter. Once it has defeated the youngest member (usually by killing him), a banshee usually flees. Sometimes it will stay to attack the next youngest person, but this is rare. The myth that the banshee's keening is an omen of the death of an infant has been strengthened by this odd aggressive behavior. It is not clear how (or if) banshees eat or reproduce.

One thing is certain. The banshee's shape-changing ability is not innate. Although it is one of the fae, it is not a faerie, nymph or gremlin and is therefore incapable of becoming incorporeal. As a result it must resort to magical means to alter its appearance. Powerful and unscrupulous mages have been known to provide banshees with their enchanted jewelry. If a banshee loses its jewelry during a fight it will retreat immediately and avoid contact with most sapient until it can procure a new enchanted piece. If the jewelry has been stolen, a banshee will hunt down the thief with the aid of one or two other banshees. This is the only time that they are seen in groups.

Combat: Since they are substantial and can be physically harmed, banshees defend themselves by projecting a field of energy around their bodies that resists physical attacks. This projection does not last very long, however, as it can be weakened by repeated blows. Banshees avoid revealing their true forms unless they are in danger of being defeated. When fighting, they focus an element of their life-draining abilities into an attack that supernaturally starves its victim. Once it has incapacitated its victim, it closes to melee distance and strikes with a weapon, usually a knife, that materializes in its hand for precisely this purpose.

Organization: Usually solitary, at most 2-3.

Habitat: Banshees are found most commonly in non-urban populated areas, especially the frontiers of sapient civilization.

Notes: See also Fae.

Description: Dryads are nymphs who dwell exclusively in forests. They are roughly human in appearance, with skin the color of treebark (varying by the dominant tree species in its habitat) and short green or gold hair.

Although dryads prefer to remain insubstantial, they will materialize to interact with other creatures. When doing so, they will use their Chameleon advantage to remain as hidden as possible.

Combat: Dryads are exceptionally territorial, more than any other nymph species. If one become aware of intruders to its forest, it will seek them out and attempt to divert or waylay them with mind-affecting magic. If the intruders are destructive in any way, however, a dryad will use her plant magic to avenge the harm to her forest, even to the point of killing the culprits. At that point, she becomes indiscriminate, and even if only one member of a traveling party was thoughtless, she will wipe out the whole group.

Dryads completely avoid physical confrontation. When attacked, they will revert to their insubstantial form and disappear until they can once again gain the advantage.

If by some chance a dryad is forced to remain substantial, she will attempt to incapacitate her attackers with magic. Barring that, she will become listless and unresponsive until allowed to return to her natural state.

Organization: All dryads are female. It is not known how or even if they reproduce.

Habitat: Forests and wooded areas.

FAE (SPECIAL)

The fae are actually a collection of many different species of humanoid magical creatures. This entry provides a list of the five fae groups.

Faeries: All fairies are permanently insubstantial and use the Faerie template.

Nymphs: Nymphs are distinguished from fairies by the fact that they are capable of materializing into physical forms. They use the Nymph template.

Gremlins: All gremlins are naturally substantial, but are capable of becoming insubstantial for short periods of time. They use the Gremlin template.

Shunned: For some reason that is not fully understood, a small number of fae species are incapable of becoming insubstantial without external aid. They are invariably shunned by the other fae species, hence the name of the group.

Imps: There is some debate as to whether imps should be classified as faeries or kept in their own group. They are completely incapable of manifesting any part of themselves in the material world, and are therefore invisible to all but the keenest of observers. Unlike many gremlins, which have been unfairly marked as troublesome, imps are universally despised and universally unpleasant. There is some speculation that the shunned fae are imp species that were cast out of fae society thousands of years before the coming of dragons. Since the fae never discuss personal concerns with outsiders (and imps will outright lie about them), the answer may never be known. They use the Imp template.

Organization: Unknown. Outsiders usually encounter solitary fae only, but there have been exceptions (especially with gremlins).

Description: Hell hounds are demons that resemble dire wolves with flame-tinged fur. They are invariably malevolent, attacking every non-demonic creature they encounter.

