Excerpt From the Voren Codex

Upon the void of nothingness, the world came into being, the avatar of the Mother. Ten days passed as the Mother crafted the world and all things upon it. At the beginning of time, before the rise of the divine races, the Mother gave birth to the Moon and the Sun. The Sun gave life and warmth to the Mother. The Moon provided death and entropy. The world, with as much as it already held, did not have any being that the Sun could call a companion. The Sun wished for companions during his reign to help him rule over life. With that in mind, he created the twin Wyrms and called them Spring and Summer.

When the Moon assumed his reign over the world, he too attempted to create life to join him, but life would not be created for him. Upset, the Moon went to the Mother to ask why the Sun was able to create and he could not. The Mother told him no, for the power over life was the domain of the Sun. She held him in her arms and told him that she loved him equally as the Sun, but that his domain was over death, and thus he was unable to create life. The Moon grew jealous over this because he was unable to comprehend the concept of love. In anger, he imprisoned the Mother deep within the earth during his reign.

When the Sun claimed his throne once more, he could not find the Mother. He asked his brother where she had gone, and the Moon told the Sun that their Mother had died during his reign. Thus, the first lie in the world was told, and the Sun, not understanding deception, believed his brother and fell into mourning for his own Mother.

As the Sun mourned during his reign, his brother helped comfort him and in doing so, caused the day to grow dark, casting long shadows across the world. With the shadows of the living cast, the Moon devised a plan to create his own progeny. From the shadows of the living, the Moon harnessed their power and created his own children, shadow twins of the Wyrms. He named them Autumn and Winter.

The world continued, and life thrived under the loving embrace of the Sun. The Wyrms served as the keepers of the world, and it was they who called it Falamar. The world, though, was too large for the Wyrms to maintain order, as they went to the land and took the four precious metals of the earth — gold, silver, bronze and copper — and combined them with the rays of the sun. The Wyrms gave birth to the guardians of the land in their own image and called them dragons.

The guardians in turn created the watchers over nature and magic. The dragons took the bark of the tallest trees, the rocks of the earth and the water of the oceans, and thus two beings called Eladrin were born, Loth and Syladrin. Loth became the First Sorceress, a master of all things magic. Syladrin became the first Hunter, a master of all things natural.

As time passed, Loth and Syladrin grew lonely within the Great Forest, and so they called out to the Sun, but he could not hear them. Loth then raised the ground so that she would be closer to him and called out to him again, and the Sun listened to her plea. He granted Loth and Syladrin's request for companionship. From the mountain and a lock of Loth's hair he created the twin dwarven brothers, Ikar and Ikos. He gave them dominion over the divine and craft; thus Ikos became the Voice of the Sun and Ikar became the Voice of the Moon. From the tears of Syladrin and the wind he created the humans, Lissa and Lorik. He gave them dominion over the physical, masters of the heart.

As time passed yet again, the six traveled to the place that they named the Astral Mountains, and called out to the Sun once more. They pleaded with him, asking him for children of their own, and so he granted them their wishes in order that the world would be plentiful. This time the world saw the rise of the Cushani, the powerful feline hunters of the Great Forest. Loth found them of particular interest, shaping the predatory animals into intelligent hunters and rulers over the animal kingdom. Loth encouraged the Cushani to develop as a race, although she hindered their ability to understand and use magic since she believed their simple intellect and bestial natures were too primitive to control magic.

The beings of the world loved their patron in return, for he allowed life to come into the world. As the Sun descended, and Moon arose to claim his rightful place upon the throne of the world, the beings of the world slept, paying no tribute to his glory. He took away life, drawing curses from the world. The Moon grew jealous, for all loved the Sun.

Upon assuming his rule, the Moon assumed the guise of a mortal and visited the beings of the world. As he walked through the fertile land, he found a deer and asked it what it held true to its heart. She replied that she loved to run free in the forest and watch her fawn play among the butterflies. At first, the Moon could not comprehend her response. He left and found a city of humans where he found a man sleeping upon his bed with his wife. He watched as the two huddled close for warmth, and upon the man's mind he asked what he held true to his heart. The man said he held closest to his heart his wife and unborn child. Again confused, Moon left the man in his slumber and sought another.

The Moon visited many creatures that winter and each response held a pure answer, to be alive was their greatest treasure. Pained, the Moon wept, for he had not the power to give life, only to take it away. He wept for many cycles of his reign, which brought about the first snow upon the world of Falamar.

When the Moon stopped weeping, his jealousy took full control of him. He wanted to be loved as well by the world, to be given tribute and praise for his reign. He took the guise of a mortal once again and sought out the beings of the world. He learned of a story of a man with white skin, a man believed to be cursed by the Sun. He traveled to the human man of albino skin named Ilius and whispered in his dreams the symbol of all that was life. Ilius dreamed of the rose, for it was the first flower created by the Mother. Following his divine vision, Ilius went out into the world. After ten days and ten nights, his journey brought him to the shore of the Red Sea. Upon the beach he found a single rose growing from the sands. Ilius then called out to the Moon, offering the rose as tribute to the Lord of Night.

Hungrily, the Moon descended upon the earth during his reign, appearing before Ilius and the rose. The Moon took the rose with each hand, feeling the power it held, but he knew it was not enough. He embraced Ilius with his arms and placed a kiss upon his brow. With this kiss, the Moon rewarded Ilius with insight into the divine magic. He then turned to Ilius and gave him another vision, to seek out a newborn eladrin girl, for the eladrin were the first of the divine races to be created. Ilius traveled upon the world for ten days and ten nights before he came upon the eladrin woman Shilo who held a newly born child. Ilius pleaded with Shilo to give him the child as his vision foretold, but she refused. Ilius grew angry that Shilo would dare defy his divine vision, and he slew her with his own hands.

No mortal had been slain by another out of cruelty before, and the earth shook as Ilius took the newborn child back to the beach, back to the Lord of Night. Ilius presented the child to his patron with delight, and the Moon took the child his arms along with the rose. With the child now in his care he again embraced Ilius and placed a kiss upon his brow. With the kiss Ilius gained the insight of arcane magic. The Moon knew that there was one last task to be given to Ilius, and so he gave him one last vision to fulfill. Night may reign only when innocent hands have knowingly spilled innocent blood upon the flower of the Mother's heart.

And so Ilius walked upon the world again for ten days and ten nights where he came upon the innocent and pure human named Braun. Ilius deceived him through sorcery gifted to him by the Night. Braun fell under a curse that would cause him to sleep during the day. Ilius deceived the man into believing that the Sun had gone away and helped guide Braun to the conclusion that in order to bring the Sun back, he had to sacrifice a life. As the two reached the beach during the night, Ilius told him that the Sun required a sacrifice and brought forth the newborn child, placing her upon a stone altar. Braun believed that he had to perform this horrible act to save the world from a life without the love from the Sun. With tears in his eyes he slew the child and poured her blood upon the single rose.

The Sun screamed in pain, and the Moon howled in delight. Innocence was shattered by the act of Braun. The days grew colder and the nights longer as the Moon fed upon the power of the Sun. The Moon then turned to Ilius and embraced him, placing a kiss upon his brow and gifting him with a vision and power. The vision showed Ilius he would become the ruler of Falamar, the instrument of the Moon's glory. Ilius was then given a gift by his patron, power over shadow and death. With this power Ilius exhaled a dark fog that spread his avarice and dominance over the world. The people called this fog the Breath of Ilius and thus began the Night Reign.

Voren Codex
Creation of Falamar

Introduction

The Night Reign Campaign Setting is set in Falamar, a young world of gothic horror and high fantasy. Night Reign is unique among fantasy settings. This is the tale of a world covered in darkness and ruled by evil hearts. Death and despair are the weapons of conquering armies, swarming the known lands and enslaving all people to a vengeful god.

Ultimately, it is up to the players to decide the fate of the world, to allow evil to continue its rule or to bring back the light. Can you conquer the Night Reign?

The Theme

The theme of Night Reign is one of gothic horror fantasy. When preparing for a Night Reign game, it is important to understand what these themes represent. Understanding these themes will help players to become fully immersed in the Night Reign setting.

Gothic

The term “gothic” refers to a style of literature characterized by a gloomy setting, grotesque characters, mysterious or violent events, and an atmosphere of degeneration and decay.

When running a campaign in the world of Night Reign, it helps to emphasize the gothic flavor of the environment surrounding your players’ characters. The world is literally dark: there is no sunlight during the day, only a faint ambient glow that is a sickly imitation of true light. The full moon on a clear night is the brightest light in Falamar, and even that is tempered by the persistent chill in the air and the fog that rolls in near the waters.

Horror

Horror is defined as an intense and profound fear of a person, place, or thing. This is no mundane fear, but a creeping dread that pervades all thoughts, gradually becoming the kind of overwhelming terror that only true heroism or madness can keep at bay.

Night Reign is not a place only for monsters that leap out for a quick scare (though they certainly have their place). There are many things in this world that can, through small subtleties, have a greater and more lasting impact. For example, there is a phenomenon in Falamar known as the Breath. It is a mindless, malignant force that appears as a harmless fog ... until the dying starts. Imagine that your adventurers have been travelling through a waterfront town, when they gradually notice that the streets have been cleared of townfolk. As the fog rolls in off the water, the adventurers face buildings covered in heavy, closed shutters and not another living soul in sight. Horror dawns as they realize that the fog is not just aimlessly rolling in. It is hunting.

Fantasy

Fantasy tales are (by definition) generally serious in tone and epic in scope. They deal with themes of grand struggle against supernatural forces of good and evil.

The world of Night Reign is, at its heart, a high fantasy setting. But it is more than mere swords and sorcery. The clashing of gods has blanketed the realms in mythical darkness. Evil rulers hold their kingdoms with tyrannical ferocity and terrible power. Magical creatures become twisted by the darkness and stalk unwary travelers. Heroes carry the only light of the world within their hearts and pursue a quest against impossible odds.

Ilius the Betrayer, he who is most steeped in true evil, reigns over the length and breadth of the lands of Falamar. Can his power be vanquished and the Moon fought back to balance the Sun once more? Will the might of the Ilium Empire prove too oppressive for the heroes to overcome? These are the types of struggles that make up the fantasy theme.

The Land

No wholesome thing can thrive without life-giving sunlight. Most societies of Falamar rely heavily on the land to produce everything from the food they eat to the cloth they wear, but in the reign of night the land is dying. Entire fields of crops wilt for lack of sun as hardier weeds and poisonous night-blooming plants thrive. Orchards bloom rarely and yield little fruit as the seasons themselves seem to succumb to despair. Summer and Winter are harsh in their extremes, Autumn rains fall unceasingly, and Spring barely exists at all. Many creatures that once flourished on the lands in the days of the sun now sicken and die, falling easy prey to the foul beasts that were once only free to prowl at night. In the dim semi-dark of the daytime, they hunt the weak and feed upon the uncertainties and fears of the living.

The People

The environment of Falamar comes to naught without a cast of characters to inhabit it. The people of Night Reign embody the themes and give substance to the setting by providing perspectives that your adventurers can react to. By incorporating the folk of Falamar into your story, you will create a story full of richness and depth.

The denizens of the Night Reign are widely varied, hailing from many different kingdoms, societies, and races. Each group holds to its own customs, notions, and ideals, thus providing a unique perspective. Faced with a horde of shambling hungry dead, a slave worker from the Karsari city-states will have a very different reaction than a battle-hardened Helvadian soldier. The regions of Falamar, and their inhabitants, are described in detail in Chapter 6.

In general, all living things in Falamar are affected by the absence of the Sun, and the citizens are no different. Furred peoples tend to have darker pelts, unbleached by sunlight. Those who have bare skin or hide are more pale than is natural. Common-folk of all races suffer from poor nutrition and short food supply to varying degrees, leading to continuous problems with disease. Nobility and the wealthy fare better, and to serve them is to eat well. This is not to say that all evil regimes starve and torment their citizens indiscriminately. That would be foolishly self-destructive because, as the saying goes, dead peasants do not pay taxes.

Of greater impact than simple lack of sunlight, perhaps, is the constant presence of fear. The most common emotion of the average person in Night Reign is fear – of becoming undead, of being consumed by what lurks in the persistent dark, of failing crops, of anything and everything. It is little wonder, then, that so many turn to the powerful Church of the Moon for protection. Though that faith has led to the two decades of darkness and terror that they seek shelter from, the people cling to the greatest bastion of strength and security the world has to offer. With the Church comes food, regular patrols of trained guards, and a promise of safety in an uncertain world. All that is required is loyalty and obedience. What the people truly believe in their hearts, they prudently keep to themselves ... out of fear.

The Heroes

Here and there in the world, there are people who rise up, who overcome their fears and take a stand against the darkness. Perhaps they are motivated by the hardened resolve they have seen in the face of cruel oppression. Or perhaps there is a divine chord deep within their hearts that is struck one day, and they find that they have a true calling. The lure of arcane knowledge, the cries of the downtrodden, the bittersweet pursuit of revenge, the thirst for glory ... any of these things and more can spur an ordinary citizen of the Night Reign to act. To strive. To fight the darkness.

The task is enormous, pursuit of the goal is epic. In a world where evil has already won, it falls to these few heroes to prevail for the cause of good. Such adventures are destined to become legends.

Chapter 1: Racial Lore

From the three divine races to the primal races, each race has its own unique history and society. Not all beings are capable of surviving the Reign of Night; some struggle in the darkness, slowly waning away, while others thrive and flourish in the gloom. However they live, all of Falamar's races have been left scarred by the experience.

History of the races

At the dawn of creation, the Sun gazed upon the empty new world and wept at the desolation. The Moon wrapped his brother in soothing light, comforted him and reminded the Sun that within his power was the gift of beauty and life. So warm was the Sun's gratitude that the world burst into life, covering the lands in all the wonder and beauty of nature. To govern over this new life, the Sun then created the Wyrms. Proud of his brother's creations, the Moon whispered to the Wyrms that they, too, held the power of creation. And so the dragons were spun into being.

The Divine Races

The immortal dragons, restless grandchildren of the Sun, grew weary of the world and wished to journey afar in search of what secrets could be found in the far reaches of creation. The Sun feared that without the dragons, the world would suffer for lack of care. The Moon reminded his brother that all things must come and go as is their nature. Thus, the dragons were wished well on their journeys. In their place, the Eladrin were created to care for the world.

And so the Eladrin Loth and Syladrin were born. After a time, they grew lonely and wished to share the world with others. Loth prayed to the Sun with an offering of earth and blood, and the Sun was inspired to create the dwarves Ikar and Ikos and the humans Lyssa and Lorik. With the divine races created, the world once again enjoyed a long peace.

The Primal Races

Long years of walking the world together led the divine races to create their own children. New races were born, some of loving desire and some of shameful greed, but all a step removed from their divine creators. These primal races are each distinct in their own right, though they all share the common thread of divinity half-realized.

Loth loved to walk the ruthlessly beautiful paths of the Great Forest, and there she found mighty feline predators. She saw great potential in these beasts, and so the Cushani were made. Walking upright and gifted with intelligence, these feline warriors served the Eladrin faithfully until the first Night Reign, when their masters betrayed them and left them for dead. Fierce and determined survivors, the Cushani became their own masters, and today they rule their forests as powerful hunters.

Dragons are immense and powerful creatures; however, during the first Dragon War it became clear to them that there are tactical advantages in overwhelming numbers of smaller creatures. Thus, the youngest of the primal races were created: the Dragonborn. For centuries, the Dragonborn served their masters as shock troops and infantry, knowing only battle, befriending only one another, and living by a soldier's code of duty and honor. As the dust of bitter wars settled, and the dragons retreated from Falamar, the Dragonborn have been left to wander the world, warriors without a cause.

No greater burden can a child be made to bear than the shame of his parents. This is the tragedy of the Half-Elves. Forsaken by both birth parents' races, Half-Elves have lacked the shelter of their own society, and so they have become most vulnerable to the trials of the Night Reign. These misbegotten children were prized as slaves for their exotic beauty and near-human versatility. Divine blood is not easily broken, however. Each Half-Elf has been imbued with a depth of strength and drive that few can match. The drive to be free.

Humans, of all the divine races, have become best known for following their hearts into adventure, for good or ill. Falamar is a place rife with consequences for the impetuous and unwary. The combination is nearly always epic, and very often tragic.

Power over death is the magical coin of the Night Reign, and none were more versed in its intricacies than the Nullmandor. This human society of necromancers delved deep into the secrets of death and found a great evil to embrace. The Council of Twilight gathered their strength and cast a curse upon the Nullmandor, stripping them of their power and truly diminishing them in body and spirit. Thus, the Halfings were born. Few have been alive long enough to recall their true origins.

Many creatures threw themselves wholeheartedly behind the cause of the first Night Reign. One particular society of humans, the Naur'toth, wagered their souls against demonic pacts in order to gain the power they would need to become the elite consorts and warlock army of the Betrayer, and thus the Tieflings were created. In the wake of that first Night Reign's defeat, the forces of the dark were scattered to the far corners of Falamar. The Tieflings, unable to hide amongst the remains of human society, found themselves banished to the far east.

The Cushani are a feline-like people that are skilled hunters and ferocious predators. They are known for their love of the hunt and forceful personalities. Those who can earn the friendship of a Cushani have gained a life-long friend.

Personality: The Cushani believe that they are the ultimate predators of the world. With their size and natural strength, few can hope to match a Cushani in a direct confrontation. Their predator instincts have not dulled with the development of their culture, serving instead to refine their lust for the hunt.

Physical Description: The Cushani resemble large, upright felines, similar to lions, tigers and panthers in appearance. With retractable claws and fur color ranging from dark yellow to brown to black, the Cushani heritage is obvious to any observer. Their cat eyes are either green or yellow, and their paws are more human like than feline. Cushani typically live up to 50 years of age due to an ancient curse laid upon them for learning magic.

Lands: Though their ancestral home of the Great Forest is lost to them, the majority of Cushani make their new home in the Kusar Jungles to the northwest of Aiyia called the Cushani Dominion. With their constant drive to gain honor and glory, many Cushani leave the Dominion as adventurers and can be found almost everywhere in the world.

Religion: As a race, the Cushani have no particular religious preference regarding the Sun and the Moon; however, they have a deep reverence for the Wyrms. Those that take the divine path of the gods tend to primarily worship the Wyrms.

Society: A proud people, the Cushani live their lives at the edge of safe ground in their search for honor and glory. With their shortened life spans, most Cushani refuse to idly watch time go by and prefer to be proactive in nearly all aspects of their lives from choosing mates to hunting prey.

Male Cushani are expected to be hunters and provide for the pride under the command of the dominant female. Most males tend to prefer physical roles such as warriors and hunters, while the females prefer the mental and spiritual challenges of magic use and leadership over others.

A distinct piece of Cushani culture is their relationship with dragons. Since the second Dragon War during the Age of Heroes, the history of the Cushani and the dragons has been intertwined due to the ancient pacts made by the metallic dragons.

Cushani revere dragons and will go out of their way to protect a dragon from danger. This extends especially to wyrmlings, which Cushani take great pride and honor in helping protect from predators until the young dragons are able to fend for themselves.

The height of Cushani-dragon relations is the bonding of Cushani and dragon to form dragon riders. Raised from birth as equals, the Cushani and dragon form a magical bond which links their bodies and souls together to form a powerful pairing that forms the foundation of Dominion superiority.

Cushani Characteristics: Proud, predator instincts, blunt, glory-seeker

Male Names: Bysar, Cagatkao, Cogazhis, Hallis, Jayal, Kamirr, Kacath, Kotja, Meneothi, Perusas,

Female Names: Aska, Galeca, Icata, Jalle, Jatiska, Kalinera, Kyana, Pouma, Wedi, Wersa

Cushani thoughts on the other races

Dragonborn: Not. Food.

Dwarves: Mighty as their mountain homes, and just as incomprehensible.

Eladrin: Exotic food, the magics that pulse in their very blood leave a tingle on the palate.

Elves: Crisp bones, long-lived race whose flesh is like fine wine aged in a magical barrel over centuries. Truly a delicacy not to be missed.

Half-Elves: Odd creatures, neither predator nor prey. Pity them if you wish.

Halfings: Food.

Humans: Clever little clawless hunters. Some are even worth noticing.

Tieflings: The tail makes for extra meat.

Cushani thoughts on one another

"Dulling your claws on paving stones, cub? Next you'll be purring for a saucer of milk and a belly rub."

- Rrahl Hysstra, Cushani Huntmaster

Dragonborn

"Never play cards with a Dragonborn. Reptile faces are impossible to read, and you can kiss your sweet socks goodbye if they ever so much as suspect that you're cheating."

- Crystia Lightstep, Human Rogue

RACIAL TRAITS

Please see the D&D 4E PLAYER'S HANDBOOK for the racial traits of the Dragonborn.

The Dragonborn are a race of creatures that were created during the First Dragon War of the Age of Heroes to serve as soldiers in the world wide war. When the fighting ended, and the dragons pulled away from the common eye, the dragonborn were left to fend for themselves. They strive to forge their own path in life as the youngest race, yet born from the oldest.

Depending on the blood line, Dragonborn tend to follow the basic personality and instinct traits of their progenitor dragons. For example, gold dragonborn tend to be lawful and the most honor-bound, whereas the white dragonborn tend to be ruthless savages.

Personality: The Dragonborn are honorable creatures who can be blunt in their viewpoints. Dragonborn are widely known for their short fuse temper which has gotten more than one dragonborn into trouble.

Physical Description: The Dragonborn are humanoid-sized creatures of draconic appearance. Their skin is layered with thousands of small scales which exhibit a wide range of colors, but most commonly follow the primary colors of the chromatic dragons and the metallic dragons. Instead of hair, dragonborn have long tendril-like extensions which typically are adorned with jewelry.

Lands: The Dragonborn have no specific homeland since they were bred for war first before all else. They can be found in most regions, though more commonly in the Dominion, Ro, Solis and Sadire.

Religion: The Dragonborn follow all of the gods equally.

Dragonborn thoughts on the other races

Cushani: Of all the races, they may understand us best. But they are too self-absorbed to bother trying.

Dwarves: They treat us with cautious respect, because we have given them no cause to do otherwise.

Eladrin: We are so far removed from one another that they take no more notice of us than we do of them.

Elves: Never have we been on the end of their leash. Though some have a gleam in their eyes that says it is only a matter of time.

Half-Elves: Caught between two worlds, they are possessed of a sense of ambition that often harmonizes with our own.

Halfings: Frustrating to keep company with, like a burr under your back scales. If you can tolerate them without losing your temper, they make useful compatriots.

Humans: There are as many kinds of humans as there are leaves on a tree. Take each as they come.

Tieflings: As one people, they have carved a home in this world and strive together towards a common goal. Theirs is an achievement we can admire, regardless of what past misdeeds were necessary..

Dragonborn thoughts on one another

"We need not be enemies, you and I. But know that should we meet on the field of battle and find ourselves on opposing sides, you will have your chance to make an end of me. As I will of you."

- Kaland the Gold, Dragonborn Fighter

Dwarf

"Some folks mistake a dwarf's smile for a sense of humor. But not more than once."

- Crystia Lightstep, Human Rogue

RACIAL TRAITS

Please see the D&D 4E PLAYER'S HANDBOOK for the racial traits of the Dwarf. Night Reign is home to two types of dwarves. Only the Asani dwarf is detailed here.

The dwarves of Falamar are one of the three divine races created by the Sun during the First Age. The role given to them by the Sun was to be the Voice of the Gods. Since that time, the dwarves have fractured into two subraces based on the practice of the first two dwarves, Ikos and Ikar.

The Asani dwarves are descendants of Ikos and are the voice of the Sun. The Winkar dwarves are descendants of Ikar and are the voice of the Moon. After the first Night Reign, the Winkar have driven the Asani from their perch of power and now control the religious doctrine..

Personality: Asani are slow to laugh or jest and are suspicious of strangers, but they are generous to those few who earn their trust. Asani value gold, gems, jewelry and art objects made with these precious materials, and they have been known to succumb to greed. They fight neither recklessly nor timidly, but with careful courage and tenacity. Their sense of justice is strong, but at its worst, it can turn into a thirst for vengeance.

Physical Description: Asani skin is typically deep tan or light brown, and their eyes are dark. Their hair is usually black, gray or brown and worn long. Asani men value their beards highly and groom regularly with simple styles and religious symbols.

Lands: Alakar is the ancestral home of the dwarves and currently under the control of the Winkar.

Religion: Religion, to the dwarves, is a fact of life, since it constitutes their outlook on life. The Asani follow the Sun as passed down by their ancestors.

Language: The language of the dwarves is Winthik .

Asani dwarf thoughts on the other races

Cushani: Only a fool disobeys divine edict, particularly when that edict is writ upon one's very flesh. They bear their punishment with more dignity than one would expect of such beasts.

Dragonborn: Thus far, they have proven themselves honorable. Nonetheless, it is only sensible to be wary of a race so young, seemingly abandoned by their creators.

Eladrin: Eldest and yet newest come, their minds are alien and their motivations unknowable.

Elves: Siblings of old, we have shared this world for so long that we have simply become facts of each other's existence.

Half-Elves: You don't see any half-dwarves running around, do you? Some divine races have weaker resolve than others.

Halfings: Mostly harmless children, they find themselves more amusing than others do.

Humans: The light of divinity shines through them in so many ways, and so many places. This is both a blessing to the faiths, and a curse.

Tieflings: There is no amount of pursuing goodness, no pile of evil corpses high enough, that can erase the stain they have brought upon themselves. They are forever touched by that one long-ago bargain.

Asani dwarf thoughts on one another

"We are not a conquered people. We are of one flesh, but we are not a balanced body. If you would carry an axe, you must let your other hand carry your shield. Our dark brothers have dropped the shield to spite the hand, and the axe will suffer for it."

- Eskar Scoria, Asani cleric

Eladrin

"Condescending doesn't even begin to cover it. Also, they got no pupils in their eyes, so you can't even really tell when they're looking at you. Spooky? Hell yes."

- Kitzin Greenshoe, Halfling rogue

RACIAL TRAITS

Please see the D&D 4E PLAYER'S HANDBOOK for the racial traits of the Eladrin.

The first of the divine races, the eladrin were the caretakers of the land. When Loth left the forest, many eladrin went after her to either bring her back to justice or to join her and learn from her. Those that refused to join her were imprisoned within the Fey Realm for a thousand years.

Once the eladrin were free of their prison, they returned to a changed world. The progenitors of their race were dead and the world was deep in strife. Few in number, they returned to Allandorr where they could gather their strength so they might restore balance to the world. With the rebirth of Ilius, the eladrin have returned to cleanse the world.

Personality: The eladrin are a race that has been frozen in time. During the period they were detached from the world, they gained an outside view of the world and how it works. They hold strongly to the old ways of the divine races, believing absolutely in the divine roles that were given to them. They are extremely patient, a trait gained due to their infinite lifespan. The eladrin view and interact with the world like they would a chess game, very carefully and methodically.

Physical Description: Their skin is typically fair, and their hair color varies widely over a vast range of colors. Their ears are long and pointed, and their eyes are of solid color with no pupils. Eladrin children age similarly to humans, though when they reach maturity, they age extremely slowly for the next 100 years until they reach adulthood.

Lands: The Fey strongholds of Allandorr are the home of the eladrin. Eladrin rarely gather in communities outside of Allandorr, though when they do, they can normally be found in Lothanewi.

Religion: The eladrin believe in equal balance of religion covering the Sun, the Moon and the Wyrms.

Language: The language of the eladrin is Tyrish.

Eladrin thoughts on the other races

Cushani: They are as the passing of a shooting star, when measured against the fullness of time. No one beast survives for a sufficient span to be of any real use.

Dragonborn: Curiosities, nothing more. The fate of these creatures is far too unsettled to be considered consequential to the tapestry as a whole at this time.

Dwarves: Endurance is their defining trait, both physically and spiritually. These young mountain folk require a deft hand.

Elves: The Wayward are steeped in jealousy for that which they had denied themselves long ago. Never forget, this envy colors their every thought and action.

Half-Elves: Have the Wayward truly strayed so far?

Halflings: Unnecessary and small.

Humans: Remarkable that they, as a race, have survived all this time. It bears remembering that this is the race that has spawned the greatest cataclysms of the world's history.

Tieflings: Children marred in their very flesh for their misdeeds, they grow into adolescents who throw themselves at redemption with youthful abandon. Predictable at best.

Eladrin thoughts on one another

"I have walked the shining roads of an oft-shadowed sojourn amongst realms and beings beyond your ability to comprehend, and returned to find the world left in the hands of unruly tenants who have sullied its beauty nearly beyond repair. Can you truly look about you, and see that this suffering place has no need of Eladrin wisdom?"

- Eloi'Salanna, Eladrin warlock

"Feh!"

- Rok Caldera, Winkar fighter

RACIAL TRAITS

Please see the D&D 4E PLAYER'S HANDBOOK for the racial traits of the Elf. Night Reign is home to two types of elves. Only the sun elf is detailed here.

The elves were once Eladrin themselves until the progenitors of the race were killed. Those on the plane of Falamar lost their connection to the Fey Realm and became known as elves.

After the change, the elves divided into two subraces, the sun elves and the shadow elves. The sun elves are those who chose to continue in their role as protectors of the forest and magic as Syladrin taught. Those who chose to follow Loth's teachings fell into darkness where they were changed into the shadow elves.

Personality: The sun elves are more often amused than excited and are more likely to be curious than greedy. With such a long life span, they tend to keep a broad perspective on events, remaining aloof and unfazed by petty happenstance. They do, however, remain focused and relentless when pursuing goals that they feel are relevant. They are slow to make friends, but to those who are considered friend, the sun elves are fiercely loyal.

Physical Description: Skin tone tends to be pale with light touches of gold highlights along the sides of the neck, shoulders and ribs. Hair color typically ranges from blonde to light brown to red. Elves have no facial or body hair. They prefer light and loose-fitting clothing.

Religion: The sun elves tend to follow the teaching of the Sun, and the shadow elves strictly follow the Moon.

Lands: Lothanewi is the ancestral home of the elves. It is the first place that was created by the Sun and is now under the control of the shadow elves.

Language: The language of the elves is Tyrish.

Elf thoughts on the other races

Cushani: The cats possess a certain feral beauty, but nonetheless are hardly worth the effort to tame again.

Dragonborn: We do not easily trust constructs not of our own making. Should the need arise, however, we are confident that such creatures can be brought to heel.

Dwarves: Even in the depths of a midnight sky, there is some light. It is the juxtaposition of the joy in creation and the bleakness of destruction. Deep within their mountain homes, our brothers forget the sky.

Eladrin: Negligent elders return to the world they had long ago abandoned, and feign surprise to find it changed. It is no accident that now is the time they choose to wander back into our midst, or that this point in our evolving history is where they choose to attempt to regain their sovereignty.

Half-Elves: Our shame lives in them, and for that they are scorned.

Halfings: Mysterious as a butterfly's path, and equally pointless. One can only hope such feckless beings have forgotten their dark glories of the past.

Humans: The flame that burns hot, burns briefly. Divine flame is no exception.

Tieflings: Like precious few peoples of this world, they acknowledge the lessons of their past and seek to better themselves as a result. A worthy pursuit, though most likely doomed to failure before it began.

Elf thoughts on one another

"Can you tell me where the wind ends and begins? Can you point to a tree as it sprouts, grows, falls, and sprouts again and tell me there, that is where it has died? Wood and Air are eternal, and it is from these elements that we Elves are made."

- Sheylan Solth'emi, Elven Paladin

Half Elf

"These younger generations have grown soft. When I was a child, there was a strict policy of drowning these brats like the unwanted kittens they were."

- Ahlenna'et Umbre, Shadow Elf

RACIAL TRAITS

Please see the D&D 4E PLAYER'S HANDBOOK for the racial traits of the Half Elf.

The half elves of Falamar are the most numerous of the half breeds. Born from elven and human parents, they are of both worlds though they fit within neither. Half elves live as outcasts throughout the world, shunned for their mixed blood which is viewed as blasphemy by the church. The life of the half elf is always on the road, moving from town to town, looking for work where they can get it, usually as mercenaries or bandits. Half elven women are prized highly as slaves among the more major cities.

Personality: Many half elves are cold and uncaring, shaped by the outcast lifestyle that they live. Friends are few and far between, the lonely road being their only true companion. With this lifestyle, many half elves are slow to trust and are suspicious of those that offer it. They value their freedom above all else and tend to help others of their kind to obtain freedom when they can.

Physical Description: Their skin is pale with slight highlights of gold or silver along the jawline. Their hair and eye color varies as much as humans and many males prefer to display long hair and facial hair to hide some of their elven features.

Lands: With no homeland to call their own, half elves who are lucky enough to have their freedom can be found wandering anywhere in the world. Those who are not free are typically slaves to the wealthy.

Religion: Half elves do not follow the gods, since they believe they are cursed blasphemies. Instead they tend to follow the views of the Mother or the Wyrms.

Language: Half elves have no language of their own. They usually speak of the language of their significant parent, either Tyrish or Cerian.

Half Elf thoughts on the other races

Cushani: To a Cushani, there are two types of traveling companions: comrades-at-arms, and food. Prove yourself to be one or the other, and you will always know where you stand.

Dragonborn: Even more lost in this world than we are. At least our creators are still around to direct and inspire us, for good or ill.

Dwarves: Best avoided, unless you enjoy being spat on.

Eladrin: They are to elves what elves are to us. Not surprisingly, we are apparently far beneath their notice. Still, it can be fun to see the Elves having to swallow millennia-old doses of their own medicine.

Elves: We can only spend so much of our lives apologizing for your mistakes.

Halflings: Underestimate them at your own peril. They're just as quick to help a friend as they are to eviscerate an enemy.

Humans: They seem to resent us less than our Elven parents, but only because they don't have centuries to live with the shame.

Tieflings: Charming company, and too wrapped up in their own over-reaching goals to care about the circumstances of anyone's birth.

