The US Army academy maintains a very scientific curriculum with all students earning BS degrees. Military training is primarily limited to leadership and “command presence” with little tactical training other than two summer camps where they get to run around in camo.

Note: This packages replaces the need for the character to take either Basic Education or Advanced Education packages, and like Advanced Education requires that additional points be devoted to a major

For those want-to-be officers unable to attend West Point, ROTC at their chosen university is the next best choice. Most commissioned officers take this route. Requires the Advanced Education package.

Thought they attend the first and third phases of the Q Course with the enlisted, the second phase is devoted skills necessary for leading a team often far from support and in close relations with foreign services. Requires BIOC package

Other officer branches can be represented by taking the appropriate enlisted package after West Point, ROTC or OCS.

Warrant Officers

Warrant Officers fall between enlisted and commissioned officers and all had a previous career as enlisted. This can cause some challenge to character creation. Typically one should take Basic Training, then a warrant package, and then purchase individual skills to represent previous enlisted experience.

The unsung job of ferrying men and material goes to these pilots who primarily fly UH-60 and CH-47 helicopters. They have a reputation (fairly deserved) for not being on time and not being at the right spot.

Flying the OH-58 (and maybe someday the RAH-66) these serve as the eyes of armor formations, spot for attack helicopters and artillery, and increasingly carryout light strike missions themselves.

These highly skilled pilots fly the dangerous gray- and black-ops missions in their specialized HH-60, MH-47, AH-6 and MH-6 helicopters. Training is very realistic with a correspondingly high accident rate. They also receive a fair amount of infantry training. Requires one of the above three packages.