The leader of each hell hound pack has the Jumper (Reliable +10; Tunnel) advantage as well, making it possible for the alpha hell hound and its followers to travel from the demonic plane to any other. They use this ability rarely, reserving it mainly for “return trips” after having been summoned by inconsiderate mages.

Organization: Packs of 10-20.

Habitat: Demonic planes. Standard hell hounds are not naturally capable of traveling from their home planes; they must follow the alpha pack leader through any tunnel it creates.

The domain is the particular nymph species' home territory type (forest, river, ocean, etc.). Nymphs must become substantial in order to eat and drink. A soul guide's natural environment is its respective plane of death, and it rarely if ever interacts with the living. The most common encounter occurs when someone attempts a resurrection: the soul guide will appear in order to repel the attempt. (In some cases, but by no means all, soul guides will not interfere when both the dead person and the person resurrecting him or her share the belief system of which the soul guide is a part.)

The list of soul guides includes but is not limited to anpus, ixtabs, manannans, vanths and waetlas.

Languages: Bugbear

Description: Bugbears are tall (7-9'), muscular humanoids distantly related to goblins. Although they do not have particularly short tempers, the reactions they receive from other sapients often lead them to attack in retaliation.

Languages: Dardik

Description: Dardiki (dardik singular) are genetic cousins of goblins. Their bodies are adapted to living permanently in subterranean caves and abandoned underground complexes. Unlike goblins, they do not build their own cities, preferring instead to take what they can get from other species' abandoned homes.

Organization: Dardiki organize themselves into extended families of between thirty and forty members. Two members—a mated male and female pair—act as leaders, and possibly “patrons,” although that word does not sufficiently describe their role. “Dardik” is the title of both male and female leaders, hence the name given by outsiders to the species as a whole.

Physical Traits: Hermaphromorph; Hideous Appearance; Night Vision 3; No Sense of Smell

Social Traits: Social Stigma (Monster)

Cultural Traits: Low TL (TL 2)

Features: Brain separated into two parts

Languages: Ghost (Native)

Description: Ghosts are tall humanoids that appear human in most respects, save two: they have rough, almost scaly skin, and they have no noses or foreheads. Because of the reduced cranial capacity, their brains are divided into two parts: one half is found in the head, the other next to the heart. As a result, if they are decapitated they can continue to function (albeit poorly) until they die from blood loss or starvation.

Organization: Ghosts form small, short-lived communities (10-15 individuals) for the purpose of achieving shared goals (including reproduction). Once they have accomplished the tasks, they then separate, usually never to encounter one another again. Their communities last a year on average, and never more than eighteen months.

Combat Skills: Broadsword-9

Physical Traits: Bad Smell; Night Vision 5; Reduced Consumption 4 (Cast-Iron Stomach); Restricted Diet (Spoiled Meat); Skinny

Social Traits: Social Stigma (Monster)

Languages: Ghilan (Native)

Description: Ghilani are closely related to ghouls, but their diet is broader. As a result, they are more common. They are primarily carrion eaters, and will eat the flesh of any dead creature they encounter. Like ghouls, they frequent graveyards, but they are as likely to be found anywhere there are vultures: waiting for the predator to leave behind the remaining carcass of its prey, so they can drag it off to decompose before eating.

Ghilani are humanoid, with long necks and arms. Their skin is a mottled grey and black, and they are utterly hairless. They always appear emaciated.

Combat: Ghilani use weapons of opportunity, usually the uneaten bones of a meal in progress. They will pick up a found weapon, but only for the situation at hand.

A ghilani's primary form of self-defense is a disturbing ability to afflict its enemies with auditory hallucinations. The victim perceives them as the angry voices of the dead, and they invariably tell him that he must go kill others of his own kind. Because this is a purely mental affliction, even deaf victims are affected.

Organization: Solitary.

Habitat: Any. Unlike the slightly more "civilized" ghouls, ghilani never attempt to pass as human.