Half Elf thoughts on one another

"Don't mistake our bitterness for apathy. No one is as motivated to triumph as an outcast."

- Sai'laja Ironspear, Half-Elf fighter

Halfling

"Utterly infuriating green-eyed devils, every last one."

- Eskar Scoria, Asani cleric

RACIAL TRAITS

Please see the D&D 4E PLAYER'S HANDBOOK for the racial traits of the Halfling.

The halflings are a simple and rustic people. They live in large, open communities where they can attend to their social gatherings and crafts. The Halflings began sometime during the end of the Age of Creation, and myth states that they came from humans that had been banished from the Great For-est due to the group's drive to gain power over death.

With their exile and the rise of Ilius, the group now known as the Nullmandor, arose as powerful necromancers. Their power would last until the Age of Heroes when Latarin banished many to the far reaches of the world. Those Nullmandor who remained were stripped of their power and cursed with a death sight. The death sight forces halflings to see all living creatures in a state of death and decay. This sight has a physical manifestation within halflings manifested by their green eyes which tend to flare and glow when their emotions run high.

Personality: A simple people, Halflings are kind and warm towards others. They can almost always be found smiling and pointing out the finer points of life. Secretly however, many Halflings long for the power they once held. They are known to carry grudges and are exceptionally cruel to those they hate.

Physical Description: Their hair color varies greatly, though most go grey by late adulthood. Eye color is always green for Halflings due to their past dealings with necromancy.

Lands: After the curse, the Halflings settled into the Fire Plains and the Plains of Sorrow.

Religion: Halflings outwardly show no preference to the gods. Within their own communities, those who still follow the old ways give their faith to the Moon.

Language: The Halflings have no specific language of their own. They typically learn Cerian as they tend to normally interact with humans. Those that practice the old ways tend to also speak Derish.

Halfling thoughts on the other races

Cushani: Never forget: when traveling with Cushani; anyone that's not a kitty is just rations they don't have to carry.

Dragonborn: Short on sense of humor, long on sense of honor. Good in a fight, good for a promise, really horribly bad as an enemy.

Dwarves: They think we're hilarious.

Eladrin: Just showed up one day, and act like they're owed something. They're the Elves' elves, more elf than any Elf, and not necessarily in a good way.

Elves: Don't doubt that they're watching us. Of the few races that have been around long enough to remember where we came from, only the Elves really care.

Half-Elves: Pretty humans, or ugly Elves, depending on how you look at them.

Humans: Excellent fun: smart enough to trust at your back, dumb enough to send charging in first.

Tieflings: Great companions, as long as you're travelling the same path. I don't recommend ever thwarting one in his quest. Ever. That's when you see the demon come out.

Halfling thoughts on one another

"Everything moves around in cycles – Ilius up, Ilius down, Ilius up again. Our time will come again, never fear. But while we wait, how's about another round of dice?"

- Kitzin Greenshoe, Halfling rogue

Human

“Never know what to expect with humans. Could be priests, could be beggars, could be soldiers. Luckily, most of them dress the part, and they all bleed red.”

- Rok Caldera, Winkar fighter

RACIAL TRAITS

Please see the D&D 4E PLAYER’S HANDBOOK for the racial traits of the Human.

The last of the divine races, humans were created by the Sun along with the dwarves and elves. Created to be the masters of heart, they brought emotion to the world through song and action. Humans are capable of adapting to any situation and have the flexibility to do what is needed. Where the other divine races do not have specific roles, humans fill the void.

Today, humans can be found nearly anywhere in the world filling a large variety of roles from king to beggar. Unlike the other divine races, humans are only united together based on their regional location, not as a whole.

Personality: Humans have an inner resolve that drives them further than any other race. This is referred to as the human spirit by the other races. This spirit has helped humans become a vastly diverse people, offering a wide range of outlooks and motivations.

Physical Description: Depending on the region, humans vary greatly in the appearance. Helvadians tend to have blonde or brown hair mixed with blue or green eyes and known for having beards. Humans of Solis and Ro tend to have darker hair color mixed with brown and black eyes. The humans of Fao typically have dark hair and dark, almond shaped eyes.

Lands: Humans occupy many of the regions within Falamar including Aiyia, Fao, Helvada, Ilium, Iso’Latarin, Karsari, Ro and Solis.

Religion: Humans are known to be split evenly when deciding which religion to follow.

Language: The human language is Cerian.

Human thoughts on the other races

Cushani: Imagine a common cat, hunting mice in a barn. It has all the cunning and strength it needs to be the perfect predator for a little squeaky mouse. Now, imagine you are the mouse.

Dragonborn: Cut adrift in the world, they only want to survive and make a place for themselves. A humble ambition that should be respected.

Dwarves: Stalwart companions, with the intensity to see them through their long years.

Eladrin: Too soon to name them enemy, but neither would it be wise to call them friend. They’ve been gone a long time, and who knows where they’ve been.

Elves: Longevity is not the same thing as quality. When you have so many moments in your life, you forget to live in all of them.

Half-Elves: They hate themselves enough, there’s no reason to pile it on. Why blame the child for the parents’ indiscretions?

Halfings: Cheerful companions, horrendous enemies.

Tieflings: Unholy taint is writ upon their very flesh and bones. This is not an accident of birth, but the lasting effect of an evil choice. Always bear this in mind when dealing with the horned ones.

Human thoughts on one another

“If there’s one thing we’re great at, it’s everything.”

- Crystia Lightstep, Human Rogue

Tiefling

"It is the nature all creatures to either be exactly what they appear to be, or to be exactly the opposite of what they appear to be. But that's nature. There is nothing natural about what the Tieflings appear to be."

- Marlowe Farseer, Human Ranger

RACIAL TRAITS

Please see the D&D 4E PLAYER'S HANDBOOK for the racial traits of the Tiefling.

During the first Night Reign, an old kingdom of humans made a pact with a sect of demons for the power to aid Ilius. During the first Night Reign, the tieflings served as warlords and generals in the armies of the Empire.

After Ilius' defeat, the tieflings were driven out from their homes to the far east where they struggled to come to terms with what they were and what they had done. After many generations of struggle and civil war, the tieflings have remerged united and hell-bent on correcting their ancestors, mistake and destroying Ilius once and for all.

Personality: Tieflings are a passionate and driven people. Due to the centuries of mistrust by the other races, tieflings have learned to rely on themselves to get things done in any way possible. When tieflings do interact with others, they strive for friendship and companionship using their natural charisma in hopes of convincing others to join them in their cause.

Physical Description: Tiefling appearance shows the price they have paid for power. They have horns upon their head as well as nonprehensile tails up to five feet in length. Their eyes are a solid color without pupils, and their hair has a range of colors similar to humans.

Lands: The tieflings have made their home in the kingdom of Sadire, east of the astral mountains.

Religion: The tieflings follow a strict set of laws within Sadire where the faith of the Moon has been outlawed. Those tieflings seeking the church of the Moon travel outside of the borders into other regions such as Ro or Solis. Most tieflings pay homage primarily to the Sun, and then to the Wyrms.

Language: The tieflings speaking Cerian normally, though Derish and Infernal are also common.

Tiefling thoughts on the other races

Cushani: Inscrutable creatures. They would have you believe they are nothing more than stomachs with claws, but there are thinking minds inside those furry heads.

Eladrin: They hold themselves aloof out of self-defense; this is no longer their world, and they cannot help but feel apart from it.

Elves: Our paths often cross, sometimes to assist us in our quest and sometimes to oppose us. But nearly always to manipulate us.

Dragonborn: Further proof, like ourselves, that one cannot judge a beast by its hide. Inside all that scaled armor and fearsome visage is a heart full of yearning and honor.

Dwarves: You will not encounter a more judgmental lot. They have the strength of their convictions, and to move them to sympathy is to move mountains.

Half-Elves: Less manipulative than Elves. Less fearful than Humans. Yet more than both.

Halfings: Cheerful and interesting companions, often with surprising depths of skill. Once committed, they can only help our cause.

Humans: There is very little trust to be found here. They look upon us, and cannot forget what our ancestors have done.

Tiefling thoughts on one another

"I seek to redeem that which has branded me unholy. There is no worthier pursuit in my life's days. I wouldn't call it a crusade, per se, but it is certainly a mission. Care to join?"

- Sigil Firsakaya, Tiefling cleric

Chapter 2: Paths of Destiny

The life of a normal adventurer is dangerous. The life of an adventurer in Night Reign is life-threatening. Those who choose a life of adventure have perfected the art of survival using blade and magic. Due to the hazards of the world, a new breed of adventurers have arisen to battle the darkness.

Within this chapter you will find information on six new classes, new paragon paths and new epic destinies. These new options are designed for the Night Reign Campaign Setting, but can be used in other settings with little change.

Classes

Circle Dancer

Empowered by the Sun, the circle dancers pull the enemy into their fighting circle and dispatch them with quick and devastating attacks.

Destiny Knight

Mounted knights in shining armor, the destiny knights use their gifts from the Sun to manipulate the battlefield in their favor.

Judge

Empowered by the Sun to judge the actions of others, these leaders drive their allies into combat and judge their enemies harshly.

Martial Artist

The martial artist is a striker who has found harmony between the body and the mind. Harnessing the power of Ch'i, their training focuses on channeling that power into their fighting abilities.

Summoner

The summoner is a controller who uses creatures to wreak havoc on the battlefield through a catalog of creatures.

Warlock (Sun pact)

The sunlock is a warlock who has made a pact with the Sun to be his avenging angel against the minions of the Moon. Imbued with the radiant fire of the Sun itself, the sunlock is driven to demonstrate the righteous power of the Sun to all.

Paragon Paths

The Night Reign has come before, and the disciplines of survival from ages past resurface now, in the new darkness. Those who wish to survive the horrors of the world and drive the darkness back find themselves learning of these ancient ways and adapting them to the modern world.

Epic Destinies

Mastering the paths and braving the horrors of the world are the stuff of legend. When adventurers have reached this point, they are ready to leave their mark for the world to watch in awe and aspire to.

Ancestor Incarnate

The ancestor incarnate is a martial artist who has found perfection and has ascended to the highest order of spiritual awareness and being.

Entropic Dancer

The entropic dancer is a warrior who has embraced the fate of violence, become the chaos of battle. Wherever they walk, death is not far behind.

Horde Master

The horde master is a summoner of legend, a master of creatures that form an unstoppable army that few can hope to hold back.

Solar Champion

There are those who hope to bring the light back to the world, and then there are those who are the light made flesh. The solar champion does not merely fight in the name of the Sun. This warrior is the Sun's chosen vessel in battle.

Supreme Judge

The personification of law, the supreme judge is the Sun's command given form. The law of the world is meant to be obeyed, and those who do not follow its tenets are to be judged.

Circle Dancer

“The circle is life. The circle is death. Join me in the circle and let’s see which one you are.”

Class Features: Circle of Power, Dancer’s Challenge, Solar Weapon, Wise Defense

The Circle Dancer is a striker who focuses on combat within a ritual circle. Honorable and deadly, circle dancers have been called upon for thousands of years to serve as duelists for the elite and the military. For the circle dancer, life moves from one duel to the next.

Creating a Circle Dancer

You can choose any circle dancer powers you like for your character though circle dancers fall into two groups, the ritual dancer and the storm dancer. Circle Dancers focus on either Dexterity or Wisdom for their attacks and Constitution to augment their powers.

Ritual Dancer

You specialize in one-on-one combat using your weapon of choice. With your powers you are able to knock your opponent in and out of your circle. Your best ability score is Dexterity which is used from your primary attacks. Constitution is helpful in augmenting your powers and your Circle of Power damage. Select powers that are melee-focused to take advantage of your high Dexterity.
Suggested Feat: Empowered Circle
Suggested Skills: Acrobatics, Endurance, Insight
Suggested At-Will Powers: side step, stutter step
Suggested Encounter Power: push back
Suggested Daily Power: essence backlash

Storm Dancer

You specialize in handling multiple foes at once. With your implement, you are able to attack using your circle, harming enemies within it. Your best ability score is Wisdom which is used from your primary attacks. Constitution is helpful in augmenting your powers and your Circle of Power damage. Select powers that are burst and ranged-focused.
Suggested Feat: Group Dancer
Suggested Skills: Acrobatics, Endurance, Perception
Suggested At-Will Powers: fire circle, sun snare
Suggested Encounter Power: spiteful flare
Suggested Daily Power: whirling waltz

Circle Dancer Class Features

Your class focuses on fighting within your circle of power and your chosen weapon helps augment your abilities within the circle.

Circle of Power

Your circle of power is the cornerstone of your fighting abilities. Many of your powers focus on fighting within the circle or pulling opponents in. Some ranges are based on the size of your circle of power. This is listed as follows:

Close Burst circle: These powers are centered on your circle of power and are the same size as your circle of power.

Circle of Power

Circle Dancer Feature

You create a circle of power around you for you to focus your energy and fight within.

At-Will ♦ Solar, Zone

Minor Action

(4 at 11th, 5 at 21st)

Effect: The burst creates a zone of power in which you fight. You gain a bonus to damage rolls against one enemy within the zone equal to your Constitution modifier. You can choose when to apply this damage. This damage can only be applied once per round.

Only one circle of power can be active at a time and lasts until the end of the encounter. If a new circle of power is created, the old one ends immediately along with any effects that may be associated with it.

Dancer's Challenge

When only one enemy is within your circle of power, you gain a +1 bonus to attack rolls and damage rolls against that target.

Implements

Your weapon adds its enhancement bonus to attack rolls and damage rolls and any extra damage granted by a property (if applicable) when used as an implement. You do not gain your weapon proficiency bonus to the attack roll when using your weapon as an implement.

CIRCLE DANCER OVERVIEW

Characteristics: You focus on solar virtues to move your opponents in and out of your circle, inflicting serious damage in the process.

Religion: Circle Dancers typically follow the path of the Sun as it is the center of their beliefs.

Race: Dwarves, Elves, Halflings and Humans all make good circle dancers.

Solar Weapons

In addition to the circle of power, circle dancers are known for the weapon that they use in their fighting. Choose a weapon group. When you use a weapon of that group within your circle of power, you gain its benefit.

Weapon	Effect Granted
Light Blade or Heavy Blade	+1 bonus to AC while in circle of power
Spear or Polearm	When you hit an enemy while in the circle of power, slide the target 1 square.
Axe or Hammer	While in the circle of power , reroll 1's on damage rolls made with the weapon.
Flail or Mace	When you hit an enemy while in the circle of power, you may shift 1 square.

Wise Defense

While not wearing heavy armor, you can choose to apply your Wisdom when determining your AC instead of your Dexterity or Intelligence.

Keyword: Circle

The circle dancer introduces a new keyword — circle. When a power has this keyword, the power can only be used if a circle of power is in effect and within line of sight. For example, in order to use the fire circle virtue, you must have a circle of power in effect.

You or your target do not have to be within the circle of power in order for this power to work. If your circle of power ends while a sustained power is in effect, and centered on your circle of power (i.e. a Zone), that power ends immediately.

Circle Dancer Virtues

Your powers are called virtues, gifts granted by the holy Sun. The circle dancer virtues focus on melee, ranged and burst attacks. Several powers also produce zones which tie to your circle of power. Some powers work better for ritual dancers, and some work better for storm dancers, but you can choose any power you like when you reach a level that allows you to choose a new power.

Earth Dancer

“The slow, steady beat of the heart is like the strength of the mountain. If you can achieve this, nothing can defeat you.”

Prerequisite: Circle Dancer class

The Earth Style of circle dancing is one of the oldest Dancing styles that still exists in the modern world. As the first offshoot from Horan’s solar style, the earth style focuses on defensive fighting to gain the perfect position from which to strike. The style was developed by Sir Wilvar Rockmoor, a dwarf of renowned abilities with an axe and shield. Rockmoor found Horan’s style to be too mobile for his stockier body. His studies and research brought him to study the mountains of Alakar where he drew upon the power of the earth to strengthen his abilities.

Class Features: Control Destiny, Fields of Evergreen, Mounted Superiority, Solar Steed

The Destiny Knights are stalwart knights, seeking to bring back the light and goodness to the world. With loyal steed and mighty lance, they charge head long into the dark, fearing nothing.

DESTINY KNIGHT OVERVIEW

Characteristics: You focus on mounted combat, using your lance in charge attacks to defeat your enemies.

Religion: Destiny Knights typically follow the path of the Sun as it is the center of their beliefs.

Race: Cushani, Dragonborn, Half Orcs, Half Elves and Humans all make good destiny knights.

Creating a Destiny Knight

You can choose any powers you like for your character. Destiny knights fall into two groups; the Knight Errant and the Knight Enforcer.

Knight Errant

You are the knight in shining armor. With your loyal steed and deadly lance you deliver justice to the wicked. Your best ability score is Strength. Constitution is helpful in augmenting your powers. Select powers that include your mount for maximum effect.

Suggested Feat: Forceful Lance

Suggested Skills: Athletics, Endurance, Intimidation

Suggested At-Will Powers: Helpful Hand, Viridian Flare Strike

Suggested Encounter Power: Knockback Blow

Suggested Daily Power: Aura of Hope

Knight Enforcer

You are a knight of destiny. With your insight into the destiny of all things, you steer your allies onto the path of victory. Your best ability score is Charisma. Constitution is helpful in augmenting your powers. Select powers that mark your enemies to take advantage of your control destiny.

Suggested Feat: Retributive Destiny

Suggested Skills: Diplomacy, Insight, Intimidation

Suggested At-Will Powers: Painful Decisions, Intimidating Visage

Suggested Encounter Power: Slash and Kick

Suggested Daily Power: Path of Thorns

Destiny Knight Class Features

Your class focuses on mounted combat and intimidating your enemies. Choose between either the Knight Errant or the Knight Enforcer.

Knight Errant

The knight errant focuses on mounted combat and defending their allies during combat. Your steed gains the following special ability.

Special Ability (Encounter): Minor Action. The solar steed grants its rider or an adjacent ally a power bonus to all defenses equal to 1 + your Constitution modifier until the end of your next turn.

Knight Enforcer

The knight enforcer focuses on drawing enemy attacks away from their allies. Your steed gains the following special ability.

Special Ability (Encounter): Minor Action. The solar steed may mark a number of targets within a close burst 3 equal to 1 + your Charisma modifier until the end of your next turn.

Control Destiny

By tapping into the strands of fate and destiny, you marked a target and manipulate their actions.

Control Destiny

Destiny Knight Feature

You control the fate of your opponent's actions to help shield your allies from harm.

At-Will ◆ Solar

Close Burst 10

Target: One creature in burst

Effect: You mark the target. The target remains marked until you use this power against another target. If you mark other creatures using other powers, the target is still marked. A creature can be subject to only one mark at a time.

If your marked target makes an attack that doesn't include you as a target and hits, you can, as an immediate reaction, force the target to reroll the attack roll and keep the lower of the two rolls.

Mounted Superiority

You receive the following benefits while you are mounted on your solar steed.

- ◆ You gain Mounted Combat as a bonus feat
- ◆ You can mount or dismount your steed as a move action
- ◆ You gain a +2 bonus to saving throws against an effect that knocks you prone while mounted.

Solar Steed

You gain a steed to accompany you. Your steed can appear as any creature you wish, though that creature should generally be four-legged and large-sized.

Should your solar steed die in the course of your adventures, you have learned the Raise Solar Steed ritual, which allows you to raise your steed from the dead, even if you are otherwise unable to master and perform rituals.

Solar Steed

From the class skills listed below, choose three more trained skills at 1st level.

Class Skills: Bluff (Cha), Diplomacy (Cha), Endurance (Con), Heal (Wis), Insight (Wis), Intimidate (Cha), Perception (Wis), Streetwise (Cha)

Class Features: Judgment, Ritual Casting, Solar Aura

The Judge is the will of the Sun. It is a Judge’s duty to bring the will of the Sun to the people and to the darkness. Those who stand in the dark shall be judged for their worthiness.

JUDGE OVERVIEW

Characteristics: You focus on solar virtues to heal and provide your allies with extra attacks.

Religion: Judges almost always follow the Sun.

Race: Cushani, Dragonborn, Half Elves, Halflings, Humans and Tieflings all make good judges.

Creating a Judge

You can choose any judge powers you like for your character. Judges fall into two groups, the Judge of War and the Judge of Peace.

Judge of War

You specialize helping your allies in combat with extra and triggered attacks. Your best ability score is Charisma, which is used from your primary attacks. Constitution is helpful in augmenting your powers.

Suggested Feat: Sun Commanding Aura

Suggested Skills: Diplomacy, Endurance

Suggested At-Will Powers: leniency, rush the verdict

Suggested Encounter Power: contempt of court

Suggested Daily Power: guiding leadership

Judge of Peace

You specialize in helping your allies defense and attacks. Your best ability score is Charisma, which is used from your primary attacks. Wisdom is helpful in augmenting your powers.

Suggested Feat: Sun Empowered Aura

Suggested Skills: Diplomacy, Insight

Suggested At-Will Powers: just cause, precedence

Suggested Encounter Power: tide of the sun

Suggested Daily Power: golden smite

Judge Class Features

Your class focuses on healing and improving your allies and granting them extra attacks based on certain conditions.

Implements

Add your hammer or rod's enhancement bonus to attack rolls and damage rolls and any extra damage granted by a property (if applicable) when used as an implement. You can still use the power even if you don't have an implement.

Judgment

Your power as a Judge gives you influence over the actions of others. When an action takes place, you judge how it should be responded to.

Vengeful Judgment

Judge Feature

You judge the attack guilty and command your ally to counterattack their opponent.

Encounter (Special) ♦ Solar

Immediate Reaction Close Burst 5

Trigger: An ally takes damage in burst

Effect: The ally makes an immediate basic attack against the creature who hit them. If the attack is successful, the target gains a bonus to the damage roll equal to your Wisdom or Constitution modifier, whichever is higher.

Favorable Judgment

Judge Feature

You judge the attack guilty and assist your ally in recovering from the strike.

Encounter (Special) ♦ Healing, Solar

Minor Action Close Burst 5

(10 at 11th, 15 at 21st)

Effect: The target may spend a healing surge. If the target is within your Solar Aura, they gain temporary hit points equal to your Wisdom (Empowering Aura) or Constitution (Protecting Aura) modifier + half your level.

Level 6: +1d6 hit points

Level 11: +2d6 hit points

Level 16: +3d6 hit points

Level 21: +4d6 hit points

Level 26: +5d6 hit points

Special: You may use this power twice per encounter but only once per round. At 16th level, you can use this power three times per encounter.

Ritual Casting

You gain Ritual Caster as a bonus feat. You have a ritual book that contains your rituals. You begin with 2 rituals of your choice. At 11th and 21st level, you gain 2 more rituals of your choice.

Solar Aura

As a judge of the sun, you radiate an aura around you that either empowers your allies or commands them in battle. Choose one of the following:

Protecting Aura (aura 1): An ally who is within the aura gains resist melee and ranged damage equal to 1 + half your Constitution modifier. This resistance increases to resist melee and ranged 3 + half your Constitution modifier at 21st level.

Empowering Aura (aura 1): An ally who is healed while within the aura regains extra hit points equal to 2 + half your Wisdom modifier. This increases to 4 + half your Wisdom modifier hit points at 21st level.

Judge Virtues

Your powers are called virtues, gifts granted by the Sun. The virtues focus on ranged and burst powers that assist your allies. Some powers work better for the Judge of War and some work better for Judge of Peace, but you can choose any power you like when you reach a level that allows you to choose a new power.

Level 1 At-Will Virtues

Class Skills: Acrobatics (Dex), Athletics (Str), Endurance (Con), Insight (Wis), Perception (Wis), Stealth (Dex)

Class Features: Unarmed Combat, Pressure Points, Fleet of Foot, Martial Art Fighting Forms

The Martial Artist can trace his roots back to the beginning of the Fao Empire at the start of the Fourth Age. The founders of the Empire were children of the Shan'ree who taught them the secrets of the inner soul and its connection with all things. By tapping into that connection, the martial artist can use the abilities of spirits, animals and the elements.

The martial artists focus their fighting abilities into a series of kata. These series of moves are designed to allow the martial artist to achieve maximum efficiency in their attacks by chaining attacks together for a more powerful outcome.

1. Quote from Bruce Lee

Creating a Martial Artist

You can choose any martial artist powers you like for your character. Martial artists fall into two groups, the tiger form martial artist and the mantis form martial artist.

Tiger Form Martial Artist

You are interested in taking the fight to the enemy using your katas to devastate your opponents. You prefer dragon claws or katana when you must use a weapon. Your best ability score is Strength. Dexterity is helpful in augmenting your powers. Select powers that are tied to your Face Rake power to make the most out of your attack chains.

Suggested Feat: Tiger Form Master

Suggested Skills: Acrobatics, Athletics, Endurance

Suggested At-Will Powers: headlock, roundhouse

Suggested Encounter Power: glorious feline pounce

Suggested Daily Power: claws of the tiger

Mantis Form Martial Artist

As opposed to the external and offensive form, you focus internally, using defense to establish your offensive capabilities. Weapons such as the nunchaku and the staff are helpful tools when needed. Like the tiger form, Strength is your greatest asset. After that, Wisdom helps your combat powers. Select powers that are tied to your High Guard power to make the most out of your katas.

Suggested Feat: Mantis Form Master

Suggested Skills: Acrobatics, Athletics, Insight

Suggested At-Will Powers: horizon swing, spirit drain

Suggested Encounter Power: smash the spirit

Suggested Daily Power: carapace blow

Martial Artist Class Features

Your class features depend on the build and fighting form you choose.

Fleet of Foot

While in light or no armor, you gain a +1 bonus to your Speed. In addition, you ignore the first square of difficult terrain you move into each round. You still may not shift into difficult terrain.

Martial Art Fighting Forms

Choose one of the following fighting styles and gain its benefit.

Tiger Form: You have trained to fight as a tiger, using your fingers as claws to rip at your opponents. This fighting form focuses on increasing the damage you inflict on your opponent. You focus on Strength and Wisdom for your powers. You gain the following:

- ◆ +1 bonus to AC while in no or light armor. You may substitute Wisdom for Dexterity or Intelligence for determining your bonus to AC while in no or light armor. Increase this bonus to +2 at 21st level.
- ◆ Unarmed attacks deal 1d10 damage instead of 1d8.
- ◆ Resist melee damage equal to half your Wisdom modifier.
- ◆ For katas, the tiger minor powers are face rake, spirit drain and throat jab.

Mantis Form: You have training to fight as a mantis, a powerful yet more defensive minded fighting form. This fighting form focuses on defense and status effects on your target. You focus on Strength and Dexterity for your powers. You gain the following:

- ◆ +2 bonus to AC while in no or light armor. Increase this bonus to +3 at 21st level.
- ◆ +2 bonus to Reflex. Increase this bonus to +3 at 21st level.
- ◆ Resist melee damage equal to half your Wisdom modifier +1.
- ◆ For katas, the mantis minor powers are high guard, horizon swing and roundhouse.

Unarmed Combat

Martial Artists are trained to fight with their entire body as a living weapon. Martial Artists can choose to attack with any part of their body which is considered a weapon. Unarmed attacks have a +3 proficiency bonus to attack rolls and deal 1d8 damage.

MARTIAL ARTIST OVERVIEW

Characteristics: You focus on katas to give you an edge in combat. You are moderately resilient in battle.

Religion: Martial Artist usually prefer to follow the Wyrms of the Seasons.

Race: Cushani, Dragonborn and Humans all make good martial artists.

Pressure Points

When you make a damage roll on a target, you can declare that target as under the effect of pressure point as a free action. When you declare that pressure point is active, choose between a standard action and a move action.

Any time the target takes an action that you declared, they suffer damage (save ends) depending on your level. This damage may only be applied once per round. If the target takes more than one of your declared action in the same round, they do not suffer the damage again. The pressure point effect remains active until the target succeeds on a saving throw.

Level	Pressure Point Damage
1st-10th	1d6
11th-20th	2d6
21st-30th	3d6

New Keyword: Kata

The kata represents the ability to chain attack powers together. When you fulfill the requirements for a kata, you gain a kata benefit to your attack. You may only gain the benefit from one kata, regardless of how many you qualify for.

◆ Encounter Katas: To gain a kata effect for an encounter power, you must use either a tiger form at-will power or a mantis at-will power within one round prior to using the encounter power. The at-will power and the encounter power must target the same creature. The at-will power does not need to hit the creature to make the kata available for the encounter power.

◆ Daily Katas: To gain a kata effect for a daily power, you must use either a tiger or mantis form at-will power or an encounter power within one round prior to using the daily power. The at-will or encounter power and the daily power must target the same creature. The at-will or encounter power does not need to hit the creature to make the kata available for the daily power.

Target: One creature
Attack: Strength vs. AC

Hit: 3 [W] + Strength modifier damage, and the target is knocked prone and unconscious until the end of your next turn.

Major Kata: You regain an encounter discipline.

Minor Tiger Kata: The target is unconscious (save ends).

Miss: Half damage, and the target is knocked prone.

Ninja

"I do not exist. I am but a figment of your imagination."

Prerequisite: Martial Artist class

Instead of mastering the brute strength of the Tiger or the stout defense of the Mantis, you have chosen to focus on the art of stealth. You are an assassin, yet you despise the scoundrels that dirty the name. You understand that there is honor in serving one's lord and that in order for your lord's honor to be true, you must live the life of dishonor for him.

To be ninja is to not exist at all. For an assassin, life is to be eternally within the shadows of society. Though most ninja are in service to a lord, some find themselves outside of normal society and forced into the life of an adventurer as a mercenary or assassin for hire.

Ninja Path Features

Hidden Soul (11th Level): When an adjacent enemy grants you combat advantage, you gain concealment against that target for as long as they grant you combat advantage.

Hidden Blade (11th Level): When you spend an action point, you gain +1 to your reach and you have threatening reach until the end of your next turn.

Hidden Reserve (16th Level): When you reduce an enemy to 0 hit points or fewer, you gain a number of temporary hit points equal to your Wisdom modifier.

Ninja Disciple Powers

Ninja Attack 11

You make a simple attack, lulling your opponent into a false sense of advantage.

Encounter ◆ Ch'i, Kata, Weapon
Standard Action Melee Weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Strength vs. AC

Hit: Strength modifier damage. The next attack roll the target makes takes a penalty to the attack roll equal to 3 + your Wisdom modifier.

Minor Tiger Kata: The target takes an additional 2 [W] damage.

Minor Mantis Kata: The target grants combat advantage to you until the end of your next turn.

Art of Flight

Ninja Utility 12

Like the wind you jump. No wall and no obstacle can stand in your way as you descend upon your prey.

Encounter ◆ Ch'i
Free Action Personal

Effect: Until the end of the encounter, you gain a +5 power bonus to Athletic checks and you may jump twice as far without the need for movement.

Art of the Unseen

Ninja Attack 20

Through cunning you strike your opponent, and through trickery you slip from sight.

Daily ◆ Ch'i, Kata, Weapon
Standard Action Melee Weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Strength vs. AC

Hit: 4 [W] + Strength modifier damage, and the target grants combat advantage to you and your allies (save ends).

Effect: You are invisible until the end of the encounter or until you attack.

Major Kata: You can make a Stealth check against the target to attempt to remain invisible.

Minor Mantis Kata: Until the end of the encounter, you gain a +2 power bonus to damage rolls and +2 bonus to Acrobatic checks.

Minor Tiger Kata: Until the end of the encounter, you gain a +2 bonus to Stealth and Athletic checks.

Summoner

“So you think that I am alone? How horribly mistaken you are.”

CLASS TRAITS

Hit Points per Level Gained: 4

Healing Surges per Day: 6 + Constitution modifier

Trained Skills: Arcana.

From the class skills listed below, choose three more trained skills at 1st level.

Class Skills: Arcana (Int), Bluff (Cha), Diplomacy (Cha), Dungeoneering (Wis), Endurance (Con), Insight (Wis), Intimidate (Cha), Nature (Wis), Religion (Int)

Class Features: Creature Knowledge, Ritual Casting, Summon Esper, Tome of Creatures

The Summoner is a master of conjuring effects and summoning mythical creatures. From walls of fire to the powerful dragon, a summoner uses his solar ability to invoke the essence and true name of a creature.

Due to their intense study, Summoners are not as well versed in magical spells as wizards, however the horde of creatures that Summoners can call upon gives them a powerful edge in combat.

SUMMONER OVERVIEW

Characteristics: You focus on solar virtues to inflict status effects on your opponents and summoning big creatures to do the major fighting.

Religion: Summoners typically worship the Sun as it promotes life and creation.

Race: Dragonborn, Cushani, Half Elves, Halflings, Humans and Tieflings all make good summoners.

Creating a Summoner

You can choose any summoner powers you like for your character. Summoners fall into two groups, Conjurer and Occultist.

Conjurer

You focus on virtues involving your espers to funnel powers through them. Charisma is your primary attribute used for your attack virtues. Your Constitution modifier augments your espers.

Suggested Feat: Combat Teamwork

Suggested Skills: Arcana, Endurance, Insight

Suggested At-Will Powers: aster's Strike, Wave of Despair

Suggested Encounter Power: Shadow Stampede

Suggested Daily Power: Watch Dogs

Occultist

You focus on virtues that affect large amounts of creatures as possible and using your espers as a supplemental form of control. Charisma is the primary attribute used for your attack virtues.

Your Wisdom modifier augments your powers.

Suggested Feat: Forbidden Knowledge

Suggested At-Will Powers: Sting of the Bee, Stinkbug Surprise

Suggested Encounter Power: Ice Beetle

Suggested Daily Power: Gremlin Menace

Summoner Class Features

Your class represents knowledge and power over creatures that you can summon.

Creature Knowledge

A Summoner has a vast understanding of a variety of creatures throughout the world and planes. With that extensive knowledge, summoners are able to identify creatures more easily. A summoner receives a +2 bonus on Monster Knowledge checks.

Implements

Summoners make use of orbs, soul gems, and staves to help channel and direct their solar powers. Without an implement, summoners can still use their powers. A summoner wielding a soul gem, staff, or orb can add its enhancement bonus to the attack rolls and the damage rolls of summoner powers, as well as summoner paragon path powers that have the implement keyword.

Ritual Casting

You gain the Ritual Caster feat as a bonus feat. You possess a ritual book that contains three level 1 rituals of your choice.

Tome of Creatures

A summoner studies and learns about a variety of different creatures. From these studies, summoners can apply certain origins to the espers they summon, even if the creature is of a different origin.

When summoners summon an esper, they can choose to apply an additional creature origin. The esper gains an ability based on the new origin applied. For purpose of powers, espers are considered to be apart of both origins.

A summoner knows one origin at 1st level. They gain an second origin at 11th level and a third origin at 21st level. Summoned espers may only have one origin applied to them for the encounter, and the esper maintains its natural origin.

Origin	Effect Granted
Aberrant	Powers that originate from the esper have their reach extended by one. This does not apply to burst or blast powers.
Elemental	As a free action, you can change the damage type of a virtue that originates from your esper to Cold, Fire, Lightning or Thunder.
Fey	The esper gains a +2 bonus to AC.
Immortal	The esper gains extra hit points equal to 5 + your Constitution modifier.
Natural	The esper gains +1 bonus to their Fortitude, Reflex and Will defenses.
Shadow	The esper gains concealment if they move more than 3 squares on their turn.

Esper

Powers that include “esper” as part of the range treat your esper as the origin square for the power.

Summon Esper

You summon an esper to assist you. Choose one of the listed espers to be your summoned esper. At 6th level, you can choose a second esper. At 11th level you can choose a third, at 16th you can choose a fourth, at 21st you can choose a fifth and at 26th level you can choose a sixth esper.

You can only have one esper active during an encounter. If you summon a second esper, the summon esper power fails.

Warlock (Sun Pact)

The dwarves are well known as the voice of the gods and their religious practices. So it comes as no surprise that they are also known for fully embracing the sun pact warlocks. They know that now, with the Night Reign in complete control, it is time for the wrath of the Sun to be felt. The Sun pact warlocks deliver on this objective.

Half elves are also quite commonly found among the ranks of the sun pact warlocks, for their desire for freedom is shared by the beings that serve the Sun. Very little convincing is needed to forge a pact with a half elf and those that take it are some of the most powerful warlocks in the land.

The warlock class is defined in the D&D 4E PLAYER'S HANDBOOK. This section describes a new warlock pact available to choose from when you create a warlock.

Sun Pact Class Feature

You have forged a pact with the celestial creatures loyal to the Sun who have been imprisoned by the Moon. Though the sun is viewed by the general populace as a being of goodness, you know his vengeful side. His anger knows no bounds, and though he cannot take life, you have promised your soul in exchange for the power to do his bidding.

Burning Light: You know the burning light or the sun burn at-will spell.

Solar Flare Aura: You have the Solar Flare Aura pact boon. You draw upon the life force of those around you to empower your solar flare. Your solar flare aura is off at the beginning of an encounter.

When an enemy under your Warlock's curse is reduced to 0 hit points or fewer, increase the Solar Flare Aura by 1 until the end of your next turn when the aura turns off. An enemy that begins their turn or enters the aura takes radiant damage equal to your Constitution modifier. Allies who begin their turn or enters the aura regains hit points equal to your Constitution modifier.

Paragon Paths

Bloodcrest Archer

"I am death incarnate. Lay down your sword and meet the Sun with your head held high, for you have died for a purpose."

Prerequisite: Ranger Class, Archer Fighting Style

You are an elite archer, a master of the bow and arrow that few can hope to match. The origins of the bloodcrest archer lie in the history of the eladrin during the first Night Reign.

The Bloodcrest Path teaches that the bow and arrow are extensions of your soul and flesh. You must allow the bow to become a part of you and, therefore, a part of your anger. By focusing your anger through the bow, you can unleash a powerful wave of arrows to defeat any foe before you.

Bloodcrest Archer Path Features

Bloodbow (11th Level): Choose between long bow and the short bow. Gain a +2 bonus to attack rolls and damage rolls with your chosen weapon against your quarry.

Blood Arrow (11th Level): You can spend an action point to increase your hunter's quarry die type by one step (i.e. d6 becomes d8 or d8 becomes d10) until the end of your next turn, instead of taking an extra action.

Crest Shield (16th Level): Your chosen bow is now considered a melee weapon in addition to its other properties. The bow has a +2 proficiency bonus to attack rolls and deals 1d8 damage.

Bloodcrest Archer Powers

Twin Blood Arrow Bloodcrest Archer Attack 11

A steady hand ensures that the arrow flies true.

Encounter ♦ Martial, Weapon

Quickstep

Bloodcrest Archer Utility 12

When the enemy advances, you let them have your ground so you can gain a better tactical position.

Encounter ♦ Martial

Immediate Interrupt Personal

Trigger: An enemy moves to an adjacent square to you

Effect: Shift 1 square and gain a bonus to your AC and Reflex equal to your Wisdom modifier until the end of your next turn.

Bloodsplash Arrow Bloodcrest Archer Attack 20

Your arrow strikes the target, sending splinters, blood and bone flying in all directions.

Daily ♦ Martial, Weapon

Standard Action Ranged Weapon

Attack: Dexterity vs. AC

Hit: 3 [W] + Dexterity modifier damage.

Effect: Each enemy adjacent to the target takes damage equal to your Dexterity modifier.

Karsarian Warmage

"I have been trained by the most powerful wizards to bring destruction down upon my enemies. I honor the Order, and I honor my employer. My loyalty is to the highest bidder."

Prerequisite: Wizard Class

You have been trained at the Arcane Order of Magical Arts in Karsari. As the last of the arcane colleges with roots in Iso'Latarin, your knowledge and ability are vast.

As part of the Order, your services are for sale to merchants and trading companies who desire protection and a strong magical arm to deter any unwanted acts of piracy.

You are loyal to your employer, for you have your status to maintain, and the Arcane Order frowns on bribery. You make the best of any situation, and should some unlucky pirate or bandit attempt to raid the caravan you guard, you cut loose with devastating efficiency.

Karsarian Warmage Path Features

Arcane Element (11th Level): Choose one of the following: Cold, Fire, Lightning or Thunder. You can convert a damage roll from an attack power to the chosen damage type.

Arcane Explosion (11th Level): When you spend an action point, all burst and blast attack powers increase in size by 1 until the end of your next turn.

Arcane Destruction (16th Level): When you spend an action point, all burst and blast attack powers deal extra damage equal to your Intelligence modifier until the end of your next turn.

Effect: Regain an immediate of a used encounter or daily spell equal to or lower than 20th level. You must use this power immediately or it is lost.

Peacekeeper

"The blood of Pelus runs through my veins, the blood of gods."

Prerequisite: Fighter Class

You are a knight of the Kingdom of Ro. Training in the fighting style and form that Pelus the Peacekeeper created, you stand vigil against the darkness, a classical knight in shining armor.

The Peacekeepers began as the personal guard for King Pelus Ro during the Age of Heroes. As the family of Pelus continued to grow, more and more descendants of the king were drawn into the Peacekeeper organization. Due to his extended life, Pelus had more than fifty children which grew into the fifty noble houses of Ro. Each house had representation within the organization to maintain its political and military strength.

During the Blood Culling, several of the noble houses betrayed the crown, which led to the downfall of the kingdom. Peacekeeper fought Peacekeeper in the streets of Ro-jah for a full season as their city and kingdom crumbled around them. When the dust had settled, the Peacekeepers were disbanded and those loyal to the Ilium Empire became Heaven Knights. Those Peacekeepers who refused either fled or were killed. Those who fled now roam the countryside, working to bring back the ideals of Pelus the Peacekeeper to their homeland.

Peacekeeper Path Features

Silver Fury (11th Level): When you spend an action point, until the end of your next turn, any successful attack that you make, the target is also immobilized (save ends) until the end of your current turn

Golden Valor (11th Level): If an adjacent ally is hit by an attack, reduce the damage taken by 1. This feature does not affect ongoing damage.

Bronze Heart (16th Level): When you are first bloodied during an encounter, you may spend a healing surge as an immediate reaction.

Peacekeeper Powers

Peacekeeper Justice Peacekeeper Attack 11

You force your foe to keep their eyes on you.

Standard Action Melee Weapon

Attack: Strength vs. AC

Hit: 4 [W] + Strength modifier damage, and the target is weakened (save ends). If the target is bloodied, they have a -2 penalty to end this condition.

Effect: All enemies within 2 squares of the target are weakened until the end of your next turn.

Strophion

“Show them what it means to be a soldier of Helvada. On my command, unleash hell.”

Prerequisite: Warlord Class

You are a leader in the army of Helvada. You inspire your troops to fantastic heroics and epic deaths.

The Helvadian army is known to be the greatest army in all of Falamor. For more than 3,000 years the culture of the Helvadan people has shaped their militaristic society to be the tip of the spear. All citizens of the Helvada nation know how to fight. The Strophion are those who can fight and lead. They lead by example and can always be found on the front line giving orders and dealing death. To be a Strophion is to be the ultimate Helvadian soldier.

Strophion Path Features

Wyvern Formation (11th Level): All allies within line of sight of you and within 10 squares gain a +2 bonus to saving throws versus fear and mind effects.

Griffon Formation (11th Level): When an ally spends an action point and they are within 10 squares of you and have line of sight, they may shift 1 square and gain a +1 bonus to AC until the end of their next turn as apart of their extra action

Hydra Formation (16th Level): When you spend an action point, instead of gaining an extra action, all allies who can see you within 10 squares may make a saving throw against each effect that a save can end with a +2 bonus.

Encounter ♦ Healing, Martial, Weapon

Attack: Dexterity vs. AC

Hit: 3 [W] + Strength modifier damage. Any ally adjacent to the target gains a free basic melee attack. The ally may add half your level to the attack roll and damage roll for this basic attack against the target.

Miss: Two allies within 5 squares of you may spend a healing surge.

Sun Wielder

“The Betrayer may have risen again, but as before, the Sun shall rise and cast out the darkness.”

Prerequisite: Cleric Class

You have been touched by the Sun and his burning light. The gift of sunlight is your weapon of choice, and the denizens of the dark fear your name.

As a sun wielder, you have chosen to focus your wrath and power towards one particular evil blight of the world, the Breath of Ilius. The malignant evil that preys on the living has no master and destroys everything that it touches. You aim to stop it from spreading further, and eventually you will find its source and bring the light of the Sun to that dark and unholy place to end the threat forever.

Sun Wielder Path Features

Sun’s Shield (11th Level): You and your allies within 5 squares may make an immediate save to end a condition inflicted by the Breath. This immediate save is made the first time the effect has been inflicted by the Breath per encounter.

Prayer of Restful Peace (11th Level): Those people and bodies touched by the Sun Wielder cannot be raised as undead by the Breath. This is a minor action that requires physical contact and lasts until the end of the encounter.

Sun’s Conduit (16th Level): When engaging in a skill challenge to defeat the Breath, you gain an automatic success on your first skill roll. All subsequent rolls gain a +2 bonus.

Standard Action Close Burst 10

Attack: Wisdom vs. Fortitude

Hit: 5d10 + Wisdom modifier radiant damage.

Effect: Until the end of the encounter, any skill challenge made against the Breath requires one less success to defeat the Breath.

Temporal Mage

"Time is like water. It is fluid and all encompassing. If you are not careful, you will drown."

Prerequisite: Wizard Class

You are a wizard trained in the arts of temporal magic. Time is an open book to you, and you can manipulate it to control your enemies.

Though the lands of Iso'Latarin have been lost, you have managed to either survive the fall or learn from one of the survivors. From your studies you have learned the connection between space and time, and you have witnessed the Flux Zone, a demiplane of time connected to the Crossroads. The zone gives you insight into how to manipulate time within the Prime.

Temporal Mage Path Features

Student of Time (11th Level): You automatically succeed on your first test on skill challenges involving History or Arcane.

Time Flux (11th Level): When you spend an action point, you can choose to reroll any roll and take the better of the two rolls instead of taking an extra action.

Temporal Paradox (16th Level): As an immediate reaction, you may spend an action point. Instead of taking an extra action, you can allow yourself or any ally within 5 squares to change a standard action, move action or minor action they have just taken. This can be done after the results of the action have been resolved. The results of initial action are removed and the action starts over.

Target: Each creature in burst

Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude

Hit: 4d10 + Intelligence modifier force damage.

Effect: The burst creates a zone of temporal distortions. Creatures that enter or begin their turn in the zone take 1d10 + your Intelligence modifier force damage and are slowed until the end of your next turn.

Sustain Minor: The zone persists.

Xionaire

"Remember the Ninth. We fight in their name and in their honor. Glory unto death."

Prerequisite: Ranger Class

You are an elite guard of the Helvada Kingdom. When the legions are unable to handle a situation, you are called upon, for there is no one better.

During the Blood Culling, the Xionaire were called to the front lines to assist with the civilian retreat to the north from the invading undead armies. The last stand at the capital was made by the 9th Legion of Xionaires mixed with regular citizens. Their brave and heroic stand is now legendary among the Helvadian people as a testament to their honor, bravery and fighting prowess.

Xionaire Path Features

Battlefield Master (11th Level): When you move at least 3 squares during your turn, you gain a +2 bonus to your AC.

Battlefield Frenzy (11th Level): Once per round, if you hit with both weapons on an attack, you may add your Wisdom modifier to one of the damage rolls.

Battlefield Supremacy (16th Level): When you spend an action point, you may shift a number of squares equal to your Dexterity modifier in addition to your extra action.

Xionaire Powers

Deadly Counter

Xionaire Attack 11

You take advantage of your opponent's attack to make a deadly counterattack.

Ancestor Incarnate

You have unlocked the secrets of the universe, which allows you to transcend your mortal body to become an incarnation of your ancestors.

Prerequisite: 21st level Martial Artist

You have ascended and go with the spirits of your ancestors. After a long journey of discovery, you have finally learned to channel your Ch'i to empower your body into a spiritual form.

Immortality

The ancestor incarnate has learned all there is to know from his ancestors. Once you have completed your epic quest, you ascend from your mortal body to join your ancestors.

Akashic Record: When you complete your epic quest, you leave the physical world behind and enter into the world of ancestor spirits. Your knowledge and power become the focus of study by younger generations of martial artists seeking enlightenment. You guide them on their journey so that one day, they can join you as an ancestor spirit.

Ancestor Incarnate Features

All Ancestor Incarnates have the following features.

Ancestral Touch (21st level): You can apply Pressure Points to any number of targets during an encounter.

Ancestral Form (24th level): Once per day, when you reach 0 hit points or fewer, your spirit leaves your body, becoming an ancestor spirit. While in this form, you are intangible and can fly equal to your speed.

While in this form, you have an Ancestral Aura (aura 2). Enemies that enter or begin their turn in the aura take damage equal to your Strength modifier.

At the end of the encounter, your spirit returns to your body and you are at 0 hit points and can be healed normally.

Ancestral Kata (30th level): You are able to apply both kata effects to a power if you have used both powers within 2 rounds.

Entropic Dancer

In a world full of chaos, your lust for combat has risen to a cacophony of destruction.

Prerequisite: 21st level Circle Dancer

You have spent your life in pursuit of the perfect fighting form. Through countless adventures you have honed your skills and defeated numerous adversaries. Through it all, you have become a symbol of destruction and chaos to the world.

Immortality

Entropic dancers are as chaotic as their fighting ability. Once their destiny has been fulfilled, their choice of path to follow is as random as the wind. The following section details a path entropic dancers have walked, but your path might vary.

The Storm: When you complete your epic quest, you withdraw from the world at large. You have mastered the art of martial combat of mortals. In your seclusion you begin to study the soul of entropy and the heart of chaos. Your study of the nature of chaos leads you to the ultimate fighting style privy only to the gods. As you master the fighting style, you merge with the heart and soul of entropy and become a being of chaos and destruction.

Entropic Dancer Features

All Entropic Dancer's have the following features.

Entropic Exploit (21st level): Choose one daily virtue that you know. You can now use that virtue as an encounter power rather than a daily power.

Unstoppable Storm (24th level): Any time you are inflicted by a slow effect, you automatically save against the effect. Any time you are inflicted by an immobilize or prone effect, you can make an immediate save with a +2 bonus to end the effect.

Chaos Blade (30th level): Once per day, you can declare your next attack roll to be a natural 20. This cannot be rerolled for any reason.

Entropic Dancer Virtue

Entropic Protection Entropic Dancer Utility 26

You pull upon the chaos of the world around you as a shield. Nothing is certain, not even death.

Daily ♦ Solar
Minor Action Personal

Effect: You gain resist all damage equal to half your level until the end of the encounter.

Horde Master

Angels and demons. Dragons and titans. Nothing is above your ability to call them to your side.

Prerequisite: 21st level Summoner

You are reached the height of summoning creatures. You have learned their names. You have taken control of all creatures. Nothing is out of your reach, and nothing can stand in your way.

Immortality

A Horde Master grows so accustomed to having creatures with him that he finds the world a lonely place. Once they have completed their final epic quest, many Horde Masters leave the normal world for wilder and more thriving planes of existence. The following section details a path that Horde Masters have walked, but your path might vary.

Fields of Life: When you complete your epic quest, you leave the world of mortal beings behind you. The conflicts and battles of individuals do not interest you any longer. Upon the fields of life there is a new world of creatures and beings that need direction. You find new creatures to help you and new wonders to see with your new companions.

Horde Master Features

All Horde Masters have the following features.

Unbounded Growth (21st level): Once per encounter when you summon a creature, you can designate that creature as large sized which occupies a 2 by 2 square.

Horde Tactics (24th level): When you spend an action point, each of your summons can shift 3 squares in addition to your extra action.

Unstoppable Army (30th level): When one of your summons reaches 0 or fewer hit points, it is immediately dismissed and replaced by one of your other summons. It occupies the same square that the fallen summon occupied.

Horde Master Virtue

Horde Horde Horde Master Utility 26

You open the gates and your loyal espers begin pouring out to control the battlefield.

Daily ♦ Solar
Standard Action Personal

Effect: Until the end of the encounter, any time you use the summon creature class feature, you may summon two espers instead of one. Each esper must be adjacent to one another when summoned. You may not summon the same esper twice and you may not include your paragon path esper with this power.

Solar Champion

Prerequisite: 21st level Destiny Knight

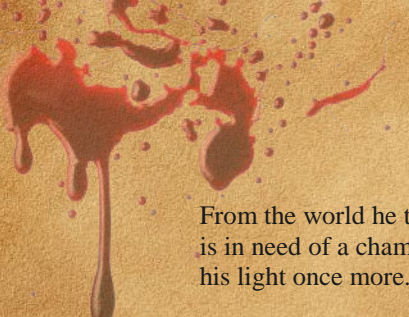

You have ventured through the lands of darkness as a beacon of light and hope in the name of the Sun. Even though the Sun is bound by the Moon, he is still all-seeing and all-knowing. He has chosen you to be his champion, to finally rid the world of the darkness, or at least deliver a spark of hope to the people.

Immortality

The Solar Champions are loyal and determined to make a difference in the world, even if that means that they have to move onto another land in order to fight the night. When their time arrives, the Sun has other quests and other needs for his champions. The following section details a path a Solar Champion may take, but your path might vary.

Sundown: You have completed your final quest against the darkness. You have shown the people that they do not have to fear the darkness and that they can rise up and fight for what they believe in. With your quest complete, you are lifted from the world by the Sun and are embraced in his holy light.

From the world he takes you to another land which is in need of a champion, a place for you to deliver his light once more.

Solar Champion Features

All Solar Champions have the following features.

Solar Binding (21st level): You may add the radiant damage type to all melee damage rolls you make. If the damage is already radiant, you may add your Charisma modifier as extra radiant damage to the damage roll.

Solar Blessing (24th level): When you use your last virtue encounter power that has the radiant keyword, you may regain the use of any virtue encounter that you know with the radiant keyword.

Bane of the Night (30th level): You have a Bane of Night Aura (aura 3). Any undead creature that begins its turn within the aura is weakened. As well, when you spend an action point, each creature within the aura is immobilized (save ends) in addition to your extra action.

Solar Champion Virtue

Circle of Life

Solar Champion Utility 26

There is no end, only rebirth. When the cycle completes its turn, you are renewed to fight again.

Daily ♦ Healing, Solar

Immediate Reaction Personal

Trigger: You are reduced to 0 or fewer hit points

Effect: You are healed to maximum hit points, and you regain all healing surges. You regain all powers that include the radiant keyword. In addition, all allies within 5 squares of you may spend a healing surge and regain extra hit points equal to your level.

Supreme Judge

Your constant valor and leadership have allowed you to merge with the Sun, becoming his direct instrument of justice.

Prerequisite: 21st level Judge

You are an avatar of the Sun, a being of sunlight, judgment and hope. The darkness runs from your presence to avoid punishment but you know that there is no place to hide from the light of the Sun.

Immortality

The Supreme Judge has judged the mortal world salvageable, but there is much to be done. It will take others to follow in your shining example to bring down the Night Reign.

Solar Nimbus: When you complete your epic quest, you become a nimbus of solar energy and light. A miniature sun for all the world to see. Though you do not directly interact with the world any longer, heroes and villains alike can see and feel your presence as you judge their actions and sentence them through other judges that follow you.

Supreme Judge Features

All supreme judges have the following features.

Supreme Presence (21st level): When an ally begins their turn in your solar, they gain regeneration equal to your Charisma modifier until the start of their next turn.

Solar Embodiment (24th level): Once per day, when you reach 0 hit points or fewer, your spirit leaves your body, becoming a floating sphere of light. While in this form, you are intangible and can fly equal to your speed.

While in this form, you may use any virtue that targets your allies. In addition, your solar aura increases to aura 5.

At the end of the encounter, your spirit returns to your body and you are at 0 hit points and can be healed normally.

Supreme Judgment (30th level): Any time you grant an ally an extra attack and that attack is successful, that ally may add half your level to the damage roll.

Supreme Judge Virtue

A Thousand Pardons

Supreme Judge Utility 26

Your judgment favors those loyal to the Sun, allowing them to fight on no matter the odds.

Daily ♦ Healing, Solar

Standard Action

Close Burst 10

Target: You and each ally in burst

Effect: Each target may spend a healing surge, and regain extra hit points equal to your level. In addition, until the end of the encounter, if the target drops to 0 or fewer hit points, they may make an immediate saving throw. If they succeed, they immediately regain hit points equal to your Charisma modifier.

Chapter 3: Feats

Chapter 4: Arms and Equipment

In a world filled with violence and war, weapons are common throughout. Some are designed for efficiency, others for instilling fear. Whatever the case, a variety of weapons not commonly found in the world of Falamar.

Weapons

The first section describes several mundane items and weapons that can be found throughout the world. These items are most commonly found in the regions of their creation such as the dragon claws in the Dominion, the katana in Fao and the thinblade within Lothanewi. The mundane items found within this chapter are:

- ◆ Dragon Claws
Deadly metal claws that affix to the hands like gauntlets. The claws are deadly in their ability to cut and scare an opponent.
- ◆ Katana
A single-edged curved blade with renowned cutting ability and strength. This blade is favored by many melee combatants..
- ◆ Lance
A solid, large spear-like weapon used for thrusting by mounted combatants.
- ◆ Nunchaku
Two bars of metal or wood attached together by a small chain or rope. This weapon can be used with equal ability to attack or defend.
- ◆ Sai
A single-handed metal weapon with three prongs that excels at defensive forms and disarming opponents.
- ◆ Thinblade
One of the first weapons created by the elves, this straight blade is one and a half inches wide and is renowned for its ability to slip through seams in armor.
- ◆ Wakizashi
A shorter companion blade to the katana, it's design is similar to its longer brother. Primarily a defensive, off-hand weapon
- ◆ Wraps
A bandage or a strip of leather, these garments help protect users and adds extra power to their strikes.

Magical Items

Magical equipment is well-used throughout the world. Due to the constant night, magical effects are highly requested in attempt to raise the quality of life. In spite of this, magical items still are used mostly to enhance and further warfare.

Many of the magical items listed in this chapter carry historical significance, such as the armor of the Destiny Knights. The types of magical items found in this chapter are:

- ◆ Armor
The heavy armor of the Destiny Knights was a common sight before the Night Reign, standing for peace, faith and justice.
- ◆ Gem
A new implement used by Summoners. These gems hold the souls of creatures to augment the virtues and summonings of the summoner.
- ◆ Head
New head items include the Helmet of the Fire Stallion worn by battle hardened Xionaires.
- ◆ Weapons
New weapons include the dusk blade which changes powers depending on the time of day.
- ◆ Wondrous Items
New wondrous items include the sun drop fruit useful for overcoming diseases.

Artifacts

Throughout the history of Falamar, some items have gained enough notoriety that the items themselves have taken on a life of their own, such as The Sword of Horan that slew Ilius the Betrayer during the First Night Reign. The artifacts, minor and major, found within this chapter are:

- ◆ Aegolis
The symbol of rulership in Helvada, Aegolis has been wielded by each ruler since the Crusader Wars.
- ◆ Dagger of Betrayal
The dagger that slew the first innocent, which caused the first Night Reign.
- ◆ Scepters of the Air King, Earth King, Fire King and the Water King
These four scepter are shards of the original Scepter of the High King and were given to the four kings of the Alliance.
- ◆ Scepter of the High King
Created during the Crusader wars, the Scepter of the High King was wielded by Pelus Ro to destroy the undead armies of the Shan'ree.
- ◆ Sword of Horan
The sword that slew Ilius at the end of the first Night Reign.

Wakizashi	+3	1d6	-	15 gp	2 lb.	Light blade	Off-hand
Thinblade	+3	1d8	-	30 gp	3 lb.	Light Blade	High crit, Off-hand

Dragon Claws: A modified gauntlet with long, sharp extensions typically made of metal, giving the appearance that the wielder has animal-like claws.

Katana: A sword developed in the region of Fao at the height of their power at the beginning of the Age of Shadows. The sword is a slender, curved, single-edged blade with a long grip to accommodate two hands.

Lance: Similar to a spear or javelin, the lance is used on horseback and is particularly effective while charging.

Nunchaku: A traditional weapon of the Sadire tieflings, the weapon consists of two sticks or bones connected at the ends with a short chain or rope.

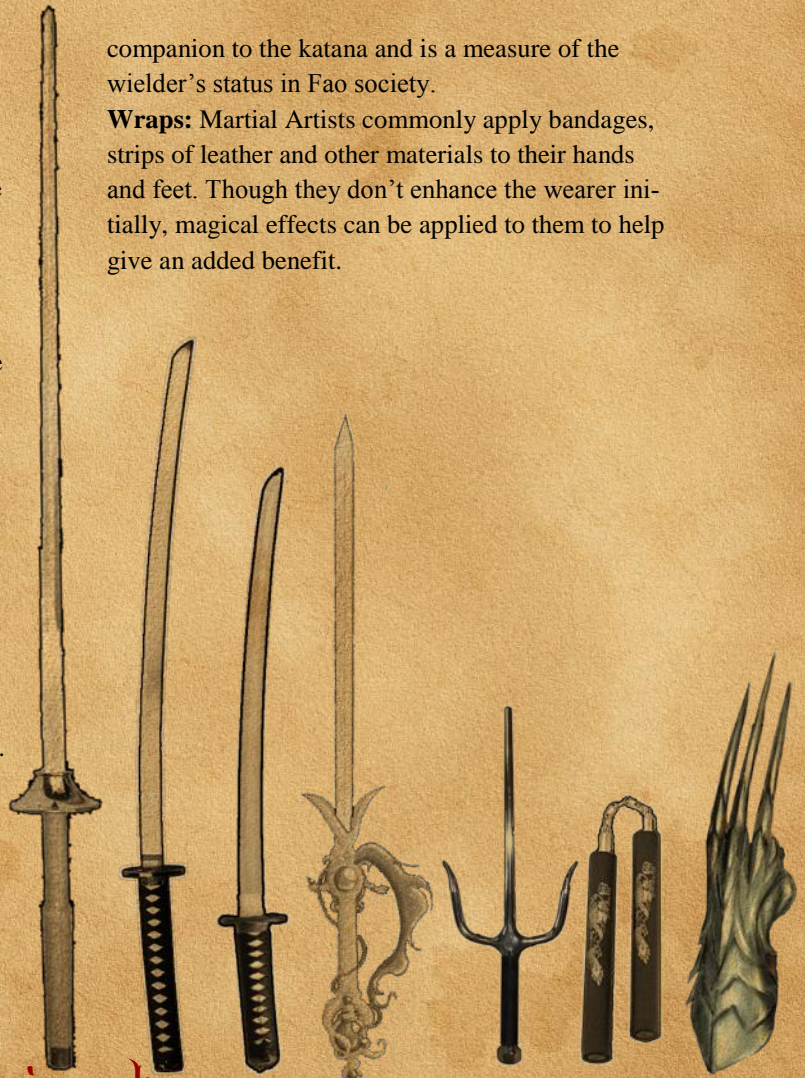

Sai: A traditional weapon developed in the Fao region during the Crusader wars. The weapon is a pointed, rod-shaped baton with two long, unsharpened projections attached to the handle. Primarily a defensive weapon.

Thinblade: Possibly one of the first weapons ever created, the thin blade was developed by the Eladrin. A cross between a rapier and a long sword, the thinblade is a light weapon with a blade only 1 and a half inches wide.

Wakizashi: A sword developed in the region of Fao along side the Katana at the beginning of the Age of Shadows. Typically worn together, the sword is a companion to the katana and is a measure of the wielder's status in Fao society.

Wraps: Martial Artists commonly apply bandages, strips of leather and other materials to their hands and feet. Though they don't enhance the wearer initially, magical effects can be applied to them to help give an added benefit.

Magical Items

In a world of epic fantasy, there is no shortage of magical items in the world, some created for evil, some created for the greater good.

Armor

Symbols make a powerful statement about who you are, what you do and where your loyalty lies. Most people can spot Heaven Knights simply by the white armor they wear. Detailed below are some of the magical armors that can be found in the world.

Weapons

“The weapon of a soldier is his life. You are never without it, you would never part with it. If you treat it well, it will save your life.”

Weapons within Falamar are common and necessary to survive the harsh reality of the night. Most weapons developed along side the different regions and societies in the world. The Cushani Dominion prefer heavy weapons that can inflict blunt trauma and rip apart flesh, while the Helvadian people prefer spears and shields to fight in close quarters beside one another.

Whatever the situation, many magical items were developed with the turmoil of the world in mind. These magical weapons are more common in more militaristic areas, though they could be found nearly anywhere.

Major Artifacts

Scepter of the Four Kings

The Scepter of the Four Kings is an artifact created by the Archmage Latarin during the Crusader War to combat the massive undead army that the Shan'ree had amassed in the Cerian Empire. When the war was over, the scepter was broken into four parts and given to the current and future rulers of Iso'Latarin, Solis, Ro and Lothanewi. Each individual scepter is a minor artifact, but when brought together, they create one of the most powerful items in all of Fa-lamor.

Chapter 5: Bardic Lore

The world of Falamar is a young average-sized planet that revolves around a single sun and has one moon. This setting focuses on the cradle of civilization between the Red Sea and the Sea of Twilight.

Within this chapter you will find information detailing life on Falamar from their languages to cosmology to their short but dark history. This chapter includes the following information:

- ◆ Languages: Detailed information on the languages spoken within central Falamar. The languages shown are the world-specific names for the languages that are found within the D&D 4E Player's Handbook.
- ◆ Coins and Commerce: How commerce operates in the dark and the coins they use. The coins shown are the world-specific names for the coins found within the D&D 4E Player's Handbook.
- ◆ Timekeeping: Including the calendar showing the timekeeping methods for the day, the seasons and the years.
- ◆ Holidays: There are several recognized holiday's across Falamar. Most are set and controlled by the Church of the Moon who use the holidays to maintain their grip on society,
- ◆ Religion: Falamar is home to an established dual pantheon and an overgod who rarely interacts with the world. In addition, several primordial creatures known as the Wyrms have a more direct influence upon the world.
- ◆ Cosmology: The realm of Falamar has several other planes attached and associated with it from the Fields of Evergreen to the eternally dark Vorgard.
- ◆ Timeline/History: A listing of historical events that have taken place within the world of Falamar. The timeline is broken down by Age, from the Age of Creation to the Age of Shadows, which is the current Age.

Languages

There are many languages used throughout the world, each favored by its own race and region. As the world was divided by the three divine races, the world uses three common languages throughout the world to conduct trade, practice religion and to socialize.

The dwarves, elves and humans are known as the divine races and most people can speak one of their languages, though knowing two of them is not uncommon. The table provided shows what languages are commonly found within the world of Falamar.

Modern Language	Spoken by
Cerian	Humans, Halflings, Tieflings
Draconic	Dragonborn
Orthaek	Orcs, Goblkind
Rathek	Cushani
Tyrish	Eladrin, Elves, Gnomes
Winthik	Dwarves

There are also several ancient and dead languages that were either killed off by genocide or evolved into the modern language over time.

Ancient Language	Status
Asalic	Replaced by Winthik
Derish	Replaced by Cerian
Draish (written)	Dead Cerian writing system
Traish	Evolved into Rathek
Uthik	Dead Cerian Dialect

Coin and Commerce

Coin

Throughout the known world of Falamar, there is a variety of minted coins exchanged between regions. When the world was at peace and many nations stood, hundreds of different coins could be found. With the establishment of the Night Reign, minted coins have been narrowed down to four distinct currencies. Each region uses its own names for the same types of coins.

Commerce

Commerce within Falamar is marked by its dependence on outside sources to provide many of the more standard goods. Due to the constant total eclipse of the sun, food and lumber are hard to find, though some imports from Avengard or Vorgard help with this shortage.