Languages: Gnoll (Native)

Description: Gnolls are sapient humanoids descended from hyenas, and often keep hyenas as pets the way humans keep dogs. True to their ancestry, gnolls have long arms, high ears and a skull like that of a hyena. They also have the exceptional speed of their non-sapient relatives, as gnolls are capable of running on all fours.

Gnolls are scavengers, preferring to steal their food rather than hunt, and they use their hyena pets to seek out their "prey."

Gnolls are poor artificers, but they have developed a rudimentary form of metalworking and are able to make their own armor (up to DR 2) and weapons (always unbalanced and must be readied between strikes).

Combat: Gnolls prefer to avoid direct confrontation with other sapients, but are willing to fight animals for their food.

Organization: Gnolls scavenge in groups and will regularly be seen in packs of five to ten. They are nomadic but tend to stay close to the routes connecting the cities of other sapients. They put down stakes and build tents if they feel they will be staying in one place for an extended period.

Females are virtually indistinguishable from males. Some outsiders believe that gnolls are in fact hermaphroditic or capable of changing their sex, but this is no more true of gnolls than it is of hyenas (that is, not true at all).

Habitat: Savannah and desert.

Thrust: 1d-2

Swing: 1d-1

Physical Traits: Ambidexterity; Less Sleep 1; Night Vision 1; Short Lifespan 1

Cultural Traits: Intolerance (-3 reaction to non-goblin); Low TL (TL 2)

Languages: Goblin (Native)

Description: It is said by some that goblins were once shunned fae whom even the shunned refused to accept. Others, generally elves, believe that goblins are an offshoot of humanity. Goblins themselves claim that they are descended from their gods. Whatever the truth of the matter, the simple fact is that goblins can be found almost anywhere other sapient beings are found, and sometimes in greater numbers. Despite what outsiders may believe, goblins are highly civilized despite being TL 2 and innately resistant to magic.

Goblin culture is highly xenophobic, and they establish large patrols up to five miles from their cities to protect their territories and prevent non-goblins from finding the rest of their people. The stats in this entry reflect the abilities of one of those patrol members.

Organization: Goblins organize themselves into gobelan (singular gobal), which can be loosely translated as “tribes.” (It is from this term that the name of their species derives.) Each of these tribes is further subdivided into castes, usually between three and five. The number and names of the castes vary by tribe. They create their cities by digging large pits and building their homes there. They reproduce rapidly and in large numbers, so their houses are usually large enough to house up to fifteen people comfortably.

Habitat: Any, although most goblins are found in temperate regions.

Hobgoblins build their outposts in defensible locations: beside lakes, rivers, mountains and cliffs. These outposts are heavily fortified with high walls (usually made of wood) and guard towers. Hobgoblins are not particularly creative in their architecture.

Description: Holarchs are giant, semi-intelligent spiders with magical capabilities that more than make up for the fact that they have no venom sacs. Although they spin webs, holarchs use them exclusively for food storage and ease of travel, and will never attack prey using their spinnerets.

Holarchs are competent spellcasters and use their magic to disable their prey or enemies before closing to attack physically. They are just smart enough to figure out how best to use their magic, and will rarely throw every spell they know against a target, hoping something sticks. For this reason they generally avoid contact with unfamiliar species. The spells listed above are the most common repertoire; others are possible, as long as they do not cause any irresistible damage effects.

Mental Traits: Bad Temper (9); Bloodlust (12); Fearlessness

Description: The martyakhuar is often mistaken for a manticore, but it is larger, less intelligent and significantly meaner. Although their tails do not deliver poison through their spikes, they are much stronger.

The martyakhuar has a vaguely humanoid face and a reddish-brown body with a pelt like that of a lion. The tail is covered in a segmented carapace that both protects it and allows some range of motion.

Combat: Martyakhuars do not avoid a fight. Indeed, they relish combat. They mainly attack with their teeth and claws, reserving their tail spikes for any hapless opponents trying to sneak up from behind. If the martyakhuar must attack frontally with its tail, it will turn to one side or the other in order to gain the reach needed to strike.

Notes: The name "manticore" (see the entry above) comes from the combination of Persian words that name this creature. This entry is the author's version of a manticore.