Other highly prized products are slaves, which can be found all over the world. Though some regions of the old kingdoms dislike the practice, the current rule of the Ilium Empire ignores their concerns.

Time Keeping

Calender

A standard day is 20 hours in length, split evenly into 10 hours of daytime and 10 hours of nighttime. Since devices that track time are large and expensive, most people simply use increments of the day to schedule meetings and activities. These increments are dawn, early sun, high sun, late sun, dusk, early moon, high moon and late moon.

The days are grouped into 10 day weeks. A group of 10 weeks, or a 100 days, make a season. Each year has four seasons or 400 days. The years are numbered at each new year which is the first day of the spring season. The current calendar began on the day of Ilius' betrayal and noted with ab. Those years before the Betrayal are noted with bi (Before Ilius). The date is written as the day of the season, the season and the year (i.e. 43 Autumn 2978 ab).

The seasons of Falamar represent the different climate and temperature changes that happen throughout the year. These changes were brought by the Four Wyrms, primordial beings created by the Sun and the Moon. Each season represents the views and attitudes of the Wurm that governs it. A standard year has a single season for each Wurm. The year begins with Spring and is typically a season of courtships, love and planting new crops. Trees begin to bloom during this season and rain storms are common.

Following the Spring is Summer which marks the full stride of life. It is the height of trading, in particular the slave trade. The summer is also known as the season of war. Many who seek out battle do so during the summer due to the general good weather and somewhat warm temperatures.

After Summer is the season of Autumn which begins the harvest season. Trees begin to lose their bloom at this time, and wars begin to diminish near the end of this season. Temperatures during this time begin to decline.

Following Autumn is the Winter season. This season is marked by snow and very cold temperatures. Many stay close to home during these times due to the violent weather.

Holidays

There are many holidays and holy days within a single calendar year. Many regions have regional holidays that are celebrated depending on the ruler at the time and the current state of affairs. In general, there are four holidays per season that are recognized throughout the land.

Spring

Spring's Day (1 Spring)

Spring's Day is always celebrated on the first day of spring and celebrates the might of the Wyrms of Spring. The holiday is marked by a festival in honor of the Spring Wyrms.

Lover's Day (25 Spring)

Lover's Day is generally celebrated on the 25th day of Spring and is a day for lovers to renew their love to one another and announce courtships.

Spring Equinox (50 Spring)

The Spring Equinox is held in the middle of the season, generally the 50th day of the season. This day the beginning of the Solar Arc which represents the time in which the Sun crafted life upon the world. The Solar Arc ends on the Summer Solstice. The Solar Arc is outlawed by the Ilium Empire.

Rebirth, Day of Judgment (75 Spring)

Rebirth is celebrated as the day Horan the Solar was born and also the day of his death at the hands of Ilius. This holiday is outlawed by the Ilium Empire.

Summer

Summer's Day (1 Summer)

Summer's Day is always celebrated on the first day of summer and celebrates the might of the Wyrms of Summer. The holiday is marked by a festival in honor of the Summer Wyrms.

Council of Swords (10 Summer)

The Council of Swords is a day that marks the end of negotiations and councils regarding all matters of war. Those that plan to conduct war generally use the first week of Summer to attempt diplomacy and politics.

Summer Solstice (50 Summer)

The Summer Solstice marks the end of the Solar Arc, the time that represents the time the Sun took to create life on the world. This holiday is outlawed by the Ilium Empire.

High Banner (75 Summer)

High Banner celebrates the beginning of the Alliance of Kings between Solis, Ro, Sadire and Helvada.

Autumn

Autumn's Day (1 Autumn)

Autumn's Day is always celebrated on the first day of autumn and celebrates the might of the Wyrms of Autumn. The holiday is marked by somber religious retreats in honor of the Autumn Wyrms.

Harvest Day (10 Autumn)

Harvest Day is the day to celebrate the completion of the harvest which usually starts on the first week of Autumn.

Autumn Equinox (50 Autumn)

The Autumn Equinox represents the time in which the Moon came upon the earth and walked with the races to find his purpose. This is called the Lunar Journey. Many use this time to look introspectively on their lives for their purpose and goals in life. The Lunar Journey ends at the Winter Solstice.

Ascension (75 Autumn)

The day of Ascension is a holy day that marks the day that the first Night Reign began.

Winter

Winter's Day (1 Winter)

Winter's Day is always celebrated on the first day of winter and celebrates the might of the Wyrms of Winter. The holiday is marked by a somber festival in honor of the Winter Wyrms.

Day of the Departed (25 Winter)

The Day of the Departed is a day to honor the dead of the past. Long rituals are generally held on this day to remember those who have died. The rising of the undead is also common on this day.

Winter Solstice (50 Winter)

The Winter Solstice marks the end of the Lunar Journey, the time that represents the Moon's time upon the world.

Icillira (75 Winter)

The day of Icillira marks the rise of the Shan'ree, in particular their leader, the Shade King who conquered and ruled the Cerian Empire until the end of the Crusader War.

Religion

In a world of myth and magic, the people and creatures believe in a group of divine beings that created them, look over them and guide them through the path of life.

In the vastness of the planes, an entity simply known as the Mother gave birth to two sons, the Sun and the Moon who in turn created the Wyrms of the Seasons. These four divine figures make up the pantheon of the world.

The Sun

Aliases: The Father, The Peacebringer, Lord of the Day, Master of Light

Portfolio: Light, peace, love, life, justice, law, good

Domain: Everfield

Symbol: Gothic Sun with eight rays

Basic Information: The Lord of the Day is the son of the Mother of All Things and twin brother to the Moon. His birth heralded the first sunrise across Falamar and upon those rays of light the Mother spoke to him. She told him that he would govern the light and with that, power over life. All things created by the light would know love and happiness. With his birthright the Sun created the forests and plants so that the world would flourish. Next he created the rose as the symbol of his love of all things. He then created the animals so that they could share his love of the world, and lastly he created Loth and Syladrin to watch over it all.

Once evil had spread across the world because of the Moon, the Sun took up a new direction: justice and cleansing. Even though the Sun loved his brother, his actions upon the world had to be answer for. With the coming of the undead, the Sun demanded action from his faithful before the world would be consumed by darkness. With the first Night Reign of Ilius, the Sun was forced to retreat from Falamar and left the prophecy of his return. When Horan the Solar defeated Ilius, the Sun returned to the land.

By the time of the 5th Age, the Sun has grown weak; his once dominating hold over the world now weakened by the strength of the Moon and the evil that walks the land. The Sun does not falter, however, for he loves his children and believes they all must be returned to the light.

The Church: The church of the Sun is officially disbanded by order of the church of the Moon. Unofficially, the church is struggling to survive after its near destruction during the Blood Culling. Listed below is the organization of the church as it was before the Blood Culling.

The church of the Sun practices in many ways, depending on race and location. Each has its own name for the Sun and specific customs to show worship to the Father in addition to the basic practices developed by Ikos during the Age of Creation. The church as a whole has three branches from which it governs the religion. The first branch is collectively known as the Sun's Choir. The choir is a collection of 10 administrative groups called Convictions. These Convictions handle different aspects of the church: Animals, Nature, Races, Historical, Planes, Enforcement, Rituals, Magic, Undead and Treasury.

Each Conviction is headed by an Arbiter who oversees the running of their Conviction. Each Arbiter, who is selected from within the Conviction and may only be of one of the three divine races, sits on the Sun's Choir to decide matters of the church as a whole. From the Arbiters is elected the High Priest and Voice of the Sun to lead the church. Traditionally this has been a dwarf; however, with the shattering of the Dwarven houses, fewer dwarves have been elected to the position. Since the second Night Reign, the post is officially empty.

The second branch of the church of the Sun is the Clergy. The clergy manage a collection of temples (large) and shrines (small) spread throughout the land. Each temple is run by a Dawn Priest who has several clerics and acolytes to assist him in his duties. It is the priest's duty to maintain the well-being of the faith, the temple and its congregation. Clerics are the eyes and ears of the priest, traveling within the area to help those in need of divine services. Acolytes are clerics in training and generally spend most of their time at the temple or assisting clerics with their traveling duties. A temple generally consists of 2 to 100 clergy depending on location and need.

The third branch of the church of the Sun is the Shield. The Shield is the martial branch of the church and consists of paladins/knights and battle-tested clerics. It is the duty of the Shield to wage combat against the enemies of the church, such as the undead and the followers of the Moon. The Shield operates out of abbeys that are run by the Shield Master who is appointed by the Arbiter of the Enforcement Conviction. The Shield Master is in charge of running day-to-day operations and making sure his men are ready to be deployed when needed. An abbey generally consists of 5 to 1,000 soldiers depending on location and need.

Dogma: The Father teaches that, to be at peace, one must have order. To have love, one must have compassion. To abolish the darkness, one must invoke the light. Before the time of Ilius, the church of the Sun promoted love and peace among all. To be loved by all you must love all. Through compassion comes love, through love comes life, through life comes peace and through peace comes eternal happiness.

Since the Night Reign, the Sun has altered his view, and his message to the people is to fight the darkness with the powers of the light. Destroy the undead so that they may return to the Land of Dreams. Cleanse the infected, for they corrupt the pure. Disrupt the Breath wherever it is found. Gone are the days of joy and happiness. They are replaced by the need to defend the very way of life that was. To embrace the night is a sin. To be of the night is to embrace death. Those who embrace death must be shown the light or be delivered to the Land of Dreams were they may find happiness once more.

Day to Day Activities: The standard day has three important periods during which one gives prayer to the Sun: at dawn, at noon and at sunset. At dawn, a follower greets the Sun as he ascends the throne of the world. The prayer is to greet the Sun with love and to embrace his warmth to empower you throughout the day. At noon, a follower prays to the Sun for empowerment and strength. At sunset, a follower gives a prayer in thanks to the Sun for his kindness and all that he has done to help those of his faith. The prayer is to also intended to empower the Sun so that he may rise again in the morning.

Each day of the week holds its own significance within the church, which corresponds to the creation of the world. The church, though, focuses on the first and fifth days. The first day is to give thanks to the Sun for the creation of the heavens and the world itself. This day is a day of rest so that all may relax and enjoy life as it was intended during the first days. It is a day of marriages and blessings of the newly born. Followers of the church are encouraged to attend services held by the local priest and be reminded of the ways of the Sun, their duty to the Sun and to each other. The sermons are typically focused on duty, tenets and bolstering the faith. The fifth day is the recognition of the birth of the Divine Races. This day is marked by reflecting on the past to learn from it and to become a better person in the future. Ceremonies and events are generally held on this day, and the church typically holds a more informal service for those who wish to attend. These services are typically less firm and demanding than the first-day service.

Holy Days: The church observes several holy days throughout the year. The first holy day is the 1st of Spring which is the celebration of the birth of Spring. The day starts with a service to show faith in Spring and what he stands for. Weddings and other festivals are generally held on this day. It also marks the beginning of the planting season for the summer crop.

The second holy day is the 1st of Summer which is the celebration of the birth of Summer. The day starts with a service to show faith in Summer and what he stands for. Hunting trips, vacations and other outdoor activities are carried out during this time. It also marks the beginning of the spring harvest and the planting of the fall crop.

The third holy day is Remembrance which occurs on the 63rd of Spring. This day marks the birth of Horan the Solar who sacrificed himself to defeat Ilius and ended the Night Reign.

The fourth day is Awakening which occurs on 85th of Fall. This day marks the rebirth of the Mother of All Things and her ascent back into the pantheon.

The last major holy event of the church of the Sun is Yorish, the Cleansing week. Even though it is not a standard holy day, followers of the Sun spend the week of 90 through 100 Winter in self-reflection to purge themselves of sin so that their soul can be purified before the start of the Sun's seasons.

Major Centers of Worship: Though the church of the Moon controls the major centers of worship currently, the church of the Sun works tirelessly to regain the centers that are historically important to the faith.

Solis region: Solis City is the former capital of the fallen kingdom of Solis which sits on the ancient city of Bend where Horan the Solar was born. Since his passing, the Temple of the Eternal Flame has been in the region for the past 2,000 years.

Ro region: The former Kingdom of Ro has several temples spread throughout the area, though the most important is located on the shores of Siren's Lake. A temple was constructed where King Pelus the Peacebringer was born and where the Wyrms of Spring of was kept during his slumber. This temple holds the largest ceremony during the first day of Spring.

Kingdom of Alakar: Alakar, the homeland of the dwarves, is the location of the first temple to the Sun. Constructed by the brothers Ikos and Ikar, the temple has since fallen under Winkar control. All reference, to the Sun have been removed from the temple, and it has now become a temple to the Moon.

Elven Republic of Lothanewi: The Elven Republic of Lothanewi holds the second oldest temple and, since the loss of the temple on Astral Mountain, has become the oldest temple control led by the church of the Sun. Located in Fall'hi'lithai, the temple is the gathering place for the Sun's Choir.

Cushani Dominion: The Cushani temple to the Sun is located in the city of Mylar and is home to one of the largest abbeys in the region. One of the sole surviving temples in the world, the abbey is run by Cushani Shield Master Raskagar and holds an estimated 1,000 knights who keep a tight control on the northern areas of Falamar.

Affiliated Orders: The church has several orders attached to it with various charges.

The Order of Horan: The Order of Horan was created at the Convention of Stars at the beginning of the Age of Heroes. The charge of the Order was the protection of the remains of Ilius, Horan and later Gesile. At its beginning, only the most loyal of knights were appointed to the Order until its near-destruction at the end of the Crusader Wars. Up until the end of the Age of Sorrows, the Order was more open in accepting members, and its ranks swelled in an effort to better protect the remains of the holy three. Since the rise of Ilius, the order is in question as their primary duty has failed.

Viridian Order: The Viridian Order is an order of knights that allies with the church of the Sun. It originated with Sir Solis Ro during the Age of Heroes. Originally a band of knights from the Order of Horan that fought together during the Crusader Wars, the group drew high praise for its ability to overcome overwhelming odds. Other knights soon requested to join the group until they were large enough to be considered their own fighting order.

Order of the Dawn: The Order of the Dawn is an organization of clergy that seeks to cleanse and purify the religion from within. The organization has been quietly handling those found lacking in the faith since the Age of Night. They are a secret order, known only in rumor and myth to most, and they answer only to the High Priest.

Followers of the Wrathful Sun: This radical militant group of excommunicated clergy and knights, formed during the First Purification War to directly oppose the church of the Moon and those found guilty of conspiring with the Moon. The Followers follow their own guidelines in making these determinations, and the church has officially disavowed all knowledge of their actions and internally wishes to eradicate the Followers completely.

Priestly Vestments: The church of the Sun has had a long-standing tradition in regards to the vestments that are worn by church officials. The standard colors of the church are White, Gold, Red and Green. White stands for innocence, Gold stands for purity and strength, Red stands for valor and courage, Green stands for hope.

Standard acolyte vestments are a white tabard with the symbol of the Sun in gold with a green border. Priests have the same tabard and symbol but with a gold border. Clerics have a green tabard with the symbol of the Sun in gold with a white border.

Standard knight vestments are a red tabard with the symbol of the Sun in gold with a white border. Shield Masters have the same tabard and symbol but with a gold border. In addition, knights have the symbol of their rank over the left breast in either white or gold.

The Moon

Aliases: Lord of Night, the Deceiver, Master of the Dead, the Destroyer

Portfolio: Night, undead, death, decay, murder, entropy, tyranny, evil

Domain: Skyhome

Symbol: Silver circle with two stars at the southwest and southeast

Basic Information: The Moon is the son of the Mother of All Things and twin brother to the Sun. His birth covered the world in darkness from which the Mother spoke. She told him that he would be night and death. He would provide balance to the world so that all would have their rightful place within the cycle. In order for life to prevail, all things must die in order to be born again.

From his place among the heavens on the plane called Skyhome, the Moon watched the Sun create life and watched them give him praise. When the Moon would come to take them away, they grew sad for the departed, for there was no happiness in death, only necessity. Distraught that none loved him, the Moon went to the Mother to ask why, and she told him it was not his place within the balance of all things to create life. To have such power with the power over death would destroy the balance she had created. The Moon would not accept this answer as final, and in his blindness, he imprisoned the Mother deep within the earth of her own creation. He lied to his brother and told him that she had died and he had carried her spirit away as was his duty. The Moon kept secret his true actions from all, including his own Voice, Ikar the Dwarf. With the first lie, the Moon allowed the darkness to enter his heart and set him on the road to damnation.

The truth of the Moon's deception would go unnoticed until Ilius betrayed the light and shattered the balance of the world. Those who followed the Moon, were stunned by the turn of events and the actions of Ilius. From his seat of power in the city of Ilium, the Betrayer called out to the world for all to follow the true power of the Moon or be destroyed. The first to turn was Ikar, though his turning was, like the Moon, in secret. Many soon followed, and soon, the church of the Moon swelled in numbers, all joining in the praise of the Moon. In the modern nights, the Moon holds dominance over the world. With the rebirth of Ilius, the church has refocused its strength and power for the single purpose of gaining perfection.

The Church: The church of the Moon covers a majority of the region and its influence can be felt everywhere in the known lands. The practices and rituals of the church have all been standardized by the hierarchy to promote unity, though it is thought that this also enables those who lead to keep a close eye on those beneath them. The church is very strict in its laws and practices, and those found outside of those boundaries are handled swiftly and harshly.

The organization of the church is composed of two branches, the Enforcers and the Requiem. The Requiem is the administration and clergy of the church whose duty is to make sure the members of the church follow church doctrine and laws, to convert the faithless and to ensure loyalty of its members. The Praetor and Voice of the Moon leads the Requiem in all matters and is considered the figurehead of the church. Beneath the Praetor are the three Judges of War, Loyalty and Faith who advise the Praetor on all things involving the church and, when needed, choose a new Praetor should the current one be killed and no successor recognized.

The position of Praetor is a life position in which the Praetor can only be removed by two means, treason and death. Should the Judges find the Praetor guilty of treason of church law, he is immediately put to death and his soul destroyed. Should the Praetor be killed, his chosen successor assumes the position. If no successor has been named, then the three Judges appoint a new Praetor by unanimous decision. The exception to this rule is if the Praetor is killed in the Amon, a ritualized divine battle between two combatants. Should the challenger kill the Praetor, he assumes the position. An Amon can only take place with the approval of all three Judges.

Beneath the Judges are the Ministers who are in charge of the temples located across the region. Ministers are in charge of maintaining their temples, ensuring the loyalty of their followers and converting the faithless. Beneath the Ministers are the Corruptors who generally serve the nearest temple to their domain. The Corruptors travel the lands near the temples much in the way that clerics of the Sun do. They assist those who have lost their way, search out those who are faithless and guard the domain from the followers of the Sun.

The Enforcers are the military branch of the church. The Enforcers are made up of two subgroups called the Faithful and the Blackguard. The Faithful are a conscripted army of fighters who are drafted by the church to fight against the enemies of the Moon. The Faithful make up roughly three fourths of the Enforcers and are stationed through the known lands to enforce the will of the church when called upon. Those of the Faithful are continually policed to ensure loyalty and devotion to the church. Those found lacking are taken for reeducation in church doctrine. Those found in treason of the church are killed and transformed into one of the undead to service the Enforcers. Above the Faithful are the Blackguard who are leaders of the Enforcers. They are charged with leading the faithful and ensuring loyalty. The Blackguard is composed of experienced Corruptors and Banes, the religious warriors akin to the paladin's of the Sun. The Blackguard is led by an Overseer who is appointed by the Praetor.

Dogma: Loyalty, devotion and perfection are the strengths of those who follow the Moon. The Lord of Night strives to unify the world into a perfect state of being, a melding of shadow and life. Only through that perfected state can someone truly become one with their self and the Moon. To obtain shadow, one must further the will of the Breath, for the Breath is the incarnation of Ilius who is the chosen of the Moon. To spread the Breath is to spread the will of the Moon.

One must remain loyal to the direction of the Moon and to those who lead us to perfection. To show loyalty is to show faith, in the Lord of Night and his chosen. Never question those of the faith for the darkness reveals itself only to those who have proven their worth and loyalty. To be perfect, one must be loyal to one's self, to one's superior and to one's god.

Day to Day Activities: Dusk and midnight are the two points of the day for prayer to the Moon. At dusk, prayer is given to the Moon to greet his arrival and ask for his blessing. All religious servants are required to give thanks to the moon at this time in order to receive their divine power to cast spells. The midnight prayer empowers the Moon and asks for his power in return to conquer the foes of the faith. The midnight prayer is always used when attempting to create or empower the undead. The two days of the week that are considered important are the seventh and tenth days.

On the seventh day during the dusk prayer, followers are required to attend for mass services. This is the time to review church doctrine and deliver new regulations and laws passed down by the Requiem. This day also marks the day of purging where the congregation is encouraged to further enforce the laws of the church by confessing to a Minister their sins and the sins of others. Trials and convictions of crimes against the faith are also held on this day. On the tenth day, a second but not required service is held. This service is to render punishment for crimes against the church as well as to create the undead to service the church.

Holy Days: The church observes several holy days throughout the year. The first holy day is the 1st of Autumn which is the celebration of the creation of the Wyrms Fall. The day starts with a service to show faith to Fall and what he stands for. Marriages and other festivals are generally held on this day.

The first holy day is Kingship which occurs on the 50th of Fall. This day marks the birth of Ilius the Betrayer. The fourth day is Iltide which occurs on 23rd of Winter. This day marks the beginning of the Night Reign by Ilius.

The second major holy event of the church of the Moon is Hisro, the Purging week. Even though it is not a standard holy day, followers of the Moon spend the week of 90 through 100 Summer seeking out those unfaithful to the church. The Purging week is similar to the 7th day service, though on a grander scale. Some also use this time to remove rivals from power through blackmail or assassination in hopes of gaining status, money or station. If someone is killed during this week, no charges are typically brought against the offender unless it directly violates church laws involving treason against the church.

The last holy day is the 1st of Winter which is the celebration of the creation of the Winter Wyrms. The day is started with a service to show faith in the Winter and what he stands for.

Major Centers of Worship: The church of the Moon has several major centers of worship spread throughout the region.

Ilium: The holy city of Ilium is the most highly regarded religious city for the church of the Moon. The city is the site of Ilius' Night Reign over the world. The city had fallen into disrepair for centuries during Ilius' long absence, but since his return, the city has soared in importance once more.

Dracia Region: The city of Raci holds a large temple to the Moon as well as several monuments to historical figures from the Crusader Wars. The most prominent group in Dracia, the Brotherhood of the Bone, was founded in the region during the Fao Uprising. Generally, the members of the church in the Dracia are heavily militant in their viewpoints.

Fao Region: Tetsuki in Fao is home to the creation of nearly half of the Shades during the Crusader Wars. The Temple of Saint Chathera is a major academic center as well as a place of worship for those across the region. The former imperial family line makes constant use of the temple, using it for coronations, arranged marriages and the reinforcement of imperial law.

Kingdom of Aiyia: The city of Shalforth is home to the Nightfire Temple which in addition to being used for standard religious services, is also used by the vampiric nobles of the kingdom. Those of noble blood use the temple as a holy site to sire new vampires into their noble lines.

Affiliated Orders: The church has several orders attached to it with various charges.

Society of the Void: The Society of the Void is a semi-secret society composed of individuals seeking enlightenment and the perfect state of being through the power of the undead. The society believes that the secrets of the perfect state of being are locked away in the secrets of what makes the undead. They are known for their single-mindedness and use of the undead for many tasks.

Brotherhood of the Bone: The Brotherhood of the Bone is a group of Banes within the Enforcers who strive for rulership of the church. The Brotherhood is strict with its membership, requiring an invitation by an existing member followed by several trials to test the initiate's loyalty. The Brotherhood is open about its intentions, which the Requiem finds troubling, as it has been unable to penetrate the group to destroy it from the inside. The Brotherhood does not risk excommunication, which could lead to a full schism between the Requiem and the Enforcers.

Order of the Celestial Heavens: This small order operates secretly within the church. Its goal is to restore the church to its original state before the rise of Ilius. They believe that the Moon is out of balance with the Celestial Hierarchy and must be returned to its original state before the world is destroyed.

Varkarium: The Vakarium is the internal police of the church. Their duty is to seek out those of the church who are unfaithful to the doctrine of the Moon. Only the Praetor has knowledge of the Varkarium's actions and how many members are active. Those who are taken by the Vakarium are generally never seen again, and rumors circulate that those that are found guilty are changed and transformed into the slag, a mindless state of being where one hovers on the line between life and death.

Priestly Vestments: The church of the Moon has had a long standing tradition regarding the vestments that are worn by church officials. The standard colors of the church are Black, Silver, Red and Purple. Black stands for affliction, Silver stands for purity, Red stands for glory, Purple stands for power and sovereignty.

Standard clergy vestments are a purple tabard with the symbol of the Moon in silver with a silver border. Priests have the same tabard and symbol but with a black border. Clerics have a black tabard with the symbol of the Moon in silver with a red border. Standard enforcer vestments are a silver tabard with the symbol of the Moon in black with a red border. Banes have a red tabard, silver Moon symbol and a black border.

The Mother

Aliases: the Goddess, Mother of all things

Portfolio: Neutrality, creation

Domain: The Garden

Symbol: Two overlapping circles with oak clusters beneath it.

At the beginning of time was a being simply called Mother. In the vast emptiness of the planes she created two sons, the Moon and the Sun. For her children the Goddess created the world to rule over. With this world came responsibility for each son. The Moon would watch over death, entropy, faith and darkness. The Sun would watch over life, growth, dedication and the light.

Early in the history of the world the Moon imprisoned her deep within the earth for refusing to grant him the ability to create life. For thousands of years she slept beneath the earth until the knight Datalus found her and her guardian, the Wyrm of Winter. The knight and Wyrm battled for the sleeping goddess for 10 days and 10 nights and at its conclusion, the knight had bested the Wyrm and freed the Mother from her imprisonment before dying of his wounds.

Free once more, the Mother returned to The Garden to watch over her children once again. Some mortals have taken up the actions of Sir Datalus and have begun to follow the aspect of the Mother and what she stands for. Druids and Rangers are common among those who follow her creed though she has yet to become involved with the dealings of mortals or her children.

The Wyrms

Aliases: the Arbiters, the Judges

Portfolio: The seasons

Domain: Twilight

The Wyrms are primordial beings created by the Sun and the Moon at the beginning of the First Age. The role of the Wyrms has changed over the years, evolving from mere inhabitants to protectors to watchers. Within modern times, the Wyrms mainly influence the lives and directions of mortals to further their goals and the goals of their parents.

Each Wyrm was given rulership over the world by the Sun and the Moon with each Wyrm ruling at a particular time during a single year.

During each rule, the world would shift in weather and emotion to match that of its ruler. Over time, the mortals of the world came to know each period as a season and named each season in honor of its ruler, Spring, Summer, Autumn and Winter.

The Wyrms of Spring

The Wyrms of Spring represents the beginning of life. Those with newborns or wishing for them give praise and thanks to the Spring. The Wyrms are a kind and playful being, always looking to the brighter side of a situation.

The Wyrms of Summer

The Wyrms of Summer represents growth and activity. As mortals usually conduct wars during the Summer, the Wyrms are often referred to as the Wyrms of War. Soldiers, generals and mercenaries commonly give their thanks to the Wyrms of Summer for helpful weather and food. The Wyrms are aggressive, but controlled, always pushing others to fulfill their potential.

The Wyrms of Autumn

The Wyrms of Autumn represents knowledge and power. Mages and priests usually give their thanks to the Wyrms for more knowledge and secrets to better defeat an enemy or defend their home. The Autumn Wyrms are arrogant and self-centered, always looking down upon those unable to think through a situation.

The Wyrms of Winter

The Wyrms of Winter represents death. The Wyrms strive to further death in all things and empower the undead around the world. The Wyrms are cruel and uncaring for others, believing that living beings are weak and unable to reach their full potential.

Cosmology

The world of Falamar has a simple, yet highly structured cosmology that is broken down into three domains, the Primal, the Elemental and the Celestial. Dividing these domains is a void area known as the Crossroads where one must travel to reach the different domains. Within each domain are multiple planes where creatures and divine beings dwell.

Due to the nature of the planes, they have no specific location in reference to the prime material plane of Falamar, but have an abstract location within the overall planar sea.

Falamar

Domain: Primal

Location: Central

The prime material plane of Falamar is the primary focus of the Night Reign Campaign Setting. Within this plane are the races of the divine and the primal. This plane is always covered in darkness due to the Night Reign where the night is always a full moon and the day is always a total eclipse.

From Falamar, a being has a direct connection to Avengard and Vorgard. To journey to either the Elemental domain or the Celestial domain, one must traverse the Crossroads.

Avengard

Location: Fey Realm

Avengard is home to creatures of Fey origin. A plane of exotic beauty, it is known for its lush forests, pure springs and bountiful food. The overlay of the plane is nearly the same as Falamar as viewed through the eyes of newborn child. This is Falamar in perfect harmony and purity. Though they are not originally from Avengard, the Eladrin are the most common within the plane, and they rule with a benevolent hand.

Due to the night covering Falamar, a near-constant stream of food and supplies is traded between Avengard and Falamar through planar gates located in Lothanewi, Alakar and a few other cities. The Ilium Empire tries to keep a tight grip on such trade in order to better control its subjects.

From Avengard, a being has a direct connection to Falamar and Vorgard. To journey to the other domains, one must travel through the Crossroads.

Vorgard

Location: Shadow Realm

Vorgard is home to creatures of Shadow origin. A plane of strife, darkness and despair, it is known for its cruel weather, harsh living conditions and foul air. The overlay of the plane is similar to that of Falamar as if viewed through the eyes of a criminal. This is Falamar at its most vile. Orcs, the undead and other creatures of shadow call this place home.

Vorgard is used by many creatures as a staging area for troops bent on war and destruction. Weapons and constructs of destruction are commonly built within this land due to its high deposits of minerals. The weapons trade regularly connects with regions such as Ro, Aiyia and Sadire.

From Vorgard, a being has a direct connection to Falamar and Avengard. To journey to the other domains, one must travel through the Crossroads.

Air, Earth, Fire and Water

Domain: Elemental

Location: The Core

The elemental planes are the home of elemental creatures and the source of elemental power. Each element has its own plane. These extreme environment planes are difficult to survive in for normal mortals, acting more like a power source than a place to live.

From the elemental planes, a being has a direct connection to the other elemental planes via portals. To journey to either the Primal domain or the Celestial domain, one must travel the Crossroads.

Everfield

Domain: Celestial

Location: Land of Dreams

Everfield is the home of the divine Sun. This paradise among the clouds is always sunny, peaceful and restful. Those mortals that have been blessed by the Sun are given a place among the clouds after their final passing as a reward for their service.

From Everfield, a being has a direct connection to Skyhome, the Abyss, Twilight and The Garden. To journey to the other domains, one must travel through the Crossroads.

Skyhome

Location: Land of Dreams

Skyhome is the home of the divine Moon. This floating continent drifts among stormy clouds of black and violet. The dark and dreary atmosphere makes this a depressing place to stay. Those creatures who pass from life to the Moon are sent to the Land of Dreams, a lake and river-like location where the souls of the day are contained, imprisoned forever.

From Skyhome, a being has a direct connection to Everfield, the Abyss, Twilight and The Garden. To journey to the other domains, one must travel through the Crossroads.

Abyss

Location: Land of Dreams

The Abyss is home to the legions of the immortal demons and devils. The Abyss is divided into two regions with each region divided into 10 areas. A deadland area separates the two regions and is commonly used as a battle ground between celestial creatures, especially demons and devils.

From the Abyss, a being has a direct connection to Everfield, Skyhome, Twilight and The Garden. To journey to the other domains, one must travel through the Crossroads.

The Garden

Location: Land of Dreams

Vangaurd is a simple garden nestled in a small area of the Sea of Dreams. It is this place that the Mother inhabits on occasion, though it is rare. Unconcerned with mortal affairs, she turns her attention elsewhere in the planes, making this plane simple and lonely. It is rumored that any living creature that has existed within Falamar can be found here, stored away in perfect preservation.

From The Garden, a being has a direct connection to Everfield, Skyhome, Twilight and the Abyss. To journey to the other domains, one must travel through the Crossroads.

Twilight

Domain: Celestial

Location: Land of Dreams

Twilight is the home of the Seasonal Wyrms and their creations, the dragons. It is here that dragons come to die of old age, sending their souls into the Sea of Dreams for their eternal rest.

From The Garden, a being has a direct connection to Everfield, Skyhome, The Garden and the Abyss. To journey to the other domains, one must travel through the Crossroads.

Crossroads

Domain: Void

Location: Crossroads

The Crossroads is a desolate field where the different domains intersect, allowing travel between them. No creatures are native to the crossroads though a variety can be found traveling through.

The Crossroads allow access to the different domains; Primal, Elemental and Celestial. In addition, a variety of portals lead from the Crossroads to other planes beyond Falamar.

Timeline

Abbreviated History

Though young, the world of Falamar has had a varied and violent history. Historians typically agree that the world is now upon its Fifth Age which began at the end of the Blood Culling and with the rise of Ilius the Betrayer.

The calendar was devised by the dwarves, using the Betrayal as the turning point in time. Those events that took place before the Betrayal are labeled as bi (before Ilius). Those events that taken place since as labeled as ab (after Betrayal).

Age of Creation

Within this age, the Mother birthed the Sun and the Moon to hold sway over Falamar. The next five thousand years of time saw the birth of the divine races of eladrin, dwarf and human, as well as the primal races of halflings, half-elves and the cushani. Many great cities were built during this time as well as the first kingdoms and city states such as the Kingdom of Delium, the Cerian Empire and the dwarven nation of Alakar. This age came to a close with the Betrayal of Ilius and the start of the first Night Reign.

Age of Night

This age saw the birth of the Ilium Empire and the spread of its power across the land. Vast legions of undead soldiers were created from the dead caused by the Breath. After years of war, the Empire had conquered a vast majority of the world.