Total Cost: -14

Description: Ogres are brutish humanoids of uncertain pedigree. It is possible that they are an offshoot of the giant species, which would explain their size, but not their relatively low intelligence. Most ogres avoid interaction with other sapient species (except when raiding), but each clan (see below) usually has one ogre designated as the "diplomat." What this means in most cases is that one ogre is assigned the unpleasant task of bartering and trading for goods that the clan cannot produce itself. Some clans, though not many by any stretch, choose instead to hire out groups of 3-4 ogres as bodyguards, thugs and persuaders to local towns and villages.

Organization: Ogres arrange their society according to clans. These clans can number in the hundreds, but the average is about 30 ogres. Each clan acts independently and they rarely share goals. The one major exception is in their courtship practices. Upon reaching adulthood, ogre females leave their birth clan to seek a mate in another clan. On the journey they are accompanied by brothers or other close male relatives, but once they arrive at their chosen clan (which as far as outsiders can tell is arbitrary) the males return home.

Habitat: Ogres can be found just about anywhere temperate, but they prefer to live in hilly areas where they can build or steal burrows. They also like to stick close to small towns (especially human ones) in order to raid or even capture them.

Claws (15): 1d-2 cr (Reach C)

Thrust: 1d-3

Swing: 1d-2

•Poison (F): Type B 1 point

Physical Traits: Extra Legs (8 total)

Skills: Climbing-15

Description: Many naive adventurers confuse ranyars and holarchs. In fact, they are not related in any way. Ranyars are centaur-like, having the main body of a spider and the upper body, arms and head of a humanoid. They are smaller and lighter than holarchs, but more intelligent.

The bite of a ranyar injects a poison that debilitates the victim without severely wounding it. Ranyars prefer to fight with melee weapons rather than their claws and fangs, however, as such weapons provide greater reach.

Organization: Small groups of 5-10. Ranyars are matriarchal; the lead mother is the only ranyar allowed to breed, with each pregnancy resulting in 3-6 offspring. Once the offspring are mature, the matriarch chooses which to retain for the group and which to reject. Rejected female offspring will leave to create their own family groups, while rejected males wander until they are accepted by another group.

The Siren Song Talent acts as a bonus to the siren's Will roll for the ability, thereby effectively increasing its viable range.

Languages: Troll

Description: Trolls are large, gray-green brutes with a taste for the flesh of other sapients. Their thick skin and rapid healing make them very formidable adversaries to those who are not carrying fire or acid (to which they are especially vulnerable).

Combat: Trolls attack rapidly with both sets of claws, using their raw strength and speed to close with their opponents and grapple them in order to rip them limb from limb—and eat them while they are still screaming.

Organization: Trolls travel alone or in small bands of no more than six.

Habitat: Any, but most commonly mountains and cold environments.

Amorphous Creatures: Oozes, Jellies, Slimes, Fungi and Molds

These creatures are notoriously difficult to model in GURPS. Because they have such extensive lists of traits, it becomes quite a task to keep track of all the information. That being said, bear in mind that oozes, jellies and slimes are very similar, and could conceivably be treated using only one of the templates. I have separated them into three templates in order to increase the diversity of this chapter of the bestiary.

Additional entries (some derived from other GURPS sources) may or may not follow the amorph templates.

BASIC AMORPH TEMPLATE

ST -9; IQ -9

Injury Tolerance: Homogeneous; No Blood

Susceptibility: Disease

Vulnerability: Acid; Fire

Physical Traits: Blindness; Cold-Blooded (50°); Deafness; Detect Life (Precise); Doesn't Breathe (Oxygen Absorption); Doesn't Sleep; Invertebrate; Mute; No Legs; No Manipulators; Sexless; Slippery; Supernatural Durability; Unaging; Unkillable 2 (Achilles' Heel, Acid and Fire)

Mental Traits: Hidebound; Indomitable

Features: Reproduction by division

Description: The majority of amorphs have intelligences just above plant level and are exceptionally weak (hence the ST and IQ scores). Blind and deaf, they are able to detect prey by other means (Detect Life).

Source: Author

AMORPH: JELLY LENS

Susceptibility: also Poison

Physical Traits: Increased Consumption 1; Payload; Stretching 1; Universal Digestion; Vibration Sense

Mental Traits: Uncontrollable Appetite

Description: Jellies are semi-solid creatures.

Source: Author

AMORPH: OOZE LENS

Immunity: Metabolic Hazards

Physical Traits: Reduced Consumption; Stretching 3; Temperature Tolerance 1

Source: Author

AMORPH: SLIME LENS

Immunity: Metabolic Hazards

Physical Traits: Stretching 2

Description: Slimes are the most fluid of the three basic amorphs; some may even be fluid enough to take Diffuse instead of Homogeneous Injury Tolerance.

Source: Author

AMORPH: FUNGUS LENS

DX -10

Susceptibility: also Poison

Physical Traits: No Legs (also Sessile)

Features: Spore reproduction

Description: This lens assumes a relatively "natural" fungus that is incapable of movement. For a mobile fungus, do not use this lens. Instead, add Susceptible (Poison) to the basic amorph template.

•Spores (E, Breath-14): Toxic Attack 1d (Area Effect, 4 yards; Emanation; Respiratory Agent; Takes Recharge, 5 seconds)

Physical Traits: Detect Death (Precise)

Description: Death eaters are barely mobile fungi that feed off decaying corpses. If a death eater encounters a fresh corpse or living creature, it will attempt to approach to within 4 yards and burst forth with its spores. Spores that land inside a wound or the mouth of a dead body will grow into new death eaters. Spores that are inhaled by living creatures do toxic damage, but unless the victim dies within half an hour of inhalation, the spores will become inert and not grow into "adult" death eaters.

Physical Traits: 360° Vision; Acute Touch +1; Catfall; Night Vision 3; Regeneration (Slow)

Description: To most sapient flesh mounds are incredibly repulsive. They are essentially blobs of fat and skin with eyes and a mouth. They attack first with their toxic vomit, then close in to bite their prey.

Combat Traits: Constriction Attack (Engulfing)

Combat Skills: Wrestling-14

Physical Traits: Clinging; Flight (Air Move 11; Gliding); Lifting ST +10

Description: Oozewings prefer to live on ceilings and walls, leaving the ground to their other amorph cousins. They have developed a frightening mode of attack that they use against intruders: engulfing suffocation. They achieve this by spreading their bodies into a thin sheet and gliding down from their perches. They land on their victims' heads and attempt to suffocate them (use grappling rules to resolve this). Once the hapless intruder is dead, an oozewing can live off the remains for months.

Organization: Oozewings are solitary creatures and will actively avoid contact with others of their own kind.

•Radiation (A): Affliction 3 (HT-2; Always On; Area Effect, 2 yards; Aura; Melee Attack; Retching); Toxic Attack 1d (Always On; Aura; Melee Attack)

Physical Traits: Distinctive Feature (slightly glowing)

Description: Glowing slimes are slightly radioactive and produce an aura of dangerous radiation out to a distance of two yards. The effect at range is nausea and vomiting; if a victim comes in contact with the slime, however, the radiation does its real damage. Since slimes are capable of Stretching, this form of attack is more dangerous than it might at first appear. They digest their food by enveloping it within its radiation aura for an extended period, causing it to decay.

CLOCKWORK (TEMPLATE)

Automaton, Machine

ST +3 [30]; IQ -4 [-80]; HT +2 [20]

DR 3 (Hardened x2; Semi-Ablative) [15]

Physical Traits: Ambidexterity [5]; Doesn't Breathe [20]; Maintenance (1 person, weekly) [-5]; Night Vision +2 [2]; Protected Vision 1 [5]

Mental Traits: Absolute Direction [5]; Absolute Timing [2]

Magical Traits: Magic Susceptibility 5 [-15]

Description: Clockworks are artificial human-shaped creatures that have been brought to "life" through a combination of magic and engineering. They are created for any number of purposes, making their shape and size as variable as their creators' wills.