The Empire was ruled by Ilius the Betrayer. Chosen by the Moon to be its avatar, Ilius held nearly unlimited power over death and the undead. His power would be tested by the race progenitors, but by the height of Ilius' power, even their vast powers failed to overcome the Betrayer.

The Night Reign was so labeled due to the darkness that covered the land night and day. During the day, only a total eclipse of the Sun would show, shedding very little light.

During this time the Cushani were abandoned by Loth in her grief which led to their slavery and the eventual war of freedom against the eladrin. As the Cushani left the Great Forest for a new home, the remaining human regions went to war against one another over food and resources.

The age came to an end with the Solar War when Ilius' son, Horan, marched on the Empire with his Army of Light. At the climax of the war, Horan and Ilius slew one another, bringing an end to the Night Reign.

Age of Heroes

This golden age saw many advancements in technology, art and science. Advances in architecture paved the way for sprawling city states and roads connecting them. Much of the modern foundation of travel was developed during this time including planar travel with the placement of gates to the Primal domain, which allowed for ease of travel to Avengard and Vorgard.

In the aftermath of the Solar War, which concluded several years after the death of Ilius, the dragons began a war of their own which included two wars over a two hundred year period. This led to the great divide and the creation of two dragon groups, the metallic and the chromatic.

As peace finally settled across the land, the children of the Spring and Summer Wyrms began to appear, beginning with the first and most renowned, Pelus Ro. From Pelus and his generation came forth a legion of powerful and gifted children who set out to make the world a better place. Still, even with all of their glory and power, some fell prey to the lust for power. Just as the children grew, so did their counterparts, the Shan'ree, powerful creatures of shadow created by the Wyrms of Autumn and Winter.

Their opposition to one another came to a head with the Crusader War which saw the downfall of the ancient kingdoms and the birth of the modern kingdoms.

Age of Sorrows

This age saw the formation of most of the current human kingdoms as fallout from the Crusader War. With millions dead from the war, the people found themselves exhausted and retreated to simpler ways of life. Others, though, found only more death.

Several of the new kingdoms had their share of growing pains which resulted in border skirmishes with one another as well as several civil wars, especially in the kingdom of Ro which found itself without a king and with well over 50 heirs to the throne. By the end of nearly a thousand years of conflict, over 10 million people had been killed and over 2,000 descendants of Pelus had been slain.

Just as the internal and external conflicts seemed to have been resolved between the kingdoms of the world, the age ends with the rebirth of Ilius the Betrayer which shook the very foundation of life across Falamar.

The 5th Age

The current age of the world began in a baptism of darkness, fire and death. Two years after the rise of Ilius the Betrayer, he launched a massive assault across the land, using Aiyia, Dracia, Lothanewi and Alakar to attack the Alliance of Kings.

The Reunification War brought about the reestablishment of the Ilium Empire as well as the Breath. The Church of the Sun suffered staggering losses in the war and was forced into hiding as each of the Kings of the Alliance fell to the onslaught of undead armies. The Second Night Reign has begun.

The land currently is controlled by 6 nations; Aiyia, Alakar, the Dominion, Helvada, Ilium and Lothanewi. The former kingdoms that were conquered during the Blood Culling are referred to now by region. All but the Dominion and Helvada are allied with the Ilium Empire. Ilius the Betrayer rarely interacts with the common day-to-day activities of the land and instead, delegates these to the Lich Lord Razel who resides in the Solis region.

The Dominion, controlled by the Cushani, was able to rebuff the advances of Aiyia and Ilium due to their dragonrider allies. However, the ruling Firestorm tribe has begun to weaken, and in a bid for power, destroyed the dragonriders and created a dracolich. This act has recently dragged the Dominion down into civil war, while Aiyia and Ilium watch intently for the chance to topple the proud cushani of the Dominion.

The kingdom of Helvada was driven northward at the end of the war, forced to rebuild their kingdom after devastating losses. Though the warrior society has since begun to rebuild, the sudden rise of the Reaper Plague has had disastrous effects on the leadership of the kingdom. With no heir apparent to the throne, the legions stand poised to fight for the right to rule.

The world has been shrouded in darkness due to the constant total eclipse of the Sun and the people have one last hope that someone can rise up from the darkness to bring back the light.

Chapter 6: Geography Lore

The lands of Falamar are vast and varied. The Night Reign Campaign Setting focuses on the center lands of the world where evil rules with ruthless efficiency.

The central regions of Falamar are the cradle of civilization for all life on the world. Beginning with the Great Forest of Lothanewi, the creatures and people of the world have spread far and wide. This chapter includes the following areas:

Nations

- ◆ Kingdom of Aiyia: A nation openly ruled by vampires and currently allied with the Empire of Ilium. This tightly-run kingdom is one of the most prosperous throughout the land.
- ◆ Nation of Alakar: Situated high in the Astral Mountains, the nation of Alakar is home to the Winkar. As the voice and face of the Church of the Moon, their reach extends far and wide across the regions of Falamar. They also hold a steadfast alliance with the Empire of Ilium.
- ◆ Cushani Dominion: A vast land of jungles, swamps, plains and coastal area, the Dominion is the home to the Cushani people. Even though it is one of three kingdoms that oppose the Empire of Ilium, the Dominion is distracted by a civil war that threatens to destroy the kingdom.
- ◆ Gateway city-state: The largest of the city states, Gateway is located between several regions and former nations. By loosely allying itself with the Empire of Ilium, Gateway is able to maintain its hold on trade throughout the area. It is also home to the League of Circle Dancers.
- ◆ Karsari Federation: Loosely allied with the Ilium empire, the Karsari federation is a land ruled by a collection of city states.
- ◆ Kingdom of Helvada: Once located on the northern border of Dracia, the Kingdom of Helvada migrated northward after the Reunification War with the Empire of Ilium. The people have begun to regroup and rearm themselves for the eventual war that will come in retaking their homeland from the Empire.

- ◆ Ilium Empire: Ruled by the mythical Ilius the Betrayer, the Empire rules most of the known world through fear and its vast armies of bone guards and undead soldiers.
- ◆ Republic of Lothanewi: The center of the cradle of life in the world, the forest and republic of the shadow elves is a land of mystical intrigue and ancient dangers.

Regions

The regions are areas of former kingdoms that were conquered during the Reunification War. Most of these areas are filled with civil unrest directed at their new rulers.

- ◆ Ro Region of Aiyia: The once great kingdom of Ro is now a region rich with political treachery and civil strife. Those former nobles displaced by the Empire have banded together with mercenaries, former knights and rogues to form a resistance to regain their kingdom.
- ◆ Sadire Region: Home to the tieflings, this land of warlords has managed to shake loose from Imperial control and fights to regain its sovereignty from enemies foreign and domestic.
- ◆ Solis Region of Ilium: The former kingdom of Solis is under Imperial control and the direct attention of the Lich Lord Razel. The people of this once proud region have been reduced to slavery.
- ◆ Iso'Latarin Region of Ilium: This nation of mages disappeared during the Reunification War, leaving behind a land of bizarre and savage creatures.
- ◆ Fao Region of Ilium: Formerly the Fao Empire, the descendants of the Shan'ree are a broken people who struggle to survive in hope that their saviors will return.

- 5: Zaun (pop: 36,410)
- 6: Bothren (pop: 34,363)
- 7: Drev (pop: 22,158)

Description

The nation of Aiyia (Eye-ee-yah) was carved out of the city-states that once belonged to the ancient Ilium Empire by the Vampire Queen Yaneria and her Blood Knights. Mining and fishing provide the primary income of the kingdom, which produces some of the most exotic stones seen throughout the world today. Due to the close proximity of an active volcano, a constant haze tends to filter down to the surrounding cities.

Since the rebirth of the Ilium Empire and the total eclipse, the vampires of Aiyia have surged in number. Their kind have spread across the kingdom and into the neighboring regions, causing havoc and fear as the nobles run unchained.

Life & Society

The people, strangely enough, stay within the kingdom of vampires. Some believe that this is due to the mental domination Queen Yaneria has cast upon her lands. Still, the people insist that they live very well compared to other regions. It is said that the people strive to maintain a good image to their rulers in hopes that someone from their family will be taken as a child.

A child is taken by a vampire as his companion. When a child is chosen, their family is provided for by the vampire and his estate. There is no set timeframe for a child to remain with their vampire master. This relationship can last for as little as one year or up to the lifespan of the child. Being chosen as a child is considered the highest honor a vampire can bestow upon his subjects.

Regional History

The region started as a collection of city-states during the beginning of the Second Age. The city-states, however, fell to the advances of the Ilium Empire and were converted into military fortifications to supply the army for an eventual push against the Cushani to the north. Some people fled to the south, but many were kept in their newly created city prisons to work for the Empire.

The region was torn by war and combat with the Cushani tribes, and the Empire was never able to fully push into Dominion territory. At the end of the Age and the fall of Ilius, the remaining forces of the Empire collected in the area and held onto the fortifications for another 50 years before finally falling apart due to the lack of an organized command structure.

The region would go through a long period of rebuilding as recently self-declared lords tried to entice people to come and help rebuild the once great city-states. Several modern cities were founded at this time during the Age of Heroes, and the lords of these cities began talks about uniting to better defend the region against the fast-rising power of the Shan'ree.

After the sacking of Ceria to the east, the fallen hero Yaneria arrived in the region, looking for solitude for the crimes that she had committed. She would not manage to be alone for long, however, since the thirst for blood eventually overcame her, and she was forced to hunt in the nearby cities.

Occasionally a new vampire would be created during her ventures into the cities, and before long, she found herself with a growing following of vampires that looked to her for direction and guidance. At first, Yaneria denied them the leadership they sought, but when the advancing army of dragonborn mercenaries arrived to threaten the cities and the vampire's only source of sustenance, Yaneria knew that she had to act. Seeing this as her true purpose in the world, she took her vampires and dubbed them Blood Knights. With her small but powerful force she struck back at the mercenaries during the night, using unconventional tactics to bring a swift and decisive victory over the dragonborn.

With the opposition pushed out of the region, Yaneria quickly went to work establishing a kingdom in which her kind could survive and be supported by the people. In the Kingdom's infancy, strict laws of the land were put in place to ensure that vampires and mortals could coexist.

Major Geographical Sites

Mt. Nightfire

Mt. Nightfire is the largest active volcano on the continent of Falamar, if not the world. It stands at an impressive 31,079 feet above sea level and is named for the color displays that can be seen during the night hours. Being an active volcano, lava flow is a constant problem for the outlying mining towns.

Bay of Bones

Located just outside Shalen on the eastern portion of the kingdom, this bay was the site of a naval battle between the Ilium Empire and the Cushani. The battle involved more than three hundred ships over the course of month. Nearly 20,000 Humans, Orcs and Cushani lost their lives in the bay.

Today, the location is a trade route hazard due to all of the wreckage that occasionally pokes out from the water. Due to the rumored treasure that was carried on the ships, it has become a haven for treasure hunters and pirates looking to find power and wealth.

Bloodflower

The bloodflower is the national flower of Aiyia and can only be found growing wild on the slopes of Mt. Nightfire. The flower blossoms during the spring and takes on a deep rich red color, similar to that of blood. It is believed that the volcano, with its ash mixing in the soil, causes the flower to turn a deep red when it blooms. This has led to rumors that the flower contains magical properties which can give a person vampire-like powers without any of the detriments.

Shalforth, Capital (population: 150,245)

Founded: 1950 ab

Shalforth is a coastal city and capital of Aiyia. The city is the home of the Vampire Queen Yaneria as well as more than 5,000 other vampires. The city itself is known for its lavish scenery, architecture and political atmosphere. The vampires and nobles of Aiyia come to Shalforth and its court to conduct their political agendas for a cause or against one another. By royal decree, all vampire noble houses are required to maintain a lodging and presence within the capital for at least one season out of the year. By ensuring the lords are kept close, the laws of the crown cannot go unnoticed and rivals are forced to be more cautious in their plotting.

Since the darkened skies by the eclipse and the haze of Mt. Nightfire, the city has many lights spread all over, and each district is defined by a different dominant color of light. Visitors to Shalforth can navigate to particular regions of the city by following the light pattern of the streetlights and buildings. Red denotes the noble district, including the homes of all noble vampires and the royal palace. Blue denotes the sea district, which includes the warehouses and docks. White denotes the marketplace and most stores. Violet is for the bachsa district where those trying to become a child live and show their worth to potential benefactors.

The city is also home to the infamous Blood Knights. The Blood Knights are a military unit of knights who have been chosen to become vampires. The Blood Knights are ruthless in their duty to protect Aiyia which can make the city of Shalforth a dangerous place to conspire.

Alakar Nalion

Alias: The Holy Land

Heraldry: Crescent moon over three mountains

Government: Theocracy (High Priest Ikar XXIII)

Capital: Dragar

Region: Central Falamar

Total Population: 2,964,326 people

(Dwarf 75%, Tiefling 9%, Human 6%, Eladrin/Elf 4%, Dragonborn 3%, Other 1%)

Urban Population Centers:

1: Dragar (pop: 278,663)

2: Ikirus (pop: 143,965)

3: Nohmor (pop: 78,818)

4: Zahxar (pop: 34,083)

Description

The religious nation of Alakar (AL-a-car) is the central power of the Church of the Moon and ancestral home of the dwarven people. After centuries of civil war between the Asani and the Winkar, the dark dwarves rule the holy land of the faith with an iron fist.

Life & Society

The Church of the Moon dominates the way of life for the people of Alakar, and the people would have it no other way. All citizens of Alakar are required to join the Church of the Moon for at least a period of five years in either the Requiem or the Enforcers. It is considered an honor to serve the Church, and those who complete their service are allowed to move onto civilian life where they can support fields of work that help maintain the church.

Since the majority of the nation is located underground, the people have adapted to their environment. Though most people in the world are pale due to the Night Reign, the people of Alakar are exceptionally so, to nearly albino skin tone. With their total immersion in darkness, most people within Alakar have excellent vision in the dark compared to those who live above ground.

Alakar society is one common among religious centers. Whether through choice or fear, the people are devoted to their faith.

Regional History

The Astral Mountains were created by the Eladrin Loth and Syladrin in an effort to be closer to the Sun so their prayers could be heard. Their prayers asked for brethren with whom they might share the world, and thus, the Sun created the dwarves Ikar and Ikos who would be his voice and thoughts. The dwarven brothers took the Astral Mountains as their home where they established the holy city of Dragar. Through the years, the dwarven people developed into two distinct groups, the Asani and the Winkar. Each group focused on the faith of the Sun and the Moon respectively so that the people of the world could be taught the will of the gods.

When the Night Reign began, the dwarven people began to fight among themselves, blaming one another for the rise of Ilius and his Empire. This led to a civil war between the Asani and the Winkar, which resulted in the dwarves of the Sun being exiled from the Astral Mountains to the lands below.

At the fall of the Ilium Empire, the dwarves seized the opportunity to try to heal the old wounds they had suffered. This would only last a short while as Ikar, enraged that the body of Ilius would be defiled, murdered his brother. When the Council of the Divine stood up against Ikar's actions, he killed them in a blind rage. This led to another war against the Winkar during which they barely managed to prevail and which saw the death of the last divine founder.

During the Age of Heroes, the world, heroes and Shan'ree alike, shifted their focus to the progeny of the Wyrms. Alakar however, focused internally to rebuild what had been destroyed during the years of war. The Asani went into the lands of the other races to spread the faith of the Sun. Eventually, the faith of the Sun grew to new heights, while the Church of the Moon struggled to survive. It was during this time that a priest named Oxbridge came forth with a prophecy of Ilius' rebirth. Content to remain in the shadows, the Church of the Moon rebuilt slowly and quietly while the world around them engaged in one war after another and eroded their strength. By the end of the Crusader Wars, Alakar remerged as a powerful nation once more as most of the heroes lay dead.

By the turn of the next age, the people of Alakar had begun their movement to prepare for the Betrayer's return. The nation's entire focus was on helping prepare the world so that once he arose, he could take what was rightfully his. For hundreds of years the Church of the Moon spread out, slowly infiltrating nations and churches abroad. Alakar also was involved in several battles and skirmishes over the years, generally when a corrupter agent was discovered, and the situation had to be quickly covered up. When Ilius finally arose from his tomb, the Church was ready to act.

The Church of the Moon began the Blood Culling shortly after Ilius' rebirth using their corrupter agents to stage surprise attacks across central Falamar. The Blood Culling was the opening act of the Reunification War which ended several years later with Alakar and the Ilium Empire atop the pyramid of power.

Currently, Alakar is one of the most powerful nations in the land, second only to the Ilium Empire. Though the nation controls the faith of the people, they are beginning to find more and more followers of the Sun having success in usurping their hold on the people. In addition, the shadow elves of Lothanewi have grown more hostile towards the nation, sparking several battles between them and the nearby lands of Sadire.

Major Geographical Sites

Church of Saint Azmuth

The Azmuth is the first church constructed during the age of creation within the city of Dragar. The site had stood for thousands of years with little change to it. Originally constructed to hold joint services for the faiths of the Sun and the Moon, it is now used solely for rituals and services to the Moon.

Monik Pass

This mountain passage leads from the heart of the Astral Mountains into the valleys south of Lothanewi. This passage and field below it have been used over the years as a battlefield, and more recently, as the site of a skirmish site between Alakar and Lothanewi. With so much death having occurred in the pass, ghosts and undead are a common sight as is the Breath that rolls along the passage, looking for prey.

Council of the Divine

Seated atop the highest peak in the Astral Mountains, the council chamber for the former Council of Divine Races stands as a testament to faith and betrayal. Since the murder of the council at the hands of Ikar, no Winkar has been able to step into the chamber and survive the curse that awaits all who enter. It is said that only a being wishing to restore balance among all the races can enter the chamber where the secret of the races lies.

Dragar, Capital (population: 278,663)

Founded: 1000 bi

The city of Dragar is the original dwarven city founded during the Age of Creation. Originally created atop the mountains, time has increased the size of the city outward and downward to encompass miles of caverns and underground pockets of buildings carved out of rock.

The upper portion of the city is entirely devoted to the Church of the Moon and the clergy that maintain the faith. Monolithic towers reach high into the sky as symbols of the Winkar direct connection with the Moon. The other citizens of Dragar, comprised mostly of former clergy and works, are housed within the mountain where they work to maintain the city.

The leadership of the Church of the Moon resides within Dragar, directing the primary operations and doctrine of the religion. Wandering enforcers regularly make trips through Dragar to make reports on the status of the lands below the mountains.

Cushani Dominion

Alias: The Savage Kingdom

Heraldry: Six vertical claw marks & one horizontal

Colors: Red, Orange, Black

Government: Matriarchal Monarchy (First Ezadi Lira Firestorm)

Capital: Zalthiris

Region: Northwestern Falamar

Total Population: 5,795,716 people

(Cushani 90%, Dragonborn 3%, Human 2%, Dwarf 2%, Elf 2% Other 1%)

Urban Population Centers:

1: Zalthiris (pop: 186,284)

2: Mylar (pop: 145,642)

3: Uio (pop: 126,111)

4: Sliss (pop: 114,250)

5: Zaltar (pop: 18,410)

6: Virar (pop: 15,363)

Description

The untamed and savage lands of the Cushani Dominion are the farthest settled lands within the central kingdoms. Purposely left wild by the Cushani, the areas of the Kusar Jungles are home to a variety of creatures. Those of the other civilized races avoid such places. Cushani prefer the savage nature of their homeland, using it as a hunting ground to keep their skills and minds sharp. The cities resemble large, multiplatform mazes from which one must duck, climb and jump almost constantly to get from place to place.

Life & Society

The Cushani are a tribal matriarchal society who believe in ascension by lineage. From the beginning, the Cushani have operated in tribes and in prides. A tribe is the largest family structure of the Cushani, consisting of those descending from common ancestors. A tribe generally has many prides within its lineage and usually holds land in several cities. Each tribe is led by a single female called the Ezadi or First Female. It is the responsibility of the Ezadi to ensure the safety of the tribe and further its influence among the other tribes and the royal court.

A pride is a family unit of direct family members. It is also headed by the most dominant female of the pride called the Ezada which means Second Female. The Ezada's direct concern is for the safety of her pride and her young. She is the only one allowed to breed within the pride and typically has four to six males to choose from at any given time. Males are expected to protect the pride from any who pose a threat to the cubs and serve in times of war when called upon.

Spring is the mating season for the Cushani, a time of great joy but also one of cruelty for some males. Each male within the pride is expected to compete for the attention and affection of the Ezada in hopes of begin chosen by her to mate. This most often will led to honor duels between males who hope to earn the right to breed, each by proving he has the most to provide. Death is not all that uncommon during these duels, and even though the Dominion officially frowns upon such needless death, the Ezada tends to gain a certain amount of joy from watching males fight over them.

The other females of the pride tend to cubs within the pride. They are taught the necessities of Cushani way of life. Female cubs are taught social skills and politics, while the males are taught the ways of combat. Cubs that have grown old enough will begin their own prides, generally at the young age of 15. Usually, most fight the dominant male for the right to leave, to prove that they posses the skills necessary to protect their future pride. Females are not as lucky because the Ezada keeps them close to prevent future rivals to her pride. A male suitor of a yet-released female must fight the dominant male of the pride for his right to the female, again, to prove his worth. If the Ezada approves of the performance, she will release the female to begin her own pride.

Regional History

Queen Zara, the original Ezadi of the Cushani, led her people out of the Great Forest on a quest for a new homeland. Their journey brought them to the Kusar Jungles and the Mardok, a race of lizardmen. Queen Zara led a war against the Mardok which lasted nearly two decades years and ended in a Cushani victory. Many Mardok were killed in the fighting and a vast number of their villages were destroyed. The survivors were enslaved.

With a new home firmly in their grasp, the tribes quickly spread throughout the jungle. With a large number of newborn cubs, the Cushani population exploded across the region, which led to conflicts with several neighboring communities and eventually the Ilium Empire. The Cushani and Ilium would not enter into a full scale war, but many skirmishes between the two broke out for nearly the entire reign of Ilius. To support their skirmishes the felines learned several trades that they immediately put to use, such as metal smithing and building ships. By the Age of Heroes, the Cushani had firm control over the entire Kusal Jungle and multiple cities along the coast of the Red Sea.

With expansion, however, came the lust for power, and as the other kingdoms strove to rebuild, the Cushani began to implode from infighting among the noble tribes. The fighting by the nobles escalated to the point that the other tribes began to war against one another. The Tribal Wars would last for several generations with no clear victor in sight. It wasn't until the emergence of the Vampire Queen Yaneria that the tribes would reunite against a common threat.

Yaneria pushed far into the tribal lands of the Cushani, stopping only to feed, destroy the farmland and piking her enemies. Her quest took her up to the gates of Zathiris where she was finally stopped by the Dragon Riders. The reigning Queen Thralira of the Cushani had held back the Dragon Riders for fear of her life, and only when Yaneria was nearly standing upon her did she unleash the destructive force of the dragon riders. The vampire queen called a retreat, unwilling to risk the unlives of all of her brood just to topple the Cushani. She called for a truce and withdrew.

Currently, the Dominion is struggling with the beginnings of a second Tribal War. Queen Lira, viewed as a weak queen, has attempted to use the Dragonriders to quell rebellion against her rule. This act has led to several notable tribes calling for war.

Major Geographical Sites

Valketh Marsh

This marsh was the site of the final battle between the Mardok and the Cushani. The lizardfolk's capital was at this site, though it has since been destroyed, and only ruins remain. Many Cushani and Lizardfolk died during the Battle of Valketh. Their bodies, taken by the marsh itself, are said to haunt the area. Today the Cushani view the marsh as a Rite of Passage for young cubs.

Shining Cliffs

The Shining Cliffs are home to the Dragonriders of Falamar. When Cushani cubs are chosen to be Riders, they are brought to the cliffs to be bonded with their dragon companions. Elder Dragonriders look after and teach the young cubs how to be Dragonriders as the Elder Dragons teach the hatchlings. Most Cushani view the Cliffs as a holy site.

Thrakath's Tomb

The tomb of Thrakath of the Blood Talon tribe is the resting place of the infamous warlord who led the armies of Silla the Pure against the Mardok. Thrakath was known for his brilliant guerilla-style tactics and utter disregard for Mardok life and society. Much of the reason the Mardok are nearly extinct today is due to this warlord. The Cushani view him as a hero and savior.

Zalthiris, Capital (population: 86,284)

Founded: 400 ab

Zalthiris is the capital of the Dominion and home to the royal tribe, the Firestorm. The city was established on the coast as a port for trade over the Red Sea. The city is located at the end of a quarter-mile-long canal that is lined with spiral watchtowers, making the canal hazardous to assault.

The city designed for defense, spiral towers compacted closely together and deep trenches into the ground. A network of bridges, ropes, staircases and ledges litter the area, making travel across the city dangerous for other races, but is a virtual playground for the Cushani.

Region of Fao

Alias: Fallen Fao Empire

Government: Monarchy (Emperor Ilius)

Capital: Tetsuki

Region: Central Falamar

Total Population: 9,812,255 people

(Human 60%, Elf/Eladrin 20%, Tiefling 10%, Dwarf 4%, Cushani 4% Other 2%)

2: Shu	(pop: 40,195)
3: Hari	(pop: 12,058)
4: Po	(pop: 6,029)
5: Li	(pop: 4,623)

Description

The Fao Empire was created by the Shan'ree at the end of the Crusader Wars before their destruction. As descendants of the Shan'ree, the rulers of the Fao Empire have ruled over the region with mysticism and religion. Due to their heritage, the citizens of the Fao Empire have lived in a near-constant state of war with multiple other nations and states. After the Blood Culling, the Empire became a broken shell that was absorbed by the Ilium Empire and ruled by Lord Byron von Gillante, a death knight under the Betrayer's hand.

Life & Society

The residents of Fao are a deeply religious and spiritual people, believing them selves to be descendants of the powerful Shan'ree that inhabited the region during the Age of Heroes. Tradition, custom and duty form the daily life of the Fains and govern every aspect of their lives. When the Empire was created, the people needed something to unify them, a common purpose to help face the harsh reality of the post Crusader War world. The imperial family, placed in power before the disappearance of the Shan'ree, saw the needs of the people and established the Fain Traditions of Honor and Duty.

The first and foremost governing tradition of Fain society is their belief and faith in the Moon. It was the Moon that helped create the Shan'ree, and the Moon's gift that created the Fao Empire. Without the Moon, there would be no meaning to life.

The second governing tradition of Fain society is honor. The people believe that honor to one other, to oneself and to one's country are vital for the safety of all within the empire. To be dishonored is to be considered being in the lowest class of society, the ronin. The ronin are denied even the simplest of courtesies of the common person and generally are bandits and thieves.

Regional History

The region of the Fao Empire began as simple villages made up of primarily of humans and elves. The villages, having no military or magical value, were generally left out of the turmoil of the major kingdoms and avoided wars up through to the Age of Heroes. During that Age, the Dragon of Winter came to the town of Yakashima where he seduced many women who then died giving birth to the Shan'ree.

Also known as the Shades, they quickly spread across the area, seizing and controlling all of the farming communities. The villagers of the area were enslaved and conscripted into an army for the Shan'ree. With their armies established, the Shan'ree invaded the Republic of Lothanewi beginning the Shade-Elven war in 1700 ab. The war was slow and gradual, lasting more than 200 years. Not until the destruction of the Shan'ree at the end of the Age did the war finally end. The people under the control of the Shan'ree were now free of their direct control and established several communities in place of military fortifications.

The leader of this reestablishment was Fao Lou, former general of the Shade army and child of the Shan'ree. Fao Lou established himself as emperor over the communities and put into place the Traditions of Honor and Duty, which outlined the expected way of life for all children of the Shan'ree. Over 100 years the Fao empire expanded, solidifying its status as a nation dedicated to the Moon.

At the turn of the century in 2100 ab, Fao Xin ascended to the throne. The newly placed Emperor was not satisfied with the reach of his empire or the fact that many of the people who bordered his empire were worshipers of the Sun. This drove him mad with anger. Mobilizing his army, Fao Xin began a series of incursions against the Kingdom of Solis and Sadire. By the end of Fao Xin's reign as Emperor, he had expanded the borders of the Fao Empire up to the Red Sea, conquering the southern region of the old Ceria and the northern lands near the ice cap. Only Helvada resisted the expansion of the Empire.

However, with his twisted mind, the grandson of Fao Xin, Xiosha the Mad, took the ambitions of his grandfather even further. He ordered that all those not of Shan'ree blood must be sacrificed to the Dragonwell to appease the Wyrms of Winter, as decreed to him by the Moon. Thus began the Impure Massacre which led to the deaths of over 500,000 people. This also marked the beginning of the Helvada-Fao war, which resulted in the collapse of the Fao Empire back to its original size. Emperor Fao Xiosha was assassinated by a mistress shortly after he gave the order for the army to surrender at the end of the war.

Due to Fao aggression and willingness to sacrifice innocent lives, Solis, Ro and Helvada left a military presence within the Empire to keep them under control and prevent them from expanding. The empire groaned under the suppression, causing constant civil revolt and strife for the next several hundred years. The police force was finally driven out by citizen revolt in 2578 ab, and the Imperial family was restored to power a year later with the help of the Church of the Moon.

The empire was broken once more after the Reunification War when the last Emperor was killed on a fool's errand within the Kingdom of Solis. Absorbed into the Ilium Empire, the people strive to regain their identity through martial arts with hopes of one day becoming an empire again.

Major Geographical Sites

Dragonwell

The Dragonwell is located in the Tetsuki and is the site where the Wyrms of Winter was last seen. The Fains believe that after the Mother was freed from her earthly prison and the Wyrms of Winter was wounded by Datalis, the Wyrms of Winter fled back to his old hunting grounds where the Tetsuki stands today. The blood from his wounds soaked the ground and spread to the central well of the city. When the Wyrms of Winter was near death, it crawled inside the well and went to sleep and has yet to awaken. Today, the Dragonwell emits a powerful presence of evil and is the site of executions where the blood of those victim is drained into the well in hopes that one day the Wyrms of Winter will be awakened.

Dim Sho Academy

The Dim Sho Academy is the premier location of martial arts training within all of Falamar. The academy is located on the outskirts of the Empire, sitting upon the Cliffside of the Astral Mountains. The martial arts, though originally developed during the Age of Creation, were not refined until the Age of Heroes when the founders of the Empire developed the fighting styles that are used today.

Tetsuki (population: 143,210)

Founded: 2012 ab

The former capital of the Fao Empire, the Tetsuki, is the home of the powerless imperial family of the fallen nation and the lesser noble families who are the direct descendants of the Shan'ree. They continually plot in hopes of restoring their Empire.

This highly-developed city features many advanced ideas in urban development such as sewers, roads, running water and irrigation. With the high cost of living in the city, it is not uncommon to find poor along the streets and outside the city walls.

Gateway

Alias: Centerpoint, City of Circles, Naul'Turith
Government: Elected Council of Merchant Lords
Region: Central Falamar
Total Population: 2,998,770 people
(Human 30%, Tiefling 20%, Elf 20%, Dragonborn 17%, Cushani 8%, Dwarf 4% Other 1%)

Description

The city of Gateway, on the coast of the Red Sea, is the largest city in the known lands of Falamar. With easy access to the Red Sea and the mainland via the Dragon's Run and Eagle's Run. With no ties to any kingdom, Gateway rapidly grew as a trade city with access to nearly every other kingdom. In addition to the trade, the city is the home to the League of Circle Dancers, which brings a constant flood of visitors and dancers into the city.

The city has been around, in one incarnation or another, since the early years of the Age of Heroes. Since it's creation, the city has grown to cover several miles at its widest and is broken down into districts that are roughly circular in size. With all of the different districts pushed together, a bird's eye view of the city presents a very massive multi-gear-like appearance.

Life & Society

The massive city of Gateway sits in a central location accessible to most of the civilized lands of Falamar, and as a result, it is a melting pot with different races and cultures thriving within its city walls. Nearly anything can be found at the trade city from weapons and armor to spices to slaves. Everything is for sale; it is just a matter of price. The council of the city has yet to forbid an item for sale.

The city is ruled by a council of five members who are elected by the people of the city. Only those people who can purchase votes to cast are allowed to participate in the election process. The result of such a system is the rich ruling the city and holding all the political power.

The city is divided into multiple areas known as circles, giving a very gear-like appearance to the city. Each circle has developed into its own sub-city of culture and direction. The circles within the city are Siren, Eagle, Dragon, Dancer, Gold, Silver and Copper.

The Siren Circle is the major port of the city and encompasses the coast of Red Sea. This circle is heavy in trade and storage, with massive amounts of land devoted to warehouses and buildings for trade companies.

The Eagle and Dragon circles are connected to Siren's Circle and the rivers that run into the lake where a majority of trade comes into the city.

The Dancer Circle is the home of the League of Circle Dancers and the Coliseum and is located at the heart of the city. Here is where the Tournament of Circle Dancers takes place.

The Gold Circle is the location of the rich and the elected council of the city. Located on the northwest side of the Dancer circle, this area is comprised of lavish buildings and lavish people.

The Silver Circle is the location of the majority of the middle class, mostly adventurers and merchants. Situated on the side opposite from the Gold Circle, this area is one of the busiest and most exciting places within Gateway.

Last is the Copper Circle, which contains the city cemetery and the lower class. With run-down buildings, rampant underworld guilds and little money to go around, it is a place to be lost.

Regional History

The history of the city only dates back to the Age of Night, and it was originally known as Naul'Turith, the city-state of the Norbaski family who were outcasts from the Cerian Empire court. When Ilius rose to power, and the Ilium Empire began to conquer the known regions, the Norbaski family sought to join the Empire. As a show of strength, the family made a pact with the demon lord Abashi and thus the noble family and the whole city became the tieflings. United with the Ilium Empire, the tieflings ruled as lords and generals with their superior tactical minds and command over fire.

At the end of the age, Horan chose Naul'Turith as the first city in his battle against his father. The tieflings fell to the Army of Light and were exiled from the region. The city was nearly destroyed by a year-long siege and left to crumble.

During the Age of Heroes, the central region saw an explosion of population and trade everywhere due to the relative peace that the area was enjoying. The League of Circle Dancers, in an effort to find a central location to house their tournaments, took up residence in the ruins of Naul'Turith and began to rebuild. This resulted in a dramatic increase in population and visitors from across the land.

Major Geographical Sites

Raven's Tree

When the city was still known as Naul'Turith, the tieflings ruled their region with ruthless cruelty. One of the more visible acts of the tiefling rule was slavery. It was during the end of the first Night Reign that one half-elf in particular named Raven Blackclaw, was running from human slavers. He was eventually caught in the city after a bloody fight in which five slavers were killed. The slavers showed their documents to the tiefling enforcers to prove ownership over Raven and proceeded just outside the city to hang Raven upon an old oak tree for his crimes.

Some people of Naul'Turith cried out that he shouldn't be killed for defending himself and that slavery was wrong. The government, however, supported slavery and only stood by watching as they executed Raven. Several months later, the lower class of citizens rebelled against the tieflings which resulted in weakening the city forces, enough to make Horan's invasion possible. The now famous tree stands today in Dancer Circle just outside the coliseum and is the only remaining original reminder of the rule of the tieflings.

Ascension Cemetery

This cemetery is located in between the Tree and Sky districts and is the city cemetery. Any resident that dies or is killed within the city walls is buried here. The cemetery itself is a well designed, multi-leveled cemetery, able to accommodate the future populations of Gateway. The ground floor is a soil burial ground where those with lots of money or high station are buried. Below, there are six levels or burial chambers where those with less money can place their dead. With five entry points at the edges of the cemetery, it is easily accessible to nearly anyone. To protect the dead, the city guard patrols the grounds day and night to prevent grave robbers.

Four Corners Trading

This is the major market location within the city of Gateway. On any given day, a person can find close to 2,000 vendors within the market square and during the fall, up to nearly 5,000. The market square has gained so much renown that merchants from all over the world travel to the city during the fall to sell their goods. The city has, in recent years, established a new company of soldiers just to walk and protect the market square itself.

Circle Coliseum

The Circle Coliseum is easily the largest structure within Gateway. Built in 1541 ab, the coliseum was designed by the League of Circle Dancers to hold their tournaments.

The coliseum is broken down into three sections; the league circle, the housing and training circle and the competition circles. The league circle is the home of those members who run the league. Made up of former and retired circle dancers, they maintain the league rules and schedule.

The training circles are designed for training new members, allowing current members to practice and to house visiting members. The competition circles are for formal matches between members. The competitions are designed to be modular so anywhere up to 10 matches can take place at a single time, and up 25,000 spectators can watch.

Kingdom of Helvada

Alias: Kingdom of the Blue Spear
Government: Monarchy (Vacant)
Capital: Rilus
Region: Northern Falamar
Total Population: 3,812,255 people
(Human 98%, Other 2%)

Urban Population Centers:

1: Rilus (pop: 1,806,210)
1: Seretia (pop: 1,162,984)
2: Kodus (pop: 842,650)

Description

The kingdom of Helvada (Hell-va-da) is a nation of warriors. With more than two thirds of the population trained in combat, the Helvadian people are some of the most dangerous people in the world, living for warfare and the glory of victory.

Life & Society

Helvada is, above all, a militaristic kingdom, and emphasis on military fitness begins at a very young age. Both male and female children are highly regarded by the Helvadians. Though the men are responsible for making war, Helvadian woman enjoy a status, power and respect nearly equal to their male counterparts. Woman are allowed to own their own properties as well as the properties of men who are off at war. Helvadian women are also afforded the same educational and physical training as men since the Helvadians believe that strong women contribute to strong offspring.

Helvadian boys leave home for Military Boarding School at age 5 and are required to serve in the military (either army or navy) until age 35. They then pass into the Active Reserve Garrisons until age 60 when they either retire or are elected to the Elder Council.

Helvadian education strictly emphasizes physical strength and toughness, fearlessness in combat and absolute obedience to orders. Philosophy and law are also taught, but only as needed to create a true citizen warrior, the Xion.

Regional History

Following the victory in the Crusader War in 1998 ab, Helvada established itself as a local power in the region. During the following centuries, Helvada's reputation as a land fighting force was nearly without equal. In 2007 ab, Helvar embraced the births of his twin sons Daemeri and Synnendira, the future kings of his empire. With the founding of the Imperial City in 2012 ab and their northern expansion in 2022 ab, Helvada was forced to go to battle for the first time as a kingdom.

In 2023 ab, on the Steppes outside of present day Li, Helvar and the V and VII legions fought a bloody battle known as the Battle on the Steppes of Tears. During the six day battle, 3,500 Hoplites and 9,800 Imperial soldiers lost their lives. It concluded with the death of Helvar during the siege of the summit. Though Helvada broke the Imperial Army, it was at a great cost. King Helvar was returned to present day Ethana, displayed upon his shield. Fifty days and nights of mourning ensued, one day for each year of life of its once-proud king. Today, this time is known as the Festival of Life and occurs each year on the anniversary of the of his death.

Beginning in 2025 ab, potential contenders for the crown began to spring up all over Helvada. Though the King had two sons, they had yet to prove themselves in battle; therefore, a few of the Legion commanders decided to stake their claims to the throne. A bloody civil war ensued with eight of the Legion commanders vying for power against each other and against the Crown Princes. The pivotal battle, which took place in 2030 ab, occurred in the center of the kingdom in what came to be called the Battle of Endless Night. 50,000 Hoplites, Calvary, Archers and Support troops took the field against one another in a battle that would last for ten days and nights. Twenty five thousand would lose their lives before the “King’s Peace” was called and the remaining Legion commanders swore fealty to the Kings.

After the King’s Peace, Helvada focused mostly inward, maintaining its own borders and keeping the wandering undead of Ilium in check. Though they were involved in the occasional skirmish over the years, Helvada would not become involved in worldly matters until the Impure Massacre, when Helvada joined Solis, Ro and Sadire in a war against the Fao Empire. It would prove to be a fine test of Helvada’s legions, and they excelled in combat, proving to be the backbone of the infantry for the combined kingdoms. When the war with the Empire was over, Helvada joined the Alliance of Kings with the three other kingdoms as a symbol of peace and justice. The hope was to turn their sights upon Dracia and Aiyia to cleanse the land of evil. However, the Reunification interrupted these plans.

Helvada was the first kingdom to come under assault by the forces of Ilius during the Reunification War. This proved to be a costly mistake by Ilius since the Helvada legions were extremely experienced in fighting the undead. It was not until the Lich Lord Razel took to the field and slew the Helvada King that the tide finally turned and forced the people of Helvada to retreat to the northern ice lands. Even with their victory, the death and destruction visited upon the Ilium armies was staggering and resulted in prolonging the war for several more years against the other kingdoms.

Currently, the kingdom is in disarray. The reaper plague has claimed the ruling seneschal, leaving the kingdom leaderless. The legion commanders plot against one another which threatens to throw the kingdom into a new civil war.

Major Geographical Sites

Ice Caverns

The ice caverns are the major source of minerals for the kingdom. When the Helvada people first arrived, they spent nearly two seasons clearing the caves of their inhabitants. Now, the caverns are continually worked for ore for weapons, armor and equipment for the cities and the legions.

Winter Star Valley

The winter star valley is located on the southern edge of the area that leads up to the plateau where the cities of Helvada are located. The valley is an open and flat area, and it is the only path to reach the kingdom. It is ideal for legion combat. It is common for the legions to use the valley as a training ground for legion combat tactics.

Watch Towers of Arangol

The watch towers of Arangol were built after the withdrawal from old Helvada. The watch towers form a rough line from the edge of the Ilium Empire at Xan to new Helvada and serve as an early warning system against approaching armies. When an enemy invasion is spotted, each watch tower lights a pyre, forming a chain of fire all the way back to Rilus.

Rilus (population: 1,806,210)

Founded: 2968 ab

Founded after the Reunification War, the survivors chose the White Horn plateau as the site of their new home. With nearly a million workers, the new capital was built quickly and named Rilus after the commander of the 9th legion. The city sits along the edge of the plateau, overlooking the Red Sea. With a two hundred foot drop to the water below and 10 miles of open ground and two cities between the capital and the rest of the world, it is one of the most well-protected cities in the world.

As the largest city of the three, Rilus houses the ruler of the kingdom as well as the largest collection of legions. The city is designed specifically with warfare and sieges in mind, giving the city a practical and cold feel to it.

The people of Rilus are a hungry people who desire nothing more than to march on the Empire and destroy it to the last skeleton. This single-mindedness has created a people and city hell bent on destruction and designed to breed, house, train and field legions of soldiers.

- 4: Asunon (pop: 34,905)
- 5: Ebaia (pop: 19,248)

Description

The Ilium Empire is the largest nation in all of known lands. Ruled by Ilius the Betrayer, the Empire controls most of the regions and is allied with Aiyia, Alakar and Lothanewi. Only Helvada and the Dominion directly oppose the Empire, and they are under constant threat of invasion.

Each region within the Empire is described separately. This entry gives details on the central portion of the Empire centered on the capital, Ilium.

Life & Society

Few live within the central region of the Empire by choice. Some are traders and slavers, finding the region filled with refugees of fallen kingdoms while others have chosen to embrace the rule of the Betrayer and work to advance the Empire. The vast majority in the central region, however, are people and slaves unable to leave due to lack of money and mobility or threat of pain and death.

The land in this region is mostly stripped bare due to the many wars and battles that have been fought. The soil is unable to yield crops. Minerals and ore are the most common gathered resources used to supply the vast legions of the Empire and the seemingly never-ending effort of rebuilding destroyed cities. Due to the lack of critical resources, the central region relies heavily on the outer regions to bring in supplies, although this is a slow process, causing widespread hunger and deprivation.

Outside of the major cities, few, if any homesteads and farms can be found. Very few people dare to brave the countryside of the Empire for fear of roving bands of undead and the ever-hungry Breath. Instead, the countryside is filled with the ruins of fallen nations and outposts housing the vast armies of the Empire.

Outside of the sparse population are large numbers of soldiers who patrol into the area. The vast empty plains of the area serves as a usable place for the legions to camp and train new soldiers as they come of age. For most troops, being assigned to the center of the Empire is a lackluster assignment filled with fitness tests, training exercises and endless inspections. Most cannot wait to be shipped off to another region of the world.

Regional History

The central region of the Empire is deeply entrenched in history. The region first began as the human Cerian Empire, a nation of strong-minded warriors who had traveled south from the Ice Plains of the north. When Ilius betrayed Braun during the Age of Creation and brought about the first Night Reign, he chose his former home as the place for his new empire. The site of the betrayal and sacrifice soon became the capital of the Empire, simply called Ilium.

The Empire quickly expanded outward through the might of the undead and orc mercenaries. Within a short time, the Empire controlled most of the known world. For a thousand years Ilius ruled the world from his seat in Ilium. Due to his lust and lavish lifestyle, the Empire eventually came crashing down after the arrival of Ilius' son, Horan. The Solar Horan and his army marched upon the Empire and slew Ilius, which set in motion a series of events that led to the fall of the largest empire.

As the world recovered from its oppressive rule, the central region of the Empire was left to waste away from the wandering undead. The capital fell into ruin, a broken image of its former lavish glory. Two thousand years passed, and the region changed little. Unwilling to clear out the wandering undead left over from the days of the Empire, the region remained uninhabited with the exception of the occasional adventuring company.

The people wanted to forget what the Empire stood for and turned a blind eye to everything that was a part of it. By doing so, the people of the world did not notice the changes that would come to the region.

The change came from the Lich Lord Razel who managed to amass a sizeable army of undead that he wrestled away from Ilium. With his nearly unmatched abilities in arcane magic, Razel stormed through the area of the former Cerian Empire and carved out a small kingdom of his own. He was frustrated, however, by his inability to penetrate the borders of the Helvada Kingdom.

In the Fifth Age, Ilius was awakened and returned to his home and former empire. He embraced the undead who had been left there, waiting for their master to return. He took his faithful undead and began his march to rebuild his Empire with the Reunification War.

Now, with the war won and his rule solidified, Ilius rules once more but not as the lavish young man he once was. He rules alone from a city and castle on the beach where it all began.

Major Geographical Sites

Beach of Bloody Sands

This beach, located along the Red Sea near the capital is the site where Ilius betrayed Braun and began the first Night Reign. The sand of the beach has a constant and permanent red hue to it, which myth states is the blood of the Eladrin child who was killed. Rumors that Ilius can be found upon the beach alone at night are common.

Bone Towers

These massive towers are comprised of bone from the fallen enemies of the empire. Created by Razel, these towers are semi-intelligent, having a rudimentary ability to follow orders and directions. These undead towers move slowly across the land, drawing in the life of plants and animals around them to fuel their never-ending hunger. The bone towers each carry up to a company of troops and are commanded by the top echelon of the Heaven Knights. Each bone tower is named after a Shan'ree of the 3rd Age.

Kadarack Plains

The plains are located on the northern and western edges of the region along the borders of the old Helvada kingdom. The plains are well known as the site of three famous wars; the Solar War, the Crusader War and the Reunification War. The plains are, in essence, one large graveyard, filled with the bodies of the ten million or more who died there. The plains now are thick with the Breath and undead constantly wander the area.

Ilium (population: 1)

Founded: 1 ab

The capital of the Ilium Empire is a holy place in the eyes of the Church of the Moon. Only Ilius resides within the capital, surrounded by legions of undead soldiers. No living creature is allowed within the capital, and those creatures who have tried to enter have been killed and given to the Breath to be reborn as one of the undead. These newly created undead are made a part of the legions around the capital, now tasked with protecting it against the other unfortunate creatures who attempt to enter the city.

The city itself is a sprawling collection of gothic-style buildings all centered around Rosenberg Castle where the city's lone occupant resides. The castle itself stands an impressive 10 stories tall with a lone tower that adds another 10 stories.

Within and outside the city, the weather is always cloudy, dark and foreboding. The Breath is always on the streets and plains around the city, a constant hunter of living creatures.

Region of Iso'Latarin

Alias: The Fallen

Government: None

Capital: None

Region: Western Falamar

Total Population: Scattered

Description

The nation of Iso'Latarin was founded by Morisa, wife of Latarin in accordance with his wish for a place for all within Falamar to come and learn the ways of using magic. Beginning with a single college on Raven's Isle, the idea quickly spread and several more colleges were constructed to meet the demand. The nation is now all but empty. The Lich Lord Razel corrupted the arcane energies of the magi of Iso'Latarin during the Reunification War, resulting in all of the people disappearing into the unknown. The cities of this vast arcane nation are all that remain of the people who once inhabited the area.

Regional History

The region was sparsely populated up through the Age of Heroes, made up mostly of fisherman, merchants, farmers and pirates. Other, more dangerous creatures were also common throughout the area, especially orcs who favored the scimitar plains. During the first Night Reign, the orcs banded together, forming the Slayer Legions who joined the cause of Ilius. These powerful legions of orcs marched through the southern parts of Falamar, wrecking havoc and leaving destruction in their wake.

During the Third Age, Felor the Just swept through the area, driving the Slayer army back to the far reaches of the scimitar plains.

At the end of the Crusader War, the archmage Latarin moved out of the spotlight as one of the last surviving heroes to focus on building a college of arcane studies so that he could pass on his knowledge of magic. Though he died before he could see his dream become reality, the movement carried on, evolving into the Confederation of Iso'Latarin.

The cities of Iso'Latarin began as learning centers, places where one could get simple instruction in the ways of magic. As they grew, more and more people settled around them, allowing them to grow and expand. During the early years, nearly all of the populace were former students from the colleges, who decided to stay in the area to give back to the community that had given them an education.

With such a strong focus on working and giving to the community and college, the cities that formed around the college became completely focused on education, using it as a measure of one's success and status within the society.

Throughout the years, Iso'Latarin remained neutral in the affairs of the world, preferring to focus on education and trade. Occasionally, the orcs of the scimitar plains would invade the republic, or pirates would create trouble on the waters of the Sea of Shadows. These events were sporadic throughout the years, however, allowing the republic to develop into an almost utopian society.

The nation's lack of involvement led to the country's downfall when the Reunification War broke out after the rise of Ilius. Caught by surprise, the nation quickly fell under the onslaught of Lord Excalon and his Nullmandor necromancers. In an effort to save their lives, the head schoolmasters of the republic combined their magic in a ritual to wisk the people of Iso'Latarin away from certain death.

The ritual was only a partial success. Excalon managed to interfere with the ritual, corrupting it with his own magic so that instead of being gated to Avengard, the people of Iso'Latarin were sent to a demiplane of nightmares and darkness.

The region is now home to a vast array of creatures, some of which are magical experiments set loose upon the land. The cities stand vacant and untouched, thieves and pirates unwilling to venture past the creatures in the area.

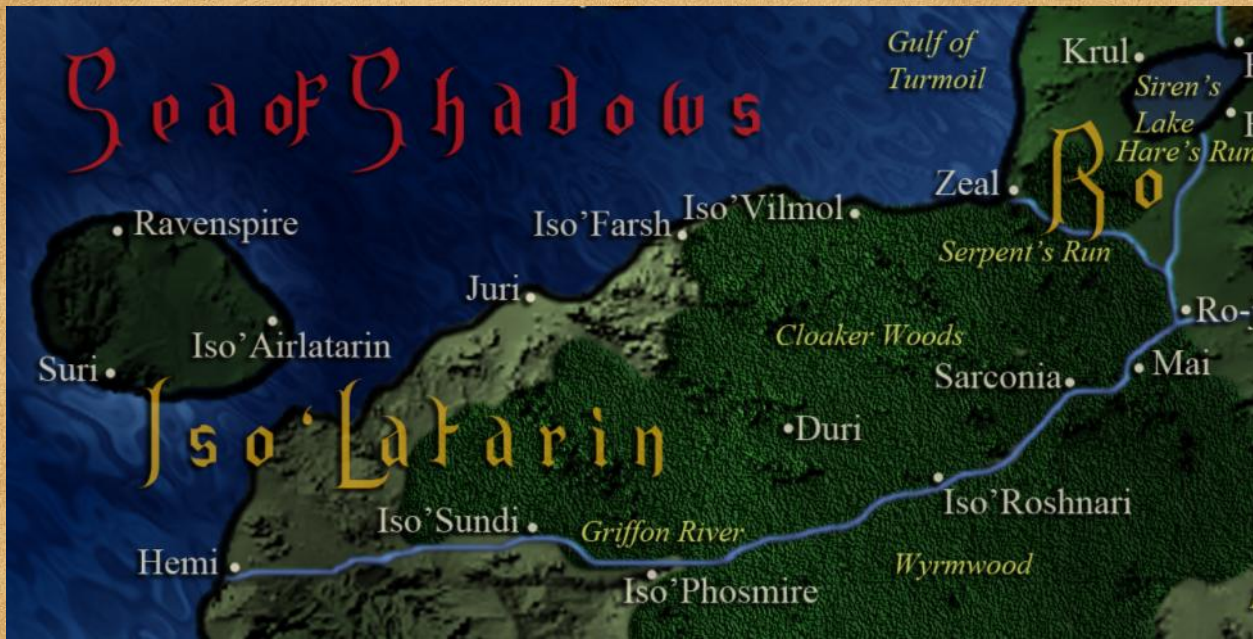

In recent years, the orc population of the region has swelled without the mages of Iso'Latarin to keep them at bay. Led by the Blood Arrow tribe, the orcs have attempted to try and rebuild the Slayer legion, believing it their birthright to command such an army and to rule with it. The orcs have chosen the city of Hemi as their home, renaming it Thrak'nor.

Major Geographical Sites

The region can be broken down into five distinct areas, each home to its own creatures and dangers.

Cloaker Woods

The cloaker woods are located in the north-east portion of the region, encompassing the north half of the forest and separated by the Griffon River. The woods are the most populated areas in the region, filled with small and weaker creatures that have been pushed away by other stronger creatures.

Dominating the forested area are the evil and cruel cloakers. The cities left behind in the forest are typically inhabited by goblins and kobolds who are constantly at war with one another.

Raven's Isle

This isle within the Sea of Shadows is a pirate's haven. With naturally deep waters and abandoned cities, several pirate groups use the island as a base of operations. Most prominent of the pirates is a cushani named Vexzor, the self-proclaimed pirate king. Vexzor uses the city Iso' Airlatarin as his base of operations and seat of power over the other local pirate groups.

The city of Ravenspire however, remains uninhabited due to belief that it is haunted. Local pirates say that the city is haunted by the spirit of Latarin who is angry that his people are gone. Others believe that it is some leftover magical defense that no one has yet been able to defeat.

Scimitar Plains

These plains are located on the western side of the region, bordering the forest. Named after the blades used by the native orcs, the lands are ruled by the Blood Arrow orc tribe from their seat of power in the city of Thrak'nor, which was formerly known as Hemi.

In addition to the orcs, the plains are home to a variety of bizarre creatures and aberrations that are the result of magical experiments by the former mages of the region.

Sea of Shadows

The Sea of Shadows is one of the major oceans of the world and is known for its violent storms, unusually large sea creatures and a large kingdom of sahuagin who continually raid the shores of the Gulf of Turmoil.

The sea is littered throughout with small islands, although most can be found along the northern edge. Control of these islands is continually contested by pirates and the sahuagin.

Pirates are well-known in the area, making trade routes through the Sea of Shadows dangerous. Most ships are equipped for combat and usually carry at least one mage.

Wyrnwood

Wyrnwood is the other half of the forest south of the Griffon River. This area of the forest has gone through a dramatic change since the departure of the mages with several green dragons now calling the forest home. Their presence has pushed away a lot of other creatures, especially those unable to compete with a dragon for food and territory.

In addition to the green dragons, several tribes of lizardmen, kobolds and dragonborn also inhabit the area, working with the dragons to further control their region of the forest. This alliance of creatures has put them atop of the power structure in the region, rivaled only by the Blood Arrow orcs who constantly wage war against the alliance of dragonkind.

Karsari Federation

Alias: Ondia, Palmos, Lands of Trade

Government: Council of Merchant Kings

Capital: Eoska

Region: Western Falamar

Total Population: 6,448,291 people (Human 50%, Cushani 25%, Dragonborn 10%, Halflings 5%, Elf/Eladrin 4%, Dwarf 3%, Tiefling 2%, Other 1%)

Urban Population Centers:

2: Minsk	(pop: 569,807)
3: Kya	(pop: 456,392)
4: Halnut	(pop: 399,113)
5: Drev	(pop: 254,762)
6: Briar	(pop: 192,705)

Description

The Karsari Federation is a collection of city states that control the northern shores of the Sea of Shadows. They maintain their sovereignty by remaining neutral in foreign affairs and leveraging supply to keep and grow their power. They are a nation of traders where coin rules everything.

Life & Society

“To truly live is to be wealthy” say the people of Karsari. Anything can be bought, and anything can be sold. Within the society of Karsari, the measure of one’s worth is measured by the sum of one’s wealth. Wealth comes in many forms, such as coin, but also land, art, and slaves. Even loyalty can be bought and sold, and bribery is common and even expected throughout the Federation.

The people of Karsari are extremely judgmental of others and themselves. Race, homeland and even gender can sway the price of goods and services between the different merchants.

Though the land has an abundance of independent merchants, trade is ruled by the powerful trade companies that are chartered with the Federation. Sanctioned to conduct business with little oversight, the trade companies of Karsari are ruthless in their pursuit of wealth and are run by some of the most powerful merchant lords in the world. Even entire families are owned by the trade companies, tasked with providing goods for little pay.

Though oppressed, the common folk of Karsari realize that their condition is a vast improvement over those forced to live within the lands controlled by the Ilium Empire and its allies. They may be in poverty but they are still, in essence, free.

Working to keep the Federation running is a Council of Merchant Kings. Six kings, one from each city-state within the Federation, sit on the council which meets once every two years. The council decides policy and regulations for the Federation and oversees major trade disputes between trade companies. Bribery and blackmail are common tools for the merchant kings when attempting to pass regulations that favor their city-state and trade companies loyal to them.

Regional History

The region was first settled during the Age of Night by refugees from the Unification War who sought an escape from oppression. The lands of the west were largely uninhabited, and the Sea of Shadows provided to be an excellent source of food. Its natural deep waters made naval trade easy to conduct. Life was simple and livable until the arrival of the Nullmandor.

Driven out from the lands of the east, the Nullmandor wandered the world aimlessly. It was within the lands of the west that they began to gather, far from the eyes of the Eladrin. With their arcane powers, they quickly exercised power over the simple people. They used them for their dark rituals and experiments in an attempt to recover their lost necromantic powers. Though the Nullmandor never united into a nation, they made the region a bleak place of people born and bred to serve the.

Long after the beginning of the Age of Heroes a hero of the people finally emerged, a man by the name of Felor. The brother of Pelus, Felor traveled to the region to escape the glorious shadow of his brother.

What he found disgusted him, and he sought to unseat the Nullmandor from power. With help from his company of friends, he slowly defeated the groups of Nullmandor, driving them far into the Firemane Forest. He then rallied the people and formed the nation of Ondia.

Unlike his brother, Felor was born of two humans and passed away of old age at the height of Ondia's peaceful existence. For hundreds of years the Ondians were left alone to live out their lives.

During the Age of Shadows, Ondia would once again be threatened by the Nullmandor who now had a powerful ally, the ancient black dragon Xerchos and his legions of saughin allies. Unable to hold back the advancing forces, Ondia was conquered and reformed as the Kingdom of Palmos under the rule of Xerchos.

Oppressed once more, the people turned to a new hero to free them from oppression, a wizard named Karsi. Trained in Iso'Latarin, Karsi traveled to Palmos with an army of mages with the intent of defeating Xerchos. With help from the Cushani Dominion to the north, Karsi was able to assault the capital of Palmos and defeat the black dragon. Xerchos fled the region in defeat, but not before crippling Karsi.

Left blinded and crippled, Karsi stayed in Palmos to help rebuild the region. With the help of his wizards, he founded the Arcane Order of Magical Arts so that the people would always have someone to protect them from future enemies.

Just before Karsi's passing, the people finally united under a new banner, the Karsari Federation in honor of the hero who helped free them. Since its formation, the Karsarians have focused on remaining neutral in foreign affairs in hopes of maintaining their way of life.

Major Geographical Sites

Pirate's Coast

The shores of the Sea of Shadows is known as the Pirate's Coast due to the numerous pirates that plague the area. With the vast amount of trade that crosses the sea, piracy is highly profitable, to the point that it has become a business of its own with pirates being hired by trade companies to suppress competition.

Dragon's Cove

Located on the western edge of the Pirate's Coast, Dragon's Cove is thought to be the lair of the ancient black dragon Xerchos. The region is heavily guarded by saughin clans loyal to the dragon, however, making any confirmation of the lair difficult at best.

Firemane Forest

Forming the northern border of Karsari is the Firemane Forest. Wild and untamed, the forest is home to many dangerous creatures. Named after a Cushani pride that called the forest home during the Age of Heroes, it is now haunted by the spirits of the dead Cushani who mysteriously disappeared.

Eoska, Capital (pop. 686,447)

Founded: 1991 ab

The jewel of the west, Eoska is the current capital of the Karsari Federation and the meeting place for the Council of Merchant Kings. Located on a peninsula, Eoska is surrounded on three sides by docks and harbors, which allows a vast amount of naval trade to be conducted through the city.

The city is ruled by King Jaris Fernach who also runs the West Shadow Trade Company. Between managing the city and the trade company, King Fernach is widely considered to be the wealthiest man in the Federation. He rules his city-state like he does his trade company, ruthlessly and efficiently.

Eoska is also home to one of the Arcane Order colleges. As the School of Water, the college focuses primarily on magic influenced by water. Wizards from the School of Water are always in high demand by trade companies for their knowledge and power to help sailing the Sea of Shadows.

Republic of Lothanewi

Alias: The Great Forest

Government: Council of Three

Capital: Fall'hi'lithai

Region: Eastern Falamar

Total Population: 11,223,473 people

- 6: Fall'is'kithra (pop: 136,413)
- 7: Sil'hi'lamanus (pop: 127,554)

Description

The Great Forest is the cradle of life for the world and is currently the home of both the sun and shadow elves. The Great Forest is home to many creatures in addition to the elves and eladrin. The wilderness has been left to allow nature to run its course as is tradition among the elves.

With this light approach, the wilderness of the Great Forest has evolved into a full and vibrant place with a variety of dangerous creatures. The life of the area is in stark contrast to much of the world because of the Tree of Life at the center of the forest. The tree acts as a direct connection to Avengard, allowing that realm's vibrant energy to keep the Great Forest from succumbing to the constant darkness.

Life & Society

With both of their founders gone, the elves began to evolve into the society that they have today. The first step taken was to form a Council to guide the actions of the society as a whole. This is the Council of Three. The Council serves as the government of the Elven people. The Council, to ensure proper representation, is made up of three chosen representatives from each established Caste of society. The Castes were designed to govern each aspect of Elven way of life and fall into three broad groups: the Worker Caste, the Guardian Caste and the Magus Caste. The Council of Three meets at Fall'hi'lithai once every 3 years or during times of crisis. Any caste can request a meeting of the Council, although two of the three representatives of that caste must approve of the action before the request for meeting is sent out.

The Worker Caste can be broken down further into Crafters and Workers. The Crafters fulfill the role of artistic expression and the Workers fulfill the role of creation from farming to clothing to buildings. This caste is by far the largest of the three Castes and is one of the most respected since everything that allows a society to function is created by this Caste. The Council Members from the Worker Caste are chosen based on professional talent, relations within the Caste and political ability.

The Guardian Caste's purpose in society is protection. Guardians are trained from early in life in a variety of martial abilities and to follow a very rigid command structure. The Council Members from the Guardian Caste are chosen based on military performance and are usually at or near retirement from active duty.

The Magus Caste is the smallest of the three castes within the Elven Nation. Their purpose is the spiritual well-being of the Elven people, developing and maintaining life magic, maintaining the history of the elves and establishing goals for the future. Many of the Magus Caste are born into it and are raised completely within the Magus Community. This helps build a strong relationship with the religious and magic practices and understanding of the workings of the Sun and the Moon.

Regional History

The history of Lothanewi begins with the creation of the world itself. When the world was born, all was within the Great Forest. When the eladrin were created, the land was theirs to care for. As the other races were born and grew, new lands were formed from the mountains to the plains. Though the forest grew smaller in size, its importance remained.

When Ilius rose to power during the first Night Reign, the Great Forest became a beacon of hope for the other races and nations. The Empire and the eladrin continually battled against one another; however, the Empire did not gain much ground in the untamed forest.

When Horan enlisted the help of the eladrin in forming his Army of Light, they gifted him with their bloodcrest archers and promised to protect the innocent while he waged war.

Change would finally come to the republic after the end of the first Night Reign. During the final Council of Twilight meeting between the progenitors of the divine races, Loth and Syladrin were killed by Ikar the dwarf. Their deaths resulted in the eladrin forever losing their connection to Avengard. Only those who were in Avengard at the time of their deaths were spared this fate.

With this change, the elves lost their ability to control and feel the Great Forest, resulting in the forest becoming untamed and wild. In addition, the elves and shadow elves constantly fought over the right to rule the ancestral homeland for thousands of years.

After the Reunification War, the shadow elves gained control over the forest and the republic, now named Lothanewi after their progenitor. The shadow elves still attempt to look after and help the forest though, without the help of the sun elves and the eladrin, they are fighting a losing battle.

Major Geographical Sites

Tree of Life

The source of power and the center of the created world, the Tree of Life is a sacred holy place in the eyes of the elves and eladrin who protect it at all costs from outsiders. The Council of Three is known to hold meetings at the tree during times of great importance. It is also common for elves and eladrin seeking guidance in life and religious inspiration to make a pilgrimage to the Tree of Life.

The Towers of the Sun and Moon

Before the birth of the other races, the eladrin worshiped the gods in their own way, and the towers they constructed were their places of worship and knowledge. After the rise of the dwarves, the eladrin used the towers as places of knowledge and training in the ways of magic. Currently, only half of the 50 towers remain standing and are mostly controlled by the shadow elves.

Faragon's Rift

Located on the northern edge of the republic is a canyon that stretches nearly a hundred miles long and is five miles wide at its widest. The elves believe that the rift was created by the Wyrms of Winter when it sought to imprison the Mother in the earth. Currently, the rift is inhabited by a variety of chromatic dragons who consider the area a holy site, believing that the wyrmlings born there will have divine blessings.

Fall'hi'lithai, Capital (pop. 192,205) Founded: 2350 bi

This city is the oldest standing city in the world, easily predating Ilius and the first Night Reign. The grand city stretches several miles across and is integrated into the forest as much as possible. The buildings are a mix of stone and wood and have an organic look to them as if they were grown rather than built. The city has an overall calming effect, leaving one at peace with oneself.

Most prominent within the city are the two original Towers of the Sun and the Moon. Standing at opposite ends of the city, each spire stands roughly 100 feet tall. They are easily the most visible structures within the city. The two towers are closely guarded by the shadow elves who allow only a select few to enter the sacred buildings.

The city is inhabited mostly by shadow elves, though some sun elves can also be found, working tirelessly to reunite the two sides. These sun elves are tolerated only due to their blood relation to the shadow elves and are generally ignored or kept huddled together in certain portions of the city.

Region of Ro

Alias: The Kingdom of the Sun
Government: Monarchy (Queen Yaneria)
Capital: Ro-jah
Region: Western Falamar
Total Population: 20,215,672 people

- 5: Zeal (pop: 120,029)

Description

The region of Ro was originally founded by Pelus during the Age of Heroes and was the sister nation to the Ondian Federation along the Sea of Shadows founded by his brother Felor. Pelus founded the kingdom on the virtues of honor, courage and valor. His paladin-like ways paved the way for a strong-knit community and eventually an extremely powerful military. It was not until his death in 1993 ab at the hands of his own daughter that the kingdom begin to spiral out of control.