A clockwork's rudimentary sapience is a product not of its mechanical parts but of the magical force imbued into it. Therefore, it can be disrupted magically (it is not a Digital Mind) and the clockwork as a whole is vulnerable to magical attacks.

A clockwork's creator must regularly maintain its mechanical parts, as the technology necessary for developing long-lasting complex mechanisms is not available.

A variation of the Golem spell (M59) will animate a prepared clockwork. The Very Hard Enchantment-college spell Animate Clockwork costs 130 energy points plus 2 points per CP above the template cost. Its prerequisites are Animate Machine, Enchant and Schematic.

Total Cost: -56 points

CLOCKWORK, VEHICULAR (LENS)

Clockwork

Physical Traits: Payload 50 (Exposed) [25]*

Mental Traits: Compartmentalized Mind (Controls) [25]

Total Cost: +50 points

Description: A vehicular clockwork is a normal clockwork that has been designed to carry people and cargo. It can be, but need not be, controlled by a driving operator.

DIRE ANIMAL

ST +20% [varies]; HT +2 [20]

Mental Traits: Bad Temper (9) [-15]

Description: Dire animals (like the dire wolf) are larger, meaner versions of the basic animal. In reality, only the dire wolf existed in nature, and it was a prehistoric wolf species.

Total Cost: Variable (35 if original ST 10)

RABIES, REALISTIC

•Infection: Affliction 4 (HT-3; Follow-Up, carrier bite, +0%; Hallucinating, +50%; Hydrophobia (9), +30%; Linked, +10%; Onset, 2d weeks, -40%; Paranoia, +10%; Severe Insomnia, +15%; Unfit, +5%) [72] linked with Affliction 6 (HT-5; Attribute Penalty, -7 IQ, +70%; Linked, +10%; Onset 2d days + previous Onset, -40%; Secondary, Death, +60%) [120]

•Infectiousness: Infectious Attack (Carrier bite; Accessibility, only when the two Afflictions are successful, -40%) [-3].

Description: Use this template to simulate the transfer of rabies from one animal to another. Some animals (like raccoons) do not react to the disease in the same way, so some elements of this template may be discarded. The Afflictions presented here reflect the human response to the disease, although the template itself belongs to the rabies virus, not to the carrier. The infectious attack (i.e., the virus) transfers this rabies template to the victim only if the two Afflictions are successful.

The second resistance roll (HT-5) is being exceptionally generous. In all of recorded history there is only one known case of rabies in which the victim survived and did not suffer significant brain damage. The victim dies in the vast majority of untreated modern cases, and in every case prior to the advent of modern (20th century) medicine.

Total Cost: 189 points.

RABIES, SUPERNATURAL

•Infection: Infectious Attack (Bite; Onset, 2d weeks, -40%) [-3]

Mental Traits: Hydrophobia (9) [-30]; Paranoia [-10]; Severe Insomnia [-15]; Unfit [-5]

Total Cost: -63 points.

Description: This is a supernatural version of the rabies template. Instead of functioning like a disease, it works more like vampirism and is not progressive or fatal.

Notes: A compromise between this and the previous template would add Draining [-5] to Supernatural Rabies. The necessary substance would be some kind of drug or herb.

Total cost: -33 points.

WERE-CREATURE: CLASSICAL

Notes: The basic template for any were-creature can be derived from the one on p. F112. However, even with the errata included, it can be unclear how the point totals are figured. Here is a breakdown of the process:

1) Find the total cost of the primary racial template without the Alternate Form. The primary racial template in the example on p. F112 is standard human (0 points) plus the disadvantages and quirks that the lycanthropy adds to the human form. The total here is -19.

2) Find the total cost of the secondary racial template. In this example it is the Wolf Form (25).

3) Calculate the difference between the two. In this example it is 44 points. Then take 90%, resulting in 39.6, rounded up to 40.

4) Add the limitations to the base Alternate Form cost of 15. Since in the Werewolf template these come out to -50%, the result is 7.5, rounded up to 8.

5) Now add the results of Step 3 to the results of Step 4. This produces a total of 48 points for Alternate Form in the example on p. F112.