With the kingdom's fall to Aiyia during the Reunification War, it became an area rife with rebellion and conflict. Though ruled by Cauldor Threr, a traitor noble house under Aiyian control, the people work in hope that their lost prince will one day return home to take his rightful place on the throne and free them from the oppressive rule of the Night Reign.

Life & Society

It is said that there are two types of people within Ro, the Lions and the Dragons. These two party lines show the division of loyalty and viewpoints for a conquered nation. Generally the people of Ro love their country and what it used to stand for. They are willing to fight to remove Aiyia from power; however, they lack the leadership to organize.

The Lions are those people who still hold onto the traditional views of Pelus. They strive to protect their way of life as it was before his death. They believe that only the eldest of Pelus' descendants should sit on the throne and only if he bears the hereditary birthmark of Pelus which looks like a dragon eye upon the left breast. These people are commonly found among the rebels fighting against the Empire.

The Dragons are those people who believe that a new direction is necessary in order for the kingdom to survive. They believe that because the bloodline of Pelus is so convoluted with impure offspring and missing children that a new, fresh bloodline should take the throne. These people are divided themselves, with some wishing to remove the Empire from their lands so they can reestablish the kingdom on their own terms, while others generally support the rule of Empire as the change they were looking for.

Regional History

Pelus was born in the region known as the Siren's Lake, the offspring of the Wurm of Spring and Geladrine Ro. After freeing the region to escape the control of the Shan'ree, Pelus united the surrounding towns and cities under his banner of the Lion in 1845 ab. Pelus would then rule the newly formed kingdom from the largest city at the time, renamed Ro-jah. Under his reign of nearly 150 years, the Kingdom soared to new heights of power. Only the ancient Ilium Empire equaled Ro's economic and military strength. The curse of such a long-lived king, however, was that he outlived his own children and even his own grandchildren.

At the time of his death in 1993 ab, there was no direct heir to the throne. Because of this, the descendants of the children of Pelus quickly descended to infighting and eventually all out war. The War of Princes lasted for nearly 50 years until Calodor Ro finally took the throne.

The Ro family would not be able to hold onto the throne for long, however, as a score of other noble families escalated the deadly political game of Contending for the throne by resorting to assassination, and during the first civil war in 2218 ab, they totally annihilated an entire noble family. By the end of the second civil war in 2376 ab, eleven of the noble family houses had been completely destroyed.

In addition to the civil wars that ravaged the kingdom, word finally reached the kingdom that the Vampire Queen Yaneria was the daughter of Pelus. Outrage quickly spread throughout the land which launched the Lion's Revenge. Over 400 years of war between the two kingdoms would follow, leaving hundreds of thousands dead and the royal families of Ro in shambles.

By the beginning of the Fifth Age, only seven of the great royal houses remained. Each house was old and powerful; however, the available heirs to the throne were lacking in each house due to the constant political backstabbing and assassinations. The last heir to the throne was Hazard Ro II who disappeared during the Reunification War.

Major Geographical Sites

Valley of the Kings

The Valley of the Kings is located near the city of Zeal in a natural canyon that stretches for nearly 30 miles. Pelus the Peacekeeper picked this as the location where all of his bloodline should be buried upon their deaths. Construction on the tombs began in 1830 ab and was completed began in 1890 ab. Defensive measures were also put in place during the construction to help prevent the dead from being removed or raised from the dead. Since the return of the Night Reign, the Valley of Kings has been overrun with the undead.

Fountains of Pelguard

The Fountains of Pelguard were built and completed in the home town of Pelus Ro at Hols. Calodor Ro commissioned the fountains to honor the founder of the kingdom and his achievements. The fountains of Pelguard depict Pelus locked in combat with the two Shan'ree who had reigned over the area during his youth. Made of white marble, they show Pelus in his ceremonial armor with sword in combat with the Shades Tarsor and Vorrcha. This fountain is one of the oldest historical landmarks in the Kingdom.

Geladrine's Spring

Geladrine's Spring is the site of Geladrine's murder at the hands of Tarsor and Vorrcha and the later poisoning of the Wyrms of Spring. According to myth, Geladrine's blood mixed with the water of the spring to give it magical properties. Today, many believe that the spring can heal the sick and hold off old age. Though neither of these miracles has been proven, it is known that none of the undead who have been bathed in the waters of Geladrine's Spring, have risen.

Ro-jah, Former Capital (pop. 558,540)

Founded: 1652 ab

The city of Ro-jah is the capital of the Kingdom of Ro. The river city was originally named Jahr after its half-elven founder in 1652 ab. Pelus Ro selected the city as the capital of his new kingdom due to its somewhat removed location from the troubles with the Shan'ree. The city exploded in population and trade due to the extreme popularity of King Pelus. Due to the extended life span of the King, many noble houses were created in and around the capital, which created a vast array of castles and mansions along the countryside.

Today, the city is a used and worn out version of its former self due to almost constant fighting among the noble houses. Most of the city was constructed of white limestone or marble that gave it a very pure and peaceful appearance. After centuries of conflict, the city has since become darker, the pure white becoming a pale dull color. The city itself is divided in two districts, separated by the river. The northern side of the city is labeled the Lion's District and is the residential sector, which includes the royal palace and the noble houses. The second district is called the Dragon's District and is the merchant and military sector.

Even though the constant wars that have plagued the land typically start and end in Ro-jah, the city has stood the test of time and tragedy to become a symbol of strength and power for the people of Ro.

Region of Sadire

Alias: Demonfall

Government: Independent warlords

Capital: Independent city-states

Region: Eastern Falamar

Total Population: 8,967,004 people
(Tiefling 75%, Elf/Eladrin 10%, Human 8%, Dwarf 3%, Cushani 3%, Other 2%)

- 4: Regar (pop: 96,314)
- 5: Masshiro (pop: 58,627)

Description

The union of Sadire is a collection of city states that are at odds with one another and everyone around them. Once a part of the Alliance of Kings, Sadire has fallen from grace once more after their ancestral pact came back to haunt them.

The region is rich in land and resources, with Lake Yoshiro at its center, the Astral Mountains to the west and the Sea of Twilight to the east. Though rich resources help ensure the region can survive, the bickering of the warlords has hampered the city state's ability to act cohesively.

Life & Society

The people of Sadire are a torn but proud people. Of those that joined Ilius during the first Night Reign, the tieflings became the scapegoats for all that was wrong with the Empire. The tieflings of Sadire constantly strive to outlive their demon heritage and their dark history through good deeds and just actions.

After the last demon war that tore their kingdom apart, the people were divided in their direction for the future. There were those who wished to become isolated, noting that even with all the good deeds that they had done, the demons still came and destroyed. They maintained that the time had not yet come to fight Ilius since their souls and hearts were not ready for such a burden.

Others, however, felt that no road is without its bumps, and the fact that they had beaten the demons showed they were on the right path to salvation.

With each city independent of the others, each developed its own styles and customs, though there is some carry-over between all the cities of Sadire. Each of the cities is ruled by a warlord who served during the second demon war. These warlords carved up what was left of their kingdom for themselves.

Each city is designed in a similar way, with a motif of flames design and steep roofs with stone guardians depicting gargoyles, imps and other demonic watchers.

Regional History

The region was sparsely populated before the fall of the Night Reign. Originally populated by plantations and nomadic barbarians, the area underwent drastic change with the arrival of the tieflings. Taking the lands around Lake Yoshio as their own, the tieflings established several cities over the next several hundred years, quietly secluding themselves from the rest of the world so as to preserve their race and way of life.

After the formation of their empire in 1290 ab, the tieflings of Sadire worked to put their past deeds behind them, teaching their children how to control the demon within them. This secluded way of life was tested throughout the years by the nations around them who still remembered the way they were treated by the tieflings. Yet the empire endured these trials and hardened their resolve.

In 2190 ab, Sadire was invaded by their neighbor, the Fao Empire in the War of Roses. This war began as a result of Fao's desire to expand and gain complete control of the resource-rich Lake Yoshiro. Unable to overcome the strange martial artist fighting style and Shan'ree powered magic,

Sadire fell to the Fao Empire in 2270 ab. The tieflings were then forced to endure the Impure Massacre, but they held on until eventually the Fao Empire crumbled at the hands of the kingdoms of Solis, Ro and Helvada.

Though they were freed from the sadistic rule of the Fao, they found themselves at the mercy of the kingdoms that still held a grudge against their ancestors. Sadire was, as a result, considered part of Fao and put under a joint occupation by the three kingdoms.

The tieflings eventually rebelled through diplomatic means, and by showing their changed nature, they gained their freedom in 2420 ab. This peaceful nature was short-lived, however, as the newly-freed nation descended into civil war over who would run the kingdom. The wars finally ended in 2675 with the formation of the Sadire Utopia Confederacy. This pacifist leadership led to disaster less than a 100 years later as demons invaded the confederacy, looking to fulfill the pact that was made with their ancestors. This led to the first demon war in which the tieflings pushed the demons back.

Knowing they needed help, the pacifist leaders were dethroned and the warlords of the first demon war seized control, reaching out to the nations of Solis, Ro and Helvada. The Alliance of Kings was formed, and the second demon war was ignited. The demons did not have sufficient time to regroup after the first war and were driven deeper into the Demonfall where they currently remain.

After the Reunification War, Sadire found itself as a nation hanging on by a thread. After losing to Lothanewi during the war, Sadire was forced into a treaty that bars the region from forming a kingdom and military.

Major Geographical Sites

Lake Yoshiro

Lake Yoshiro is a large inland lake formed from rivers and creeks that flow down from the Astral Mountains. The freshwater lake is rich in fish and other aquatic animals; however, it has since become corrupted with dangerous creatures that attack merchant ships, and dragons have begun to fiercely protect their newly claimed territory.

Demonfall

The demonfall is located on the eastern side of the region. It is an incredibly deep crater with hundreds of caverns that lead deep underground. The crater was created during the first demon war of Sadire when the demons were pushed out of the former Empire. They later emerged during the second demon war, but were once again pushed back into the crater. The crater now is under the control of the defeated demons who have worked to rebuild their numbers and equipment in order to topple Sadire once and for all.

Bloodreaver Falls

The Bloodreaver Falls is a waterfall located near the city of Dak. It is the site of the opening battle of the first demon war. Thousands of tieflings and demons perished in the fighting which resulted in the waterfalls running red with blood. The magical nature of the demonic blood has resulted in the waterfall remaining red, and the crimson color has since spread to cover most of the Sidko river.

Masshiro (pop. 8,627)

Founded: 2296 ab

The city of Masshiro has a long and bloody history, which has shaped its people's viewpoints about the future. The city, originally known as Tenko under the Fao Empire, traded heavily with the Sadire Empire during the 4th Age. After the Impure Massacre, the city was renamed Masshiro and fell under Sadire control.

During the demon wars, the city of Masshiro was used as a base of operations for the warlord Veleru Hawk whose mastery of military tactics helped lead the tieflings to victory. After the second demon war, warlord Hawk took Masshiro as his own seat of rule, and it has steadily grown in popularity and population ever since.

Description

Solis (soul-iss) was founded by the family of Solis Ro, son of King Pelus the Peacekeeper. The region was originally settled by those loyal to the Church of the Sun and the Order of Horan. The towns that developed in the area provided assistance to the Order to help preserve the bodies of Ilius and Horan.

The lands of Solis are made up of the Emerald Forest covering much of the heartland, rolling green hills, the Astral Mountains to the east and the Danire River running through the heart of the country.

Since the Reunification War, Solis has become a shadow of its former glory. The Lich Lord Razel now controls the region after King Falagor Astolum II disappeared at the end of the war.

Life & Society

The people of Solis are a deeply protective people due to their founding as a nation of knights and paladins. The kingdom is very aggressive and combative in its effort to maintain its territory and expand with its ever-growing population. Part of the people's deep-seated religious beliefs is their hatred of the Church of the Moon. The people of Solis are also very set in their ways and bullish in their views, unwilling to change or waiver from their teachings.

Chivalry and honor are also key elements in the societal makeup of the former kingdom. The people actively strive to promote honor and chivalry throughout the region to both local and visitors alike, which helps maintain the outward appearance of their former glory. The Ilium Empire does nothing to stop this since they feel it more or less keeps the people in line, but the Lich Lord Razel is careful to keep an eye on the people as such things can often lead to revolt.

Regional History

During the Age of Night, the area was only sparsely populated. Due to their distance from the major powers of the time, the communities of the Emerald Forest were left to their own devices. The major community during the Age of Night was the city Bend, nestled at the foot of the Astral Mountains. Bend began as a mining town, shipping minerals and precious gems via the Danire River. Bend found its place in history as the place of Horan the Solar's birth. When Horan came of age, he gathered the Army of Light outside of the Emerald Forest before marching on Ilium and ending the Night Reign.

During the Age of Heroes, the region rapidly began to expand in population due to the savior Horan. His death at the hands of his father changed his status to sainthood by the Church of the Sun, and his place of birth became a holy site. People from all over flocked to the site of the Solar's birth. Horan was enormously popular because of his deeds, and many places in the region have become shrines devoted to his memory. The region prospered greatly from Horan's heroics, and due to the region's somewhat remote location, it would remain largely unscathed during the First and Second Dragon Wars. It was not until the time of Pelus the Peacekeeper and his family that the region would once again become the center of attention.

The beings known as the Shan'ree arose from the Wyrms of Autumn and Winter and began to gather large armies and bands of mercenaries to terrorize the countryside. The established kingdoms of the time were able to hold their own against such threats but the solitary communities of the Emerald Forest did not fair nearly as well. With no government or organized military, they quickly fell to the forces of the Shan'ree. It was not until Solis Ro, the prodigal son of Pelus, arrived in the region with his band of knights that the people of the Emerald Forest were saved from the dark forces of the Shades. After the death of Solis Ro at the end of the Crusader War, his son Falagor Ro gathered the communities under his family's banner and formed the Kingdom of Solis and Bend became Solis City.

The region would know peace for most of its existence, although they certainly had their share of problems. Several civil wars enveloped the kingdom over the years, most prominently the Destiny Wars that occurred in the later years just before the rise of Ilius. The Destiny Knights came into existence during these wars and proved to be a shining beacon of hope that led the kingdom to salvation until the kingdom's fall at the hands of the Ilium Empire.

Major Geographical Sites

Tomb of the Fallen Sky

The Tomb of the Fallen Sky is the resting place of Ilius and Horan. The tomb is located to the south of the city of Hope. The structure is ten stories tall, with more than fifteen levels underground. The massive tomb holds the remains of Horan deep underground along with the empty tomb of Ilius. The Tomb of the Fallen Sky was patrolled by the Order of Horan until Fao Min broke into the tomb and raised Ilius from the dead. It is now home to a vast array of dangerous creatures brought into being by Ilius.

Cliffs of Ten Souls

The Cliffs of Ten Souls are located about 40 miles west of Vaundmor along the Astral Mountains. The cliffs rise straight up from the Danire river, reaching heights of much as 500 feet. The work of Angelous Richaarico and his family line of sculptors can be found here. The cliff has been sculpted to reflect the faces of prominent rulers of the Kingdom. Currently, the cliffs hold the visages of 8 former kings, and myth states that should the cliffs ever hold 10 sculptures, it would mark the end of the kingdom.

Emerald Pass

The Emerald Pass is a stretch of road that begins at the base of the Astral Mountains and heads deep within the mountains. The name of the pass comes from a cave that was found along the path. The cave held a large cache of emeralds. The site is now heavily mined by the people under the supervision of the Empire.

Vaundmor, Former Capital (pop. 274,080)

Founded: 2101 ab

Solis City was renamed Vaundmor by Razel after its fall to the Ilium Empire. The city began as a mining town during the Age of Night, extracting emeralds from the Astral Mountains. The buildings of Vaundmor represent some of the oldest and grandest dwarven architecture in the region. Nestled within the Astral Mountains, the city is both part of the mountain and the surrounding foothills. This natural divide makes up the two sectors of the city, the white and green sector.

The white sector is located at the foot of the mountain and has a 40-foot high, 20-foot thick semi-circular granite wall surrounding it. The wall is divided into 200-foot sections with each section containing a watchtower and catapult. Within the white sector are the markets and residences for merchants and commoners.

The green sector is built into the face of the mountain itself. It is made up of six levels with each level reflecting the level of nobility that lives there. The exception to this architectural design is the Chamber of the Crown. This six-story structure is at the center point of all six levels with entry points at each level. The highest level holds the Emerald Throne and Razel's residence. Each level has a smaller version of the great wall surrounding the white sector, although instead of catapults, the sections have trebuchets spaced every 200 feet.

Chapter 7: Organizations

Just as there are several nations in the lands of Falamar, there are multitudes of organizations that operate through the known lands. Some of those organizations work towards the betterment of the people, while others strive to increase their own power.

This chapter gives a brief overview of the history, goals and hierarchy of these organizations. In addition, some prominent members of these organizations are shown with their motivations.

- ◆ Dawn Watch: The Dawn Watch is a resistance movement in the Ro region that works to overthrow Imperial control. Made up of Ro nobles, mercenaries and anyone willing to fight against the Empire, the Dawn Watch is quickly growing into a powerful group.
- ◆ Dragon Riders: Since the Dragon Wars of the 3rd Age, the Dragon Riders have been the protectors of the Cushani Dominion. Though few in number, they have proven to be a highly effective group. With the recent spread of civil war through the Dominion, the Dragon Riders have also become divided.
- ◆ League of Circle Dancers: As the oldest known organization, the League of Circle Dancers has survived by remaining neutral as a group in political affairs, providing entertainment for the public and having some of the best swordsmen in the world among their ranks.
- ◆ Order of Heaven: To enforce the rule of the Empire throughout the vast regions, Ilius created the Order of Heaven. These Heaven Knights move through the Empire, judging and punishing those who dare to act against the Empire's laws.
- ◆ Red Sea Consortium: Among the known trading companies that operate in the Red Sea, none are more well-known and feared than the Red Sea Consortium. With cunning merchants and a well-equipped fleet of ships, the Consortium rules the seas.
- ◆ Sanguine Order: Along with the birth of the kingdom of Aiyia came the creation of the Sanguine Order. The order is made up of vampire knights who swear fealty to their house and kingdom. In a land rich in political intrigue, the order is there to keep the cutthroat dealings from turning into war.
- ◆ Viridian Order: Once the pinnacle of justice and faith, the Viridian Order were mounted knights in shining armor. Since the Reunification War, they have fallen from their lofty perch in the former kingdom of Solis and now struggle to regroup.
- ◆ Void Society: The Void Society was created during the first Night Reign as a group of scholars and necromancers who researched the secrets of death and immortality. When the Nullmandor were cursed and driven out, the Void was disbanded. Many years later, under the direction of new leadership, the Void Society has returned to its dark and secret ways.

Dawn Watch

The Dawn Watch began as a resistance movement against the Ilium Empire shortly after the fall of the kingdom of Ro. Those nobles who survived and had not turned traitor used their money and influence to form the Dawn Watch. Many of the first members were Dragon Knights and militia that survived the war, but over time, it has built up a strong following of other professions, allowing the Dawn Watch to carry out a near endless variety of missions.

The goal of the Dawn Watch is to restore to the throne of the Kingdom of Ro a noble of the bloodline of Ro. This task has proven difficult, however, as many of the noble houses turned traitor to the crown after the fall of the kingdom to Aiyia. And the Ilium Empire.

Dawn Watch Lore

History DC 15: The Dawn Watch has a multitude of spies and assassins working for them in many of the traitorous noble houses of Ro.

History DC 20: Several Destiny Knights are also known to work with the Dawn Watch, and in return, they receive support from the Dawn Watch for their homeland of Solis.

History DC 25: The Dawn Watch is secretly run by another figure of noble Ro blood. Only Oldguart and Cecil know the identity of the unknown noble.

Organization

The Dawn Watch is a highly organized resistance that operates in distinct groups: managing logistics, handling money, smuggling supplies and gathering of information. They also have resistance cells that carry out missions using the information gathered by other groups.

Founded: The Dawn Watch was founded in 2969 ab at the end of the Reunification War by displaced nobles and dragon knights of Ro.

Leadership: The Dawn Watch is run by two individuals, Merchant Lord Vash Oldguart and High Priest Cecil Soloc.

Headquarters: The primary headquarters of the Dawn Watch is the port city of Zeal where Oldguart manages the logistics of the Dawn Watch.

Hierarchy: The Dawn Watch is broken down into two groups, each led by one of the founders of the watch. Lord Oldguart leads the logistics side of the Dawn Watch, using his vast connections as a merchant lord to gather and pass along information, smuggle people, supplies and weapons where they are needed and handle the funds needed for bribery and paying members and adventure companies.

The second and larger group is comprised of the individual resistance cells located throughout the Ro region. Led by Cecil Soloc, the cells operate independently and without knowledge of the other cells. This is necessary for their protection. The only means of communication is through individuals called Sunrays, couriers highly trained to resist torture and interrogation.

Members: The Dawn Watch accepts anyone who has the desire to remove the Empire from the lands of Ro. Most people associated with the Dawn Watch are actually sympathizers, passing along information that they have learned during the course of their every day lives.

Those who have joined the Dawn Watch are more specialized in a field, such as combat or espionage. Many of the members are former nobles, dragon knights and even some former members of thieving guilds that have been stamped out by the empire. All of them work together in hopes of overthrowing the empire.

Several adventuring companies are also known to work with the Dawn Watch. Those adventuring companies take on high-risk assignments passed on to them by Sunrays. Such missions include theft, destruction and assassinations.

Encounter Group

The Dawn Watch operates in cells comprised of a wide variety of individuals in order to provide the greatest likelihood that they can handle any situation.

Level 9 Encounter (XP 1,950)

- ◆ 2 Human Destiny Knights (Level 8 soldier)
- ◆ 1 Half-Elf Judge (Level 8 leader)
- ◆ 2 Elven Circle Dancers (Level 7 skirmishers)
- ◆ 1 Eladrin Summoner (Level 7 controller)

Prominent Members

Of the warriors, spies and knights of the Dawn Watch, several members stand out.

Lord Vash Oldguart (male half-elf wizard)

Lord Vash Oldguart is a middle-aged half elf who has made his living as a merchant. He has lived primarily in the city of Zeal, working for various noble houses that needed shipments to the free cities and Iso'Latarin.

Since the rebirth of the Night Reign, Lord Oldguart has lost much of his political power due to the loss of the crown and many of the noble houses. His wife and two children were killed in 2971 during a Blood Knight raid on his mansion.

Currently, Lord Oldguart works as a logistics master for the Dawn Watch. He helps the organization move in and out of the region using his vast network of people, wagons, caravans and ships.

Priest Cecil Soloc (male human cleric)

Cecil was an orphan for much of his childhood until he was picked up by the cushani Bagheri and began the life of an adventurer as a cleric.

With the rise of the Night Reign, Cecil has grown into a man who possesses human determination and cushani fierceness. Though he no longer travels with his old friend, he knows that the old cushani would be proud of his achievements.

Cecil Soloc Tactics

Cecil prefers to lead his troops into battle from the back line, using his extensive options of ranged attacks. He is quick to help his allies with Sunbolt if they are having trouble hitting opponents and will use Healing Presence as often as needed to keep his allies in the fight.

Dragon Riders

The Dragon Riders of the Cushmani were formed during the Dragon Wars of the Third Age, the war between the metallic and chromatic dragons. The metallic dragons gifted the Cushmani with the ability to use magic in exchange for Cushmani young to be raised and bred as Dragon Riders. These riders would provide the dragons the help they needed to defeat the dragonborn of the chromatic dragons. The pact was a success, and the dragon riders took to the skies during the second dragon war and helped the metallic dragons win. At the end of the war, the dragon riders settled in the Dominion to serve as guardians of the Cushmani and gatekeepers to the dragon lands of the west.

Since the dragon wars, Dragon Rider numbers have remained small but powerful. The Cushmani view the riders as holy warriors and dragons as their divine saviors. This attitude led to the foundation of a religion within the Dominion that focused on worshipping the Holy Wyrms instead of the Sun and the Moon.

Though they have enjoyed many years of relative peace, the dragon riders have now found themselves on the brink of extinction due to the machinations of the ruling tribe, the Firestorm. By refusing to follow the sadistic orders of the First Ezadi, the dragon riders have driven the Dominion into civil war over the question of what matters most, loyalty to queen or loyalty to justice.

Dragon Rider Lore

History DC 15: The Dragon Riders are bonded at birth to their dragon counterparts and share the dragon's strength and lifespan.

History DC 20: Many of the Dragon Riders perished at the opening of the civil war when Jarl Firestorm created a dracolich to serve as his mount.

History DC 25: Much to their confusion, during recent seasons, the Dragon Riders have found non-Cushmani being bonded to dragons outside of the Dominion much to their confusion. The riders have made no official stance on the occurrence; however, the Firestorm tribe has officially denounced it as rumor and that no such thing could happen.

History DC 30: The Dragon Riders recently accepted a non-Cushmani rider into their ranks. The highly unusual decision was made after a passionate call to arms made by the rider against the tyranny of the Firestorm tribe.

Organization

The Dragon Riders are a loose collection of riders who have been bonded to a dragon in service to the Dominion and dragonkind. They have no official organization other than their loyalty to the First Ezadi of the Dominion and metallic dragons in need of help.

Founded: The Dragon Riders were created in 1323 ab after the first dragon war by the ancient gold dragon Halifax, the leader of metallic dragons during the war.

Leadership: None, though unofficially, Hallis Second Born and his silver dragon Catheloc are consulted in matters of leadership in the conclave.

Headquarters: The Dragon Riders are headquartered at the Sun Cliffs, located near the Dominion capital of Zalthiris.

Hierarchy: The Dragon Riders have no official structure within the organization, preferring to work as equals. When decisions must be made, all dragon riders are called together to form a conclave to make decisions affecting the riders as a whole.

When disagreements occur, the two sides choose a champion for the Test of Claw and Wing. The two dragon riders and their dragons take to the skies over the Sun Cliffs where they do battle until one side yields. The battles are typically epic in nature as the rider and dragon unleash their full fighting capabilities against one another. The victor of the duel wins the argument between the two sides and the matter is considered forever settled.

Members: The Dragon Riders are small in number due to the unique nature of their membership. Cushmani are chosen at birth to be riders based on the strength of their lineage and astrological signs. Should a Cushmani cub meet the requirements, they are then matched with a newly hatched wyrm of a metallic dragon to go through the Bonding Ritual, which is performed by a current dragon rider.

Since metallic dragon wyrmlings are rare, only a few Cushmani every generation are chosen to be dragon riders. Those who are chosen are revered in Cushmani society.

Encounter Group

The Dragon Riders are normally forced to work alone due to their small numbers. This typically does not bother the dragon rider, however, since the pair of rider and dragon tends to have sufficient power to handle most situations.

Level 23 Encounter (XP 24,300)

- ◆ 1 Elder Silver Dragon (Level 21 solo soldier)
- ◆ 1 Cushani Rider (Level 22 skirmisher)

Prominent Member

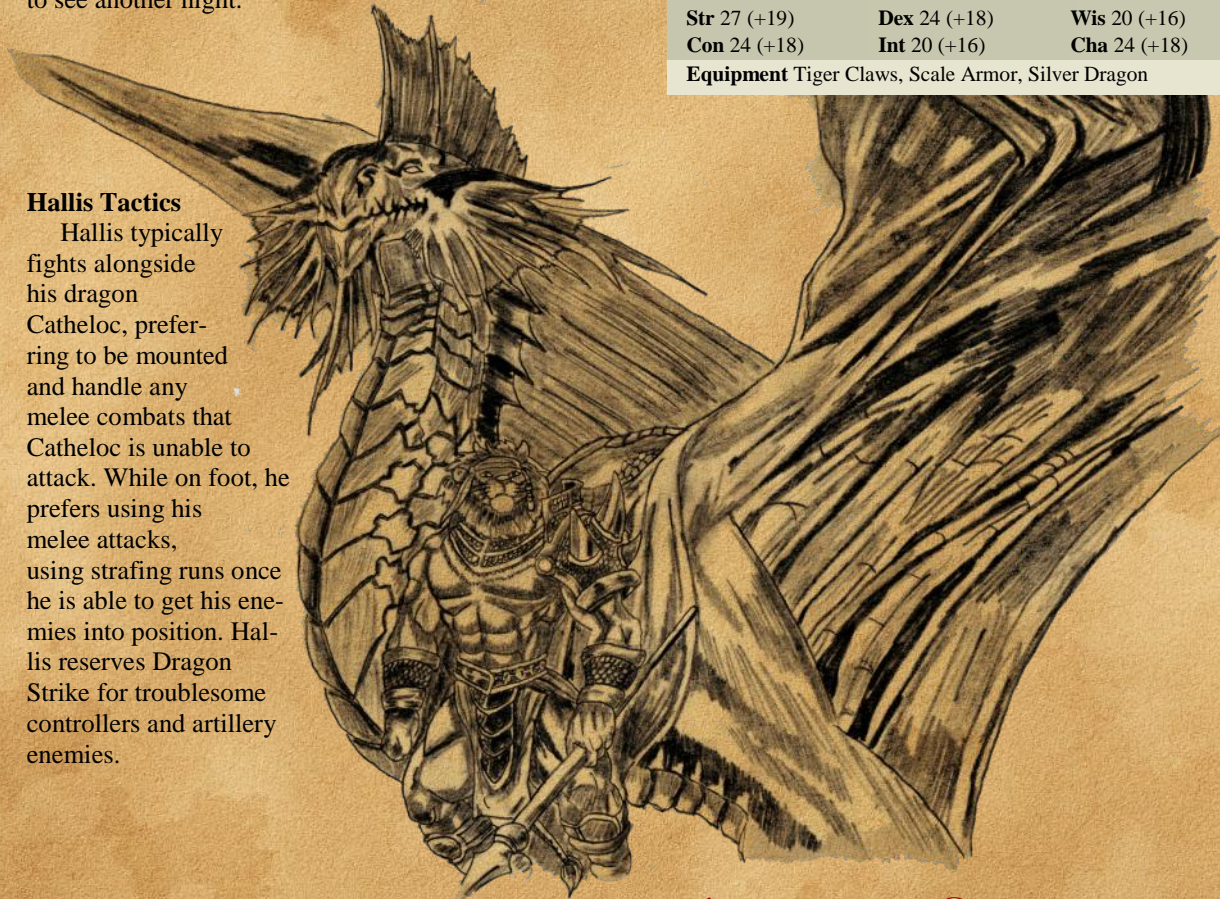

The Dragon Riders are few but powerful figures that defend the dominion from those who would see it crumble.

Hallis Second Born, Zadri of Catheloc (male cushani paladin)

Hallis, Second born and Zadri of Catheloc is one of the oldest dragon riders in the dominion. Well past 300 years of age, Hallis is the longest lived cushani in history. The old cushani is a kind and thoughtful since time has tempered the cushani temper within him. In addition, he has a profound understanding of the world and the ability to make good decisions based on his years of experience. Few have mistaken his relaxed nature as a sign of weakness, however, since those who have rarely live to see another night.

Hallis Tactics

Hallis typically fights alongside his dragon Catheloc, preferring to be mounted and handle any melee combats that Catheloc is unable to attack. While on foot, he prefers using his melee attacks, using strafing runs once he is able to get his enemies into position. Hallis reserves Dragon Strike for troublesome controllers and artillery enemies.

League of Circle Dancers

The League of Circle Dancers is an organization whose purpose is to promote and maintain the history and honor of circle dancing. Circle Dancing began with Horan the Solar, son of Ilius who learned this style of fighting for the Summer Wyrn during his crusade to end his father's rule. His style of dancing spread throughout the lands and evolved into multiple other styles as well as the preferred means of honor dueling between rivals and armies.

League of Circle Dancers Lore

History DC 15: The League Council is made up of circle dancers who have retired. The council members are all dancers who have won the grand tournament at least once.

History DC 20: The League of Circle Dancers is neutral in the politics of the Empire and other nations. This neutrality helps maintain the integrity of the circle dance.

History DC 25: Each member of the league is expected to defend the league against outside influence and aggressors. Should the league go to war with another faction, the league will draft its members into a fighting force.

History DC 30: The league has influence over the Council of Gateway. This influence helps ensure the stability of the league at its home.

Organization

The league is structured into multiple sections or circles. Each circle is designed to help the league as a whole, from training new dancers to running the grand tournament. The primary focus of the League is to maintain the history of circle dancing and to help the style flourish throughout the known lands.

The five circles of the League are run by the five council members. Those circles are training, tournaments, logistics, history and form mastery.

The training circle helps new members develop their fighting styles as well as introduce them to different styles of circle dancing. The tournament circle runs the grand tournament of dancers every two years to find the greatest circle dancer in all the land. The logistics circle maintains the paperwork, charter and money for the league. The history circle helps ensure the accuracy of the history of circle dancing and maintains current records of tournament standings. The form mastery circle is in charge of reviewing new styles that have been developed for possible adoption by the League.

Founded: Founded in 1010 ab after the fall of the first Night Reign.

Leadership: The League is run by the League Council comprised of five retired circle dancers.

Headquarters: The League is headquartered in Gateway.

Hierarchy: The League of Circle Dancers is structured much like a commercial company. The Council oversees the operations of the League, ensuring that everything runs smoothly and in accordance with its charter. Each council member runs one of the circles with the League.

Under the council members, are the regular members, followed by the initiates who seek to one day become circle dancers. In addition to the actual dancers are a variety of support staff members who help maintain the coliseum as well as the League offices.

Members: Membership in the league is reserved for those people who have succeeded in learning the circle dance fighting style. Those dancers who choose to join the League are brought in as bronze members and are expected to perform only the basic functions as a league member.

Those members who have been with the League faithfully for 10 years achieve silver status. They are expected to actively promote the league as high-profile members.