The rationale behind adding Compulsive Behavior to the template appears to be that it forces the character into the alternate form. The Trigger in Alternate Form is not sufficient, since it only permits the change, it doesn't force the change.

GURPS Powers offers a less complex solution to this problem on p. P106: Uncontrollable Trigger. In the case of the Werewolf template, this would be Uncontrollable Trigger (Rare, Full Moon) [0]. A template built using Uncontrollable Trigger would be as follows:

Advantages: Alternate Form (Wolf; Nuisance Effect: Partial Amnesia, -10%; Trigger: Full Moon, -40%; Uncontrollable Trigger: Full Moon, 0)

Quirks: Unnatural Feature (Any one classic mark of lycanthropy) [-1]

The Wolf Form is still 25 points, but the primary template is only -1 without the Alternate Form included. The difference minus 10% is 23.4, rounded up to 24. The base cost of Alternate Form is 8 after limitations and rounding, bringing the final Alternate Form cost to 32. Subtract the quirk for a total template cost of 31. Thus, this less complex version of the template is 2 points more expensive than the one on p. F112. The advantage is that there is no possible resistance to the transformation (i.e., no resistance roll from Compulsive Behavior), which is more in line with the "classic horror movie werewolf."

Be aware that in both cases the assumption is that the primary template is only the Werewolf template—that is, the character is human. Other species will produce different results, especially if their species (“racial”) templates raise the primary template cost above that of the alternate form.

These two templates present a werewolf whose alternate form is not actually that of a wolf; it is something of an intermediate morphism. The next two entries present alternatives. They do not assume only a wolf alternate form, and as such cannot be calculated beforehand.

Source: Based on F112

WERE-CREATURE: DIMORPHIC

Physical Traits: Alternate Form (Select form; Nuisance Effect: Partial Amnesia, -10%; Trigger: Full Moon, -40%; Uncontrollable Trigger: Full Moon, 0) [minimum 8]

Notes: This template has no Unnatural Feature quirks. The base cost of the template is 0 points without the Alternate Form (but don’t forget to add any relevant species/racial templates). Use this template when creating a were-creature that transforms from a sapient species to a non-sapient one, such as an actual wolf. The alternate form’s template should be constructed by determining the animal’s point cost and altering IQ to barely sapient level.

Source: Author

WERE-CREATURE: TRIMORPHIC

Physical Traits: Alternate Form (expensive form; Nuisance Effect: Partial Amnesia, -10%; Trigger: Specific Moon Phase, -40%; Uncontrollable Trigger: Specific Moon Phase, 0) [minimum 8]; Alternate Form (cheap form; Nuisance Effect: Partial Amnesia, -10%; Trigger: Specific Moon Phase, -40%; Uncontrollable Trigger: Specific Moon Phase, 0) [flat 8].

Notes: Some were-creatures have three forms: the primary species, the animal species and an intermediate form that is a mix of the traits of the other two. This third form typically activates when the moon is 3/4 full, which occurs on either side of the full moon (or, alternatively, at the new moon).

If a standard human has a weak full alternate form (most small animals), the expensive form will be the intermediate one. If, however, the full alternate form is more powerful than the standard human (like bears, tigers and ice worms), the intermediate form is likely to be the cheaper of the two.

Habitat Reference List

The information contained in the following lists is only an approximation, and a very loose one at that. Most animals have fairly restricted habitats that cannot be identified by the sorts of categories necessary for a roleplaying game.

In other worldbooks, flora and fauna of the various regions of the World may be more closely treated.

Some of the categories require explanation. The Arctic category includes both polar regions, not only the northern. The Civilization category includes all those sapient species that have developed population centers of significant size, as well as those animals and other sapients that congregate in and around those centers.

Some of the converted entries and most of the Fourth Edition entries do not have any indication of habitat. In such cases, these entries have been listed in the Habitat Not Specified category.

Some creatures do not inhabit the material plane as most sapients understand it. These are categorized under Outsiders, which can refer to inhabitants of the hell dimensions or any other non-material plane that is superimposed upon the World's primary existence.