Gold dancers are regular members of the League who have been apart of the League for at least twenty years. As the highest ranked regular members, these gold dancers are expected to help other dancers reach their maximum potential and stay true to the League.

Encounter Group

Circle Dancers rarely travel together since they are generally incorporated into other armies and mercenary companies.

Level 13 Encounter (XP 4,075)

- ◆ 1 Elf Circle Dancer (Level 13 skirmisher)
- ◆ 1 Dragonborn Fighter (Level 13 soldier)
- ◆ 1 Cushani Summoner (Level 13 controller)
- ◆ 1 Human Cleric (Level 13 controller)
- ◆ 5 Human Squires (Level 12 minion)

Prominent Members

The League of Circle Dancers has some of the most prized warriors in the known lands within their ranks. Though these warriors typically serve a particular region or kingdom, they still support the League in matters of the circle dance.

Old Man Warren (male tiefling circle dancer)

Old Man Warren is a venerable tiefling who has long been recognized as one of the most powerful circle dancers in the League. A five-time champion of the grand tournament, Warren now serves as the weapons master and trainer for the elite circle dancers of the League. Though he is gruff, blunt and crude, all circle dancers of the League pay attention when he speaks.

Siladine Lithmani (female eladrin circle dancer)

Goresh (male cushani circle dancer)

Goresh is the previous fire style champion of the grand tournament, and he is sour about the loss he was handed by a water style circle dancer. Goresh has left the league in personal disgrace and has headed back to the dominion in an effort to overcome the shame he feels by renewing his connection with the fire style.

Goresh Tactics

Goresh typically will open a fight with his predator's roar to gain the upper hand and follow up with his red dragon strike to try and end the fight early. When forced into a prolonged fight, Goresh will use his twin dragon often to keep his hit points up with golden empowerment. When his blue dragon strike recharges, he will concentrate on a single foe as much as possible with his attacks.

Order of Heaven

The Order of Heaven is comprised of the elite knights of the Ilium Empire. Under the direction of the Emperor, the Heaven Knights are the supreme authority throughout the Empire. They are tasked with acting as judges and executioners, which ensures the stability of the Empire, usually by whatever means necessary. No other lord or seneschal has the power to command the Heaven Knights; they may only obey.

Heaven Knight Lore

History DC 15: The Order of Heaven was established during the Reunification War as a collection of elite knights charged with combating the Xionaires of Helvada and the Viridian Order of Solis.

History DC 20: The higher echelon of the order is known for commanding the dreaded Bone Towers that travel the Empire.

History DC 25: Heaven Knights are believed to perform ritual sacrifices to give themselves power which is manifested through bloodstones embedded in their armor.

History DC 30: Each Heaven Knight carries a bone pendant created by Ilius. This pendant allows the Betrayer to know everything that the Heaven Knights see, which allows the Emperor to keep his eyes on his empire.

Organization

The structure of the Order of Heaven is loose. Deeds and actions garner more power than time in service. Those Heaven Knights who stay active and accomplish the goals and quests of the Empire gain more freedom to do as they please and the tools to wield more authority across the Empire.

Founded: Founded in 2958 ab during the Reunification War by Ilius to serve as elite soldiers for his imperial army.

Leadership: The order is under the direct command of Ilius the Betrayer and follows the orders of no one else.

Headquarters: The Heaven Knights are headquartered out of Lina where they train new knights.

Hierarchy: The Heaven Knights serve only the Emperor of Ilium. Under their leader, the knights operate independently of one another with no established hierarchy. The knights do, however, defer to those knights who have had achievements acknowledged by the empire. This deeds-based system allows knights to acquire power and followers, increasing their station compared to their fellow knights. Those knights who have achieved the upper levels of acknowledgement typically have vast amounts of power and leeway in their activities. In addition, they are known to command the dreaded Bone Towers to enforce the laws of the empire.

Those knights without access to a Bone Tower typically travel in groups by horseback, constantly moving from one city to the next.

Members: The Order of Heaven has steadily grown in number since the Reunification War. Though some of the original heaven knights were killed during the war, those who have survived effectively rule the empire in the name of the emperor.

New recruits are selected from towns and cities across the empire by heaven knights, typically young men who can be sculpted into the ideal knight. These new recruits are taken to the Order's headquarters in Lina to begin their training, which typically lasts several years and includes martial training and ritual training, as well as mental conditioning to ensure loyalty.

Due to their violent occupation, Heaven Knights are fond of moving in groups. Undead minions and servants can also commonly be found in the company of Heaven Knights. However, even though they are a small in number, most people fear the knights due to their absolute loyalty to the Empire and their heavy-handedness in enforcing the laws of the Empire.

Encounter Group

The Heaven Knights travel in groups, using undead servants do much of the grunt work while the knights focus on high profile targets.

- ◆ 1 Heaven Knight (Level 23 elite soldier)
- ◆ 2 Breath Zombies (Level 23 brutes)
- ◆ 5 Ghouls (Level 23 minion)

Prominent Members

Since the Order of Heaven places more emphasis on individuals rather than groups, some individuals are more prominently known than others.

Sir Drack Thrain (male human heaven knight)

Sir Drack Thrain is a highly regarded heaven knight who is typically known to inhabit the former region of old Helvada with Slyhin, his Bone Tower. Sir Thrain's time is mostly occupied with overseeing the handling of Helvadian slaves and crushing pockets of Xionaire resistance.

Some heaven knights however, believe that Sir Thrain has grown soft by showing too much respect to the slaves he oversees. The veteran heaven knight however, knows better than to underestimate the Helvadian people's determination after having witness the heroic stand of the 9th legion during the Reunification War.

Sir Rayir Iskwar (male tiefling heaven knight)

Sir Iskwar is a prominent heaven knight in the Ro region, ensuring that the seneschal of the region acts in compliance with the law of the empire. As a tiefling, he has turned his back on his people's new direction and has instead embraced his heritage of demon blood. His cruel and vicious nature is well known to the people of Ro.

Red Sea Consortium

The Red Sea Consortium is a trading company located in the Red Sea area and surrounding regions. The consortium quickly rose to the top of the trading world with its ruthless tactics in naval warfare, its large navy and willingness to trade in any market. With a firm grasp of trade routes throughout the Red Sea, the Consortium is everywhere the people and the market need them to be.

Red Sea Consortium Lore

History DC 15: The consortium's most profitable venture is in the slave trade which it conducts heavily with the Ilium Empire and the kingdom of Aiyia.

History DC 20: The Oswald family is rumored to have a pact with devils, which gives them extended life and protection against those who would threaten the consortium.

History DC 25: A more secret trade for the consortium is in creatures ready for sacrifice for the empire, specifically for the Heaven Knights who use the sacrifices to bolster their power.

History DC 30: The founder of the Consortium is actually a devil in disguise, using the consortium to spread his evil influence across the Red Sea.

Organization

The Red Sea Consortium is a rigidly organized trading company run by the Oswald family. The Oswald family looks at the end result rather than the procedure used to achieve the final result. This has led to many of the ship captains using whatever means necessary to accomplish their job, including theft, piracy and murder. This reputation of "anything goes" has led to many trading companies taking up arms against the consortium, though each has failed to break the foundation of the company due to its heavily armed navy and ruthless tactics.

Founded: The consortium was founded in 2809 AD by the Oswald family of merchants.

Headquarters: The consortium is headquartered in the port city of Lismore.

Hierarchy: The consortium is broken into two groups, its navy and its trade houses. These two groups form the core of the company, allowing it to run efficiently and effectively under the watchful eyes of the Oswald family.

The navy is comprised of over thirty ships, giving the consortium the ability to have a large number of trade ships as well as warships to protect their cargo. The crews of the ships are well paid, helping ensure that bribery is less of a concern.

The trade houses of the consortium are located in port cities across the Red Sea where the consortium moves its cargo. The trade houses, run by a house master, then trades the goods to the people and merchants.

Members: The Red Sea Consortium employs a variety of folk to carry out a wide variety of tasks needed to make the company strong. Within the navy, the consortium will go to great lengths to employ the best sea captains in the region, and pays them handsomely to keep them on retainer. This has led to a very powerful group of sea captains with some of the finest crews in the whole region.

The trade houses, however, focus on people skilled in logistics and mercenary work. Since some goods are highly valuable or their shipment is secretive in nature, they require protection to ensure delivery. The trade houses typically employ a variety of mercenary and adventuring companies to protect their goods. The house master, however, tends to be cautious with this practice, as a group that has little tolerance for shady dealing can cause problems when shepherding a caravan of slaves to a potential buyer.

Encounter Group

A typical group for the red sea consortium consists of several soldiers and sailors aboard a ship. On land, groups tend to be more mixed as they move about town, looking for drink and trouble.

Level 5 Encounter (XP 1,151)

- ◆ 1 Tiefling martial artist (Level 5 skirmisher)
- ◆ 1 Halfling wizard (Level 4 artillery)
- ◆ 3 Cushani mauler (Level 5 brute)
- ◆ 5 Human guards (Level 4 minion)

Prominent Members

The Consortium has many people within the company though some stand above the rest.

Captain Barblos Von Graun (male dragonborn warlord)

Captain Barblos Von Graun is an Aiyian native who has been with the consortium since he was a child. Through his childhood he learned the ways of a sailor and navigating the seas. Now as an adult, Barblos is one of the most respected captains of the consortium fleet. With a keen understanding of naval tactics and powerful ability to rally his men, Barblos and his ship White Raven are one of the most successful crews in the consortium.

Red Sash Pirate Jorgo (male tiefling rogue)

Born to the Oswald family, Jorgo was disowned by the family for acting against the consortium wishes. In a daring escape, Jorgo fled the consortium headquarters with the Nautilus, one of the fastest ships in the fleet.

Renamed Black Swan, Jorgo has taken his ship and moved to the sea where he uses his natural gifts as a sailor to terrorize the consortium through piracy at every chance he gets. His crew, made up of former consortium members and pirates, follow their charismatic leader with great enthusiasm.

Jorgo Oswald Tactics

Jorgo fights with bravado, taunting his opponents at every opportunity. He will open a fight with his full sail attack, knowing he will get another opportunity should he become bloodied. Jorgo then prefers to fight one on one, using his rapier to set up his red sash attack.

Sanguine Order

The Sanguine Order of Aiyia is the noble elite guard of the Aiyia Kingdom made up primarily of Blood Knights. Each vampire lord supports the Sanguine Order and thus has Blood Knights under their command to protect the interests of their house. As bodyguards, honor guards and duelists, the Blood Knights are highly visible and respected in the Aiyia court. In the countryside however, the Blood Knights are the long arm of the lord's law and take pleasure in enforcing it.

During times of war, the Sanguine Order bands together with the royal army, and the Blood Knights assume roles as generals. With centuries of knowledge and experience at its disposal, the royal army of Aiyia is frighteningly efficient and brutal. However, with their experience, many of the Blood Knights are tied to the old ways of warfare and are slow to adapt to new tactics.

The Blood Knights are made up exclusively of vampires, however, other creatures are also found working for them. Thrulls and vampire spawn are commonly found among the knights, serving as pages and squires in hopes of one day becoming a vampires themselves and joining the ranks of the order.

Sanguine Order Lore

History DC 15: Queen Yaneria created the Sanguine Order as a means of keeping order between the vampire houses.

History DC 20: The loyalty of the Blood Knights to the crown has weakened over the last century as the vampire lords have conditioned younger knights to be loyal only to their house.

History DC 25: It is rumored that Yaneria can take control of all the Blood Knights through the power of her vampiric blood.

History DC 30: Several powerful Blood Knights and vampire lords have begun planning to overthrow Yaneria and end the alliance between Aiyia and the Ilium Empire.

Organization

The Sanguine Order is broken down into vampire houses as opposed to acting as one large group of knights. This allows the Blood Knights to cover the majority of the kingdom and protect it from those who would do the queen harm.

Founded: The order was founded in 2108 ab by Queen Yaneria.

Leadership: Individual vampire lords run their units of Blood Knights.

Headquarters: The order has no official headquarters; however, should the order be called together, its base of operations would be out of the capital of Aiyia, Shalforth.

Hierarchy: Most of the organization is informal at a national level with only the Queen as overruler of the Order as its creator. The Order is broken down by the different noble vampire houses with each Blood Knights swearing fealty to that house. Each house will typically have five to twenty Blood Knights, depending on the size of the house.

Below the Blood Knights are the rank and file guards of the house consisting of thrull squires and blood mages who work to become knights, followed by the standard soldiers and support caste for the house.

Members: The Sanguine Order is composed entirely of vampires who have been "promoted" from their thrull squire status into full knighthood. This promotion involves a large ceremony in which either the head blood knight or the ruling vampire lord turns the squire into a vampire who then must perform a ritual killing to consummate his rebirth as a vampire.

The members of the Order are expected to follow the orders and wishes of their vampire lord without question. Only in times of war are the Blood Knights expected to work together, regardless of house. Accidents are known to happen, however, on the battlefield.

Encounter Group

The Sanguine Order typically operates as individuals or in small groups. When operating in groups, the Order typically has several skirmishers and soldiers to handle the grunt work, allowing the knights to focus on dangerous opponents or obstacles. Blood mages help contain opponents.

Level 16 Encounter (XP 7,000)

- ◆ 3 Thrull Squires (Level 14 soldier)
- ◆ 1 Blood Mage (Level 15 artillery)

Prominent Members

Of the order, several knights have set themselves apart from the others.

Sir Eldor Von Lippсор (male human vampire)

Sir Eldor Von Lippсор is the head blood knight for the Lippсор house under Lord Tarksha Lippсор. As one of the more powerful noble vampires, Eldor has become famous for his skill in the circle dance. When outside the political arena, the blood knight is known as a quiet person who generally keeps his thoughts to himself and rarely gives his own opinion in matters.

Lady Lucille Bucenburg (female human vampire)

Lady Lucille Bucenburg is the first ordained Blood Knight in Aiyia and the personal knight for Queen Yaneria. At over 800 years of age, Lady Bucenburg has trained under the queen to advance her sword skills to near unimaginable heights. Though she has yet to best the queen, no other Blood Knight has been able to defeat Lady Bucenburg in single combat.

Cold, calculating and fanatically loyal to the queen, Lady Bucenburg is always found at the side of the queen and ready to follow any order.

Viridian Order

The Viridian Order is an organization of knights from the former kingdom of Solis. Representing loyalty, law, faith and purity, the Order was the supreme fighting force for the Emerald Kingdom. Their skill in cavalry was unmatched, and their loyalty to the crown was unshakable.

When the Blood Culling swept across the land, members of the Viridian Order proved their status as elite knights by holding back the advancing Ilium Empire and its Heaven Knights. When the kingdom eventually fell due to betrayal, the Order was disbanded by Imperial decree, and those who resisted were arrested and executed by the Empire. Those who managed to escape went into hiding with the goals of carrying on the traditions of the Order and bringing about the restoration of the Emerald Kingdom.

Viridian Order Lore

History DC 15: The Viridian Order is a knightly order of paladins and destiny knights. Most members of the Order were killed during the Reunification War. Those who survived are in hiding in the Solis Region.

History DC 20: The leader of the Viridian Order was a destiny knight named Winston Pureheart. Pureheart disappeared during the Reunification War along with the King.

History DC 25: Those knights who survived have relocated to the Plains of Sorrow in the ruins of Balsamar. At the ruins the surviving knights train a new generation of knights and work with the Dawn Watch from Ro.

History DC 30: Pureheart and the King did not die during the Reunification War. Instead, they found themselves trapped in Vorgard where they have been ever since.

Organization

Before the Reunification War, the Viridian Order was a branch of the Emerald Army, leading the cavalry to devastating effect. The knights operated normally in companies (1,000 knights), columns (100 knights) and cohorts (10 knights). Only twice has the order banded together to form a legion of 5,000, during their initial rise in the first Destiny War and in their final battle during the Reunification War.

Since the fall of the Emerald Kingdom, the Viridian Order operates in cohorts due to their small numbers.

Founded: The Viridian Order was founded in 1492 ab during the first Destiny War in Solis. The Order existed as a branch of the Emerald Army up until 2972 when the Order was officially disbanded by the Ilium Empire.

Leadership: The Viridian Order is currently run by a council of three knights, veterans of the Reunification War.

Headquarters: The Order currently makes its headquarters in the Plains of Sorrow on the southwest border of Solis.

Hierarchy: Before the Reunification War, the Viridian Order was a highly structured order that answered to the Emerald King. The Order was led by a Council of Knights with a head council member referred to as the ArchPaladin.

Since the Reunification War, the Order is led by a council of three knights who govern different aspects of the Order. Most knights focus on training new recruits to help bolster their numbers.

Members: The Order is comprised of highly trained and highly devoted knights. Only those who demonstrate faith in the Sun, purity of soul and determination to rid Solis of the empire are admitted into the order.

Even though new members are trained knights, the Order puts new recruits through a rigorous regimen of training involving their tactics and style of mounted combat.

Encounter Group

The Viridian Order prefers to ride as a cohort for advantage in numbers. The squires typically hold the outer flanks of the line while the seasoned veterans hold the center. The leaders provide support to the knights and squires.

Level 16 Encounter (XP 7,000)

- ◆ 4 Destiny Knights (Level 15 soldier)
- ◆ 1 Cushani Judge (Level 14 leader)
- ◆ 4 Human Squires (Level 15 minion)

Prominent Members

The Viridian Order, though a shadow of its former self, still has several prominent members:

Sir Torash Aughund (male human paladin)

Sir Augung is the defacto leader of the new Viridian Order, running operations from its base of operations in the Plains of Sorrow. Torash is a grizzled middle-aged man and a veteran of the Reunification War. He knows that his age and old war wounds prevent him from going in to combat, and it depresses him greatly.

Instead, Sir Aughund focuses on training new recruits to ensure that they are ready for the battles to come. His belief in acting only when the time becomes right is a concern to some of the older knights who wish to act now instead of later.

Sir Lance Pureheart (male human destiny knight)

Lance Pureheart, who survived the Reunification War, is the son of Winston Pureheart. Before the war, Lance served as part of a newly-created aerial cavalry for the Viridian Order. The unit proved highly successful during the war but suffered terrible losses by the end of the war due to lack of field experience.

Since the war and the loss of his father, Lance works quietly within the Solis region to pass information to the Order so that the council can stay informed of the actions of the Empire.

Once a jovial young man, Lance has become bitter and reserved since the fall of the Emerald Kingdom. The loss of his father hit him particularly hard, and he hopes to one day learn the fate of his long-lost father.

Void Society

The Void Society is a secret organization that seeks to convert the people of the world into the undead, which they believe to be the perfect state of being. The society continually seeks out old tomes and rituals in their never ending quest to find the perfect state of being.

The society was started by the Nullmandor Harken the Pure who sought to rebuild the power of his ancestors and bring the world under his control as undead slaves. The Nullmandor was convinced that in order to fulfill his goal of ruling the world, he must become undead himself. Through ritual, he turned himself into a lich, which he found greatly increased his necromantic powers. This new-founded power served only to further drive him to find the perfect undead state.

Few people know of the Void Society, and those who have heard of it typically associate them with the Church of the Moon. The society encourages this lie since it allows them to move more freely through church-controlled lands.

Void Society Lore

History DC 15: The society has many clerics of the moon within its ranks who seek a divine answer to the society's goals.

History DC 20: Many Nullmandor halflings have joined the cause of the society which ties to their heritage as necromancers.

History DC 25: The society was created by a Nullmandor as a means of acquiring information he did not have access to and the need to have someone to work for him.

History DC 30: Valamus killed Harken the Pure to take control of the society. Unknown to him, however, Harken's soul attached itself to Valamus when his phylactery was destroyed. He patiently waits for the opportunity to take over Valamus's body and rule the society once more.

Organization

The Void Society works in a network of cells throughout the known lands. This helps the society maintain its secretive nature and protect the other members should a cell be found out. With its goal of achieving the perfect state of being, the society is commonly found investigating ancient ruins for rituals and knowledge on how to reach this perfect state of undead.

Founded: The society was founded in 2471 ab by Harken the Pure.

Headquarters: The headquarters of the society is in Ison.

Hierarchy: Overall, the society is run by the vampire Valamus Winterhaven who uses the society to try to find a means of escaping his vampiric prison. Each leader of a cell is called the Grave Master who oversees the running of their cell, which typically ranges from 5 to 50 members.

Members: The Void Society is extremely selective about who they let into their ranks. The society typically looks for individuals who have a willingness to work with the undead and share their goal of converting the world into the perfect state of being. Necromancers are commonly sought out due their extensive knowledge of rituals. Any Nullmandor found is almost always brought into the Void Society.

Those wishing to join the society must gain sponsorship from a Nullmandor who prepares the individual for the test of faith to ensure their loyalty to the society.

Encounter Group

Most groups of the Void Society that are encountered consist of at least one Nullmandor in command of several undead minions. Depending on their goals, more powerful undead or loyal bodyguards may also be found in their presence.

Prominent Members

The Void Society has several powerful members within its ranks who will do anything to achieve the goals of the society.

Valamus Winterhaven (male vampire summoner)

Valamus Winterhaven was a former destiny knight until he was captured by Sanguine Order during a conflict between the kingdoms of Solis and Aiyia. Turned into a vampire by Queen Yaneria, Valamus hated what he had become and managed to escape the clutches of the vampire nation.

Since his turning, Valamus has strayed far from his religious beliefs. He has taken up studying arcane lore in hopes of finding a way to end his vampire existence and become human once more. His search has driven him mad over the past several hundred years and has led him to the Void Society.

After defeating Harken the Pure, Valamus took control of the society to use its research in hopes of finding away to end his vampiric state. The rest of the society however, is unaware of his true motives.

Jarish the Butcher (male nullmandor halfling)

A halfling who has fully embraced his heritage, Jarish is a master of necromancy and the grave master of a cell located in Hira. Jarish gained his reputation as the Butcher when he murdered 12 common folk who had stumbled onto his cell's location. With their deaths, Jarish rose each one as an undead slave to do his bidding.

Jarish is a cruel master, constantly driving his cell to new heights of necromantic understanding.

Chapter 8: Monster Lore

Monsters. Plagues. Abominations. The world of Falamar is a dangerous place to live. Since the rebirth of the Night Reign, some of the most savage and disturbing creatures have come out from their hiding places to prowl the land once more.

With the world shrouded in darkness, most monsters are neither pleasant nor forgiving. Even the lowly goblin or gnoll is more dark and ruthless than normal. The horrors of the world have inflicted lasting pain to the psyche of all creatures.

Creatures

- ◆ Blood Knight: These vampire nobles are knights of the Sanguine Order in the kingdom of Aiyia. Cunning warriors, they are renowned for their ability to recover from injury.
- ◆ Bone Guard: The living half of the Ilium Empire, the soldiers of the Bone Guard dress in armor with the appearance of bones. Most of the young Bone Guard are no more than young adults who have lived the way of the Empire their whole life.
- ◆ Breath Dragon: Not all dragons become the dracolich upon their deaths. Those dragons of the purest evil may become a dragon infused with the power of the Breath.
- ◆ Breath Zombie: The undead by-product of the Breath. Those creatures unlucky enough to be caught in the maw of the Breath of Ilius are raised shortly after their death and empowered by the Breath.
- ◆ Cushani: Once just feline predators within the Great Forest, the cushani evolved into intelligent and powerful hunters.
- ◆ Heaven Knights: The elite guard of the Ilium Empire, the Heaven Knights enforce imperial law with a ruthless hand. When coupled with the rumors of their ritual sacrifices, the Heaven Knights are universally feared by all.
- ◆ La'ree: These undead creatures excel at blending into society to sow the seeds of destruction. As creations of the all powerful Shan'ree, La'ree work to turn the world into a realm of undead.
- ◆ Nullmandor: An ancient line of necromancers, the nullmandor are creatures that have reawakened from their curse to walk the world once more as masters of the undead.
- ◆ Shadow Elves: Cold and calculating, the shadow elves view the world from the darker side of life. They work to protect their lands and society with brutal efficiency.
- ◆ Shan'ree: Born of the Wyrms of Autumn and Winter, these creatures of shadow are the living symbol of evil and shadows. They seek to enslave the masses to satisfy their desire of a world populated by the undead.
- ◆ Winkar: The darker half of the dwarves, the winkar are a deeply religious race of dwarves who strive to convert the world to the church of the moon.
- ◆ Queen and Lord: The vampire queen Yaneria and the lich lord Razel. Both rule over vast amounts of land. Both hundreds of years old. Both incredibly evil.

Hazards and Diseases

- ◆ The Breath of Ilius: The Breath is the manifestation of all that is evil in the world. Rolling through the land in the appearance of a thick, dark fog, this semi-intelligent mass seeks out living creatures to consume their life force to feed its never ending hunger.
- ◆ Dark Rot: A disease that has begun to spread from the undead, causing a weakening of the body.
- ◆ Reaper Plague: The Reaper plague is a disease created by the Order of Heaven as a tool of fear and a weapon to cull the enemies of the Ilium Empire. Its devastating effects can cripple a man in a short time.

Blood Knight

As the elite of Aiyia, the vampiric knights lead troops into battle in the name of Queen Yaneria. Vicious and cunning, the Blood Knights revel in the slaughter of their opponents. They're known for their resilience and for draining their foes to strengthen themselves.

Blood Knight (template)

"Blood Knight" is a template you can apply to any paragon level humanoid creature. If you are modifying a non-player character, this template works best with circle dancer, fighter, paladin or ranger classes.

Breath Zombie

The undead are common in the lands of Falamar, but none is more terrifying than the Breath Zombie. When the Breath of Ilius kills a creature, its evil and necrotic energy raises the creature as a powerful undead zombie.

Retaining some of their former intelligence, these necrotic empowered undead harness wisps of the Breath itself to consume the life force of their victims. They seek out life to destroy and consume, just like their creator.

Breath Zombie Lore

Religion DC 10: Villagers and townsfolk are the most common Breath zombies since they are the most susceptible to the Breath. Those of hardier body and mind such as adventurers tend to create elite breath zombies which are known to lead lesser undead creatures.

Religion DC 15: Breath zombies have been known to work together to overpower more difficult opponents, using their breath aura to their advantage.

Encounter Group

Breath zombies can commonly be found along with a Breath of Ilius hazard and among other undead creatures such as rotters and ghouls.

Cushani

Powerful feline hunters, the Cushani thrive on hunting their prey. Though some prefer stealth and others brutal open combat, all of them seek the glory of the kill. Tough and intelligent, they tend to rely heavily on instincts while hunting and fighting.

Most warriors are males seeking glory in hopes of gaining a mate while the females take on more leadership roles as is custom in their society.

Cushani Warrior

The standard cushani warriors are young males looking to prove themselves through combat. Their zeal and bloodlust are well known though this tends to shorten the lives of many.

Cushani Lore

Nature DC 15: Males tend to be more savage than their female counterparts in combat.

Nature DC 20: Male cushani are extremely protective of females. Females of other races have even been known to come under the protection of a cushani when they share a close friendship.

Nature DC 25: Magic is rarely used by the cushani people. Due to an ancient curse, many cushani view the practice with suspicion.

Encounter Group

Cushani are normally found in hunting prides consisting mostly or entirely of male cushani. When female cushani are found, they are always leading the pride in coordinated attacks. They prefer to target the weakest opponent as a group first before moving on to tougher opponents.

Shan'ree

As offspring of the Wyrms of Winter and Autumn, the Shan'ree are terrifying undead creatures who strive to enslave the world in darkness. Though they are creatures of the night, they have no loyalty to the Betrayer or his Empire. They would rather see the world crumbled under their fist than allow mere humans to rule the world.

There are two types of Shan'ree, those born of Autumn and those of Winter. The Autumn Shan'ree are cold and calculating creatures, always scheming their next conquest. The Winter Shan'ree however, are cunning, bloodthirsty creatures who prefer to ravage a countryside rather than bend it to its will.

Queen Yaneria Ro

The original vampire. Murderer of Pelus the Peacekeeper and Solis Ro. Queen of Aiyia. Yaneria Ro carries many dreaded titles due to her long unlife, and she holds true to all of them.

Before her turning, Yaneria was the daughter of King Pelus and one of the greatest swordsmen in the known lands. Her unmatched abilities at circle dancing brought the fighting form to new heights and inspired generations of warriors to take up the skill.

After her mind was broken by the Shan'ree King at the end of the Crusader War, Yaneria cast away her former life and began anew in the western lands now known as Aiyia where she rules with absolute authority.

Though her kingdom is allied with the Il-ium Empire, she distrusts the Emperor. She believes it will only be a matter of time before her kingdom falls under the "curiosity" of the Betrayer.

Lord Razel

Once a hero and confidant of Solis Ro, the being now known as Razel is a cruel and wicked lich. Consumed by the need for more power, Razel has spent hundreds of years trying to find the secrets between life and the unlife in hope that he can one day be reunited with his long dead love.

Second only to Ilius in raw magical power, Razel rules the region of Solis with absolute authority. He despises the Empire, however, especially Ilius since he knows that Ilius holds complete control over all creatures undead. Being a lich himself, he is unable to get out from under Ilius' reign and this angers him greatly.

In person, Razel is soft-spoken, cold and calculating in his plans. He is not above using adventurers for his own personal gain, and should Ilius lose power in the process, all the better.

The Breath of Ilius

When Ilius stood upon a beach of blood and called forth the Night Reign, his exhaling breath took on a life of its own as a swirling fog of death. The Breath of Ilius is a predator mist that feeds on living creatures, constantly searching out souls to consume.

The Breath of Ilius can nearly always be found near scenes of death and despair where it grows in power and in turn, empowers undead creatures.

An uncommon form of the Breath is when it becomes a storm, ravaging the countryside in search of life to consume.

Breath of Ilius Level 10 Obstacle XP 500

Found where death and despair are prominent, the Breath of Ilius is the physical manifestation of evil.

Hazard: The Breath of Ilius is a dark violet and black fog that covers 20 contiguous squares and has a speed of 2 squares.

Perception

◆ DC 26: Character notices the Breath

Additional Skills: Arcana, Religion

◆ DC 26: same as for Perception above

◆ DC 30: The character's knowledge provides a +2 bonus to Religion checks to dissipate the Breath of Ilius

Trigger

When a creature enters or begins its turn in or adjacent to a square of Breath of Ilius

Attack

Opportunity Action Melee

Target: A creature that moves adjacent to or begins its turn in the Breath of Ilius

Attack: +13 vs. Fortitude

Hit: 1d10+5 necrotic damage and the target gains ongoing 10 necrotic damage (save ends). If the target is bloodied, the attack deals 2d10+5 necrotic damage and ongoing 5 necrotic damage (save ends).

After Effect: A creature slain by the Breath of Ilius arises as a Breath Zombie of its level at the start of the Breath's turn in 1d4 rounds.

Special: Animates and undead are immune to the effects of the Breath of Ilius. Each round that an undead creature is adjacent or begins its turn in the Breath regains 5 hit points.

Countermeasures

◆ A character can engage in a skill challenge to dissipate the Breath of Ilius. DC 25 Religion or Arcana. Complexity 1 (4 successes before 2 failures). Success: The Breath of Ilius dissipates. Failure: The Breath expands 5 more squares in size. All creatures in the newly effected squares takes 1d10+5 necrotic damage. A new skill challenge can then be started.

The Dark Rot

Thousands of years of have passed since the first undead creature was created during the first Night Reign. Since that time, disease has followed the undead during their expansion across the known realms.

From these undead creatures, the rise of the dark rot began to infect the living. This devastating disease is generally spread through contact with the undead.

Though generally not fatal, the dark rot severely weakens its victims, making them highly susceptible to necrotic energy.

Dark Rot Lore

History DC 15: The dark rot was first discovered during the Unification War of the first Night Reign, and its spread was linked to the tieflings of Naul'Turith.

History DC 20: The disease can commonly be found in areas infested with undead such as zombies and ghouls.

The Reaper Plague

Known as the destroyer of kings, the reaper plague is a plague magically created by the Heaven Knights to enforce the rule of the Ilium Empire.

The disease attacks the body, causing severe skin lesions and bleeding from the eyes and ears. After the initial infection, black veins appear along the skin which pulse slightly along with the victims heartbeat.

At the later stages, the veins cover the body completely before the body begins to decay before the victim's eyes. As their body shuts down, the decay continues until the deceased rises as a breath zombie.

Reaper Plague Lore

History DC 15: The first known use of the plague was against the people of Helvada. Survivors of the Reunification war were infected with the plague and took it back to their people where it spread like wild-fire, killing thousands, including the King.

History DC 20: The common man has little chance of surviving the reaper plague. However, sundrop fruits are known to help slow the effects of the plague for a time.

History DC 25: The plague is created by the sacrifice of diseased children by Heaven Knights who then serve as carriers of the plague, but appear to be immune themselves.

Honor.

Agony.

Love.

Horror.

Once there were heroes.

Once there was light.

But heroes rise and fall.

Betrayal lives forever.

The brightest light casts the deepest shadow.

and the fall from grace is a fast one. Night awakens.

The Betrayer has taken death for his own mantle and rises from the grave, extends his treacherous hand and shrouds the world in endless darkness. A chorus of mourning rises, a tortured cacophony in the wake of his dreaded footsteps. Heroes hide within the shadows of the Moon. Darkness covers the land. The Night Reign has begun.

This 4th Edition Dungeons & Dragons rules supplement contains the tools a Dungeon Master needs to run a D&D campaign in the Night Reign setting. This book includes six new classes, thirty three new paragon paths, five new epic destinies, and over a hundred new feats; everything you need to experience the world of Falamar. The Night Reign Campaign Setting is intended to be used with the following products: D&D 4E Player's Handbook, D&D 4E Dungeon Master's Guide and the D&D 4E Monster Manual.

For use with the 4th Edition

Requires the use of the D&D Player's Handbook, Monster Manual, and Dungeon Master's Guide core rulebooks, available from Wizards of the Coast, Inc.
